Finally, do not be misled by the lowest price. It is poor economy at all times, but especially so in the matter of motor trucks. Buy the best and keep it. Forget the bugaboo of the automobile world, "trade-in". The late Elbert Hubbard said, "Keep your car." "Don't buy a car that was built for trading purposes." "Buy a good one and keep her." He further said there are three things you must keep. "Keep your temper"—"Keep your friends"—"Keep your health", and he added a fourth—"Keep your car."

Crops Not Affected by Moon.

Scientists are now convinced that the moon has no more influence on crops than it has upon the temperature or the amount of rain or the winds or any other weather element. The growth of plants depends upon the amount of food in the soil and in the air that is available for them and upon temperature, light, and moisture. The moon obviously does not affect the character of the soil in any way, neither does it affect the composition of the atmosphere. The only remaining way in which it could influence plant growth, therefore, is by its light. Recent experiments, however, show that full daylight is about 600,000 times brighter than full moonlight, yet when a plant gets 1/100th part of normal daylight it thrives little better than in absolute darkness. If 1/100 part of normal daylight is thus too little to stimulate a plant, it seems quite certain that a 600,000th part can not have any effect at all. It is therefore a mere waste of time to think about the moon in connection with the planting of crops. The moon, say the scientists, has nothing more to do with this than it has to do with the building of fences, the time for killing hogs, or any other of the innumerable things over which it was once supposed to exert a strong influence.—Department of Agriculture.

PLANT NOTES.

Cleaning Up.

The bedding season is over, the year's work is practically finished, the young stock for another year in preparation, and now is the time to clean house. Don't leave a lot of worthless stock scattered around the houses that takes a man's time to water, but what it is desired to save block all up together where it can be watered in a short time, and above all things throw out anything that has passed its usefulness. How often have we seen plants that would never have been of any value left standing in the greenhouses until fall planting; neglected, yet taking more or less room, to be thrown out at last and the houses never thoroughly made ready for the coming crop. Get the plants that need care and attention all together and clean up the other houses. If the stock is grown in benches these will need repairing, and if badly decayed take them down and rebuild. Those that have cement benches are fortunate for they will only need repairs. Throw out all the old soil and clean up under the benches and in all the corners, and throw out any old rotting boards or pieces of crocks, and thus get rid of the vermin that invariably infest greenhouses. After the benches are cleaned out, give them a good, thick coat of whitewash in which sulphur was mixed when the lime was slacking. The advantage of this is too little appreciated by many growers. It costs but little and the prevention from fungus will often amount to a great deal. After the whitewash has died throw a few ashes or a mulch of some kind on the wooden benches to protect them from the hot rays of the sun. Give the inside of the house a good coat of white paint; this should be done at least every other year, for the difference in the amount of light in a clean white house and a dirty one during the dark short days is material, and the increased quality and quantity of stock will more than repay for the expense and labor. Any repairs that the heating system needs should be done at once and the boilers cleaned up ready for fall. Too often the boiler is never thoroughly cleaned out after the last firing and ashes and clinkers left lying around in a moist condition, rusting the boilers. The steam boilers should either be emptied or filled, for if the water is left standing rust will form inside just above the water line and rapidly eat into the iron. These are all necessary details to be looked after at the earliest possible moment.

Ardisia Crenulata.

The seeds of ardisia may be sown at any time during spring, and as it will take until another year to grow plants that will fruit it is not material at which particular time they are sown. The seeds are a little slow in germinating and it is better to sow them in the manner of sowing cyclamen, about half an inch apart. In early summer they should be potted in 2½-inch pots and are better grown in a frame than in the greenhouse. In the fall when brought into the houses they should be again potted in three or four-inch pots and grown in a temperature of 50°. The plants are of a woody nature and grow slowly and should not be potted into too large pots, for it is far better to allow the roots to fill the pots before shifting. The following spring they will bloom, and should then be potted in six-inch pots and given a cool location in the houses. After the fruit has formed and grown to good size the plants should be given a good sunny position that they may take on a bright color by Christmas. If the plants are grown too warm the foliage will be thin and lack the substance and luster which makes them so much admired in the cooler grown plants, and the warmer grown stock gets chilled very easily, when the berries will drop off. The only insect which infests this plant is the brown scale, which, if not destroyed, will cover the plant stem completely. These should be carefully removed and continually guarded against. If there are any old plants that have dropped their lower leaves the top of these can be rooted in a similar manner to rooting rubbers, that is, by cutting into the stem and mossing the cut, and after the roots have appeared in the moss, the top cut off below the moss and potted.

Fancy Leaved Caladiums.

It will soon be found difficult to obtain the quality of flowers necessary to maintain a fine window display, so attractive plants will be required, and the show houses leading from the store or office will need something with bright color to attract attention. The fancy leaved caladiums are beautiful plants for this purpose, and should now be nice plants in four or five-inch pots. Nice plants can be grown in these sizes and they are easily arranged in a bed of green sheet moss and are very attractive. For the young stock now coming on a very light house is an absolute necessity to obtain the highly colored leaves, and almost a full exposure to the rays of the sun. While the plants delight in a moist atmosphere, this must not be obtained by heavy shading, but by frequent syringing and damping down the walks and under the benches. The temperature should be kept warm and close, never dropping below 60 degrees at night, even if a little fire heat is required. They will require copious watering to keep the beautiful leaves in good condition, and considerable feeding to bring the high colors and large, full leaves. Should flower buds form they should be immediately removed, for they will check the growth of the leaves.

Canterbury Bells.

There is always a demand in the spring for something different than the flowers which the buyers have seen all through the winter and many growers have a call for some of the forced perennials. Canterbury bells are grown for this purpose and if well grown find a ready sale. Seeds sown now and grown on in pots, being shifted into larger sizes as may be required, will bloom next spring and help furnish the grower with a variety of stock. They should be grown cool during the early winter, a violet house or one of a similar temperature being about right, and then brought into a warmer house with a temperature of 50° in late winter where they will produce fine blooms for early spring. By bringing a few at a time into the warmer house a succession of bloom may be had.

Gloxinias.

The gloxinias that were started in late winter should now be beginning to flower. After the flower beds have set they can be placed in a little shadier location and the danger of burning the foliage be obviated to a great degree. The plants should be spaced far enough apart that they do not touch and a proper circulation of air procured around the plant. If the flowers are to be used in floral work they should be cut as soon as fully open and placed in water away from draughts, and they will keep very well; these flowers are very fragile and should be handled carefully. If there are any particularly beautiful flowers that it is desired to propagate, the leaves can be rooted in the propagating bench by placing the base of the leaf in the sand to the depth of about an inch. The seedlings should be potted along for later blooming.

Dracaena Indivisa.

The seedlings of Dracæna indivisa should now be taken from the flats and potted in small pots and placed in a good moist location that they may make a good growth before the fall. A palm or fern house or one with similar temperature is the best for the small stock. The four-inch stock that was not disposed of during the spring sales can be either plunged outside or planted in a frame, where they will not demand the close attention necessary in the greenhouse. If planted out they should be potted up early, at least by September 1, when the roots are active and will quickly obtain a foothold in the new soil. They should be heavily shaded for a few days after potting or some loss of the plants may result. Any old plants that have outgrown their usefulness may be propagated, the stems cut up into small pieces and laid in a propagating bed with bottom heat where the eyes will open and young plants quickly form.

THE ROSE.

Extra Help for Spring and Summer.

With so much work ahead of us, both inside and outside of the houses, we often find that extra help is required through the spring and summer, as the work is really increased in every way, and it is poor policy to let the work get ahead of us on account of the extra help it may require temporarily. The regular inside help should be kept inside the houses, and as much care should be used in keeping things shaped up one time as well as another as the plants should never be neglected, just because the call for outside work comes at this time. The young stock should be shifted along as they may require it; never let any of the rose stock become pot-bound, but keep it jumping. Shift all 2½-inch stock to 3½-inch pots and drain all 3½-inch pots carefully. Pot firmly and use a good rich compost for the shift. The 2-inch stock can go into three and later into 4-inch if necessary. Perhaps for some extra early planting (which can be done now) the stock can be taken from 2½-inch pots and this will make room and save potting. Plants that are grafted should be carefully staked when shifted into larger pots and the raffia removed. This is very important. These small stakes will even help support the plants for a while after they are planted in the beds.

The stock plants will require frequent tying, now that they are in such rapid growth; also, careful pinching to prevent too many short stemmed flowers from coming along, and as the ventilators are raised to their full openings often now. The amount of water required will be almost double; also feeding, to keep the stock humping right along. The soil should never be exposed; keep the bed mulched and the mulch stirred, so that the manure will not bake. By watering a bed just as soon as the mulch is applied the manure can be broken up and leveled with the force of the water, which cannot be done if left to dry out for a day or two, which will be a waste of at least a third of the mulch as far as the plant food it contains is concerned.

Very often there are one or more new houses added to the range in the spring, which is often the cause of a setback to the plants, unless this work is taken care of by an extra lot of help, and we have found that to employ enough extra men to keep the new work going along nicely without shortening up the regular range help, has been money spent to the very best advantage. There is only one thing to do these days to keep one's head above water in the rose business and that is to have good stock every day in the year and this can only be done by keeping up with all of the work, taking as much pride in the crop and the work one day as another, looking after the details in April, May, June, etc., as one does in December, January or February. Roses will not grow themselves at any time, and as we are carrying over stock for several years, the stronger we have our plants, by the resting and pruning back season, the safer we will be for the season's crop to follow. We have a house of seven-year-old stock on our place at the present time, that has been a paying house for that many seasons, and at this writing has produced more fine flowers this season than any other previous season, owing principally to extra feeding and also to keeping the plants always tied carefully, allowing a free circulation of air at all times. There is nothing novel in having a lot of plants run from 3 to 10 years in the same beds without removing them if they are given the proper care, and this is why we so strongly advocate keeping right up with the work, neglecting nothing. Practicing false economy is usually short handed, or employing too little help. Of course there will always be leaks, but it is up to the grower to keep an eye peeled for big and little leaks. With the big ones stopped the little ones are easily checked.

E.

FT. WORTH, TEX.—Geo. D. Hunter, general passenger agent of the Texas & Pacific Ry. Co., Dallas, Texas, has announced a round trip rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip from all points in Texas on its line, to Ft. Worth, Tex., on account of the Texas State Florists' convention to be held in this city, July 6-7.

SAGINAW, MICH.—Large additions are being planned by Charles Frueh & Sons, florists, to their already large range outside the city limits. Work has been commenced on three new houses, each of which is to be 300 feet in length. When these houses are completed it is planned to erect three more, similar in all details. The increase in capacity is made necessary by the sale of the property on Hoyt street, where the headquarters of the concern were formerly located.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Exhibition of Cut Blooms.

The grower who is able to get his plants into their permanent quarters during the month of May has a big advantage over the man who for some reason or other cannot plant before June. It is supposed that the grower who starts out to grow exhibition chrysanthemums fully intends to give his plants the closest attention from start to finish, for without this failure is certain, and with constant care, planting them the latter part of May will produce blooms of much larger dimensions than later planted stock. To be able to get many of the finest exhibition varieties to their highest state of perfection, early planting is absolutely necessary, and unless a long season is given the plants to make strong, stout growths and well ripen their wood, the best that can be done with them will be thin flowers of undersize and open centers.

Pot culture during the entire season is in favor with many exhibitors, especially so among the private gardeners, and it has its advantages by being able to keep the roots under control and encourage the ripening of the wood; also, on places where the space is too limited to allow for a house or bench to be devoted to chrysanthemums, the plants can easily be shifted around to give them the proper temperature, but pot culture entails a lot of extra work and trouble, especially so as regards watering during the dry summer months, it being sometimes necessary to go over them three times a day, though this is offset later on in the season when the flower is developing by being able to keep down the moisture and allow the blooms to develop slowly. The plants for pot culture should now be well established. For plants in six inch pots ready for shifting up into eight inch, the very best soil obtainable should be used for this final potting, but not too heavily charged with any prepared concentrated manures to overpower the roots before they get well hold of the soil. These manures are a great aid in producing exhibition blooms, but it is a wise policy to be very cautions in their use upon newly potted plants and rely on getting the benefit from top dressing after the plants have become well established in the soil. Ample drainage should be provided and the plants potted firmly. Directly after potting before the roots get hold of the soil is one of the critical periods in the existance of these plants; the soil must be moistoned through gradually as the roots extend into it but overwatering at this stage will quickly cause trouble.

Attention should be given to the work of providing supports for the plants so that there will not be any crooking in the stems at any stage of their growth and to allow for the plants to be properly syringed to keep the thrip and red spider in check. After potting, the best bench in the greenhouse, where they will get full sunshine with plenty of fresh air should be given over to these plants. Copious syringings should be given during the hot days to lessen the heat and promote luxuriant growth.

For bench culture attend to all needed repairs of the benches, then give the house a thorough cleaning out, particularly inside and underneath the benches and in the corners of the house. After this has been attended to give the inside of the benches a good coat of lime wash, then spread a layer of well rotted manure over the bottom of the bench and bring in the soil, which should be as advised for pot culture (the best soil that can be obtained), one part well rotted manure to three parts loam. Firm planting is as necessary with the plants going in the benches as with those of pot culture. These plants must not be overcrowded and need space 9x10 to grow high class exhibition blooms. After planting the same care to get them well started should be taken as is advised for the pot culture.

VARIETIES.

Every exhibitor has his special pets among the varieties and they respond to his will according to the care he bestows on them, many varieties requiring some particular care a little different from the others and each grower must work this out himself according to the soil at his command and the conditions under which he is working. As a guide to what is a good exhibition collection, we might take the first prize vase at the annual exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America held at Indianapolis, November, 1914, which consisted of the following: Wm. Turner, H. E. Converse, Mendon, Daily Mail, Nerissa, Odessa, Mrs. G. Drabble, Glenview, Jas. Fraser, Wm. Vert, F. S. Vallis, Nakota, Golden Eagle, and then add some of this year's novelties like Tekonsha, Kewanee, Silver King, Modello, Mrs. R. C. Pulling, Antigone, Earl Kitchener, A. S. Baldwin, Bob Pulling, and a few more of the old favorites, such as Mary Mason, Mary Donellan, Mrs. J. C. Neill, Naomah, Hon. Mrs. Lopes, Lenox, Pockett's Crimson, T. Carrington and M. Loisseau Rosseau.

THE CARNATION.

Field Culture.

The most important part of the carnation grower's work at the present time is planting out the young stock. The field planting of the young carnation is one of the big jobs of the year, especially where large numbers of plants are grown, and the time between April 15 and May 15 may be said to be the season for attending to this work. The first thing necessary to carry out the work is the preparation of the land; the best land obtainable is not any too good for the field culture of carnations, as so much of the success of next winter's crop depends on the growth the plants will make while growing in the field that every effort should be put forth to encourage them in every way, and this can only be done by attending closely to every detail.

One very important point in connection with the planting ground is to be sure that it is made as level as possible, so that there will be no low places for pools of water to remain after heavy rain storms; low, wet places in the field are where the stem rot gets a start, and it is also important to have the land thoroughly worked over and the clods broken up, so that the planting can be carried out in the best of shape—and the same is true with cultivating after the planting is finished.

The plan of the planting field depends on the size of the acreage at the grower's command. Where area is limited, most growers set the plants in beds, and use the hoe to keep down the weeds and loosen up the surface soil, but when the space will allow the better plan is to set the plants 10 inches apart in the rows and the rows 16 inches apart, to allow for the use of the hand cultivator to do the cultivating.

Before taking out the plants, they should be given a watering and allowed to drain off before knocking them out of the pots. Do not set a plant, while dry, to remain with a hard, dry ball at the roots most of the season. The plants should be taken out of the pots and set in flats at the greenhouse or frames, then carted to the planting ground and planted as soon as possible and not allowed to remain out of pots any longer than necessary before setting in the ground. A little care in how the planting is carried out will make it very much easier. Do not permit the planters, or those dropping the plants, to tramp on the unplanted part of the ground, but have them work from the rows that are planted, so that the soil for each row will be loose for planting; thus, allowing for the work to be done easily and quickly.

Pay particular attention to how the plants are set. they should be planted firm, but not too deep, and above all be sure every care is given to have the rows straight. There is not anything more satisfying to the grower than a well planted field of carnation plants, and just the opposite is the case if the work is not done properly.

After the planting is finished, go over field with the cultivator to loosen up the surface as a finishing touch to the work; then, be on the lookout for weeds from the very start, and check them before they have a chance to attain any size to interfere with the young plants. As soon as the plants get roothold they will quickly need attention as regards topping. Do not allow the growths to lengthen out more than is necessary to attend to this work properly.

Carnation Wilt.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

A great many of my carnation plants are wilting just like the one (White Enchantress) I am sending you. They were set October 1-2 with a transplanting trowel in a clay loam, planted in a very compact bed too hard for hand planting, with roots straight down and deep. After watering thoroughly they made good growth for a while, but were attacked by rust later. After being on the dry side for a while, and dusted with slacked lime, this trouble disappeared, but as soon as water was gradually given them they responded nicely but the rust returned. What do you think the trouble is?

Ohio. C. C. G.

The way the carnation plants were planted may be one of the causes of them going wrong, though I am inclined to think the principal cause is due to some grub attacking the roots. The specimens arrived very much dried up, but we noticed they had very poor roots, which showed every indication of being chewed. I would advise a careful examination of the roots of the next plant that goes down.

Bordeaux Mixture for Carnations.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Referring to an article in your issue of February 6 with regard to spraying carnations with bordeau mixture for red spider, will you kindly tell me what proportions of the mixture I should use to each gallon of water? Where can I procure the mixture?

Minneapolis. P. F. C.

Considering the small quantity of bordeaux mixture "P. F. C." would need to spray his carnataions, I would advise that he procure the ready-made mixture from a reliable seedsman and follow the directions given for its use. Then add the sugar or molasses as advised in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, issue of February 6, 1915.

Parks and Their Uses.

Address by Supt. Kanst of Lincoln Park before the Chicago City Club, May 19, 1915.

The word "park" originally in English referred to a place for the preservation of deer for the chase, and was characterized by broad stretches of pasture and woods and contained ponds or running water, rustic bridges, thickets of bushes, water, trees, etc. But of late years the word park may designate the grounds surrounding a private estate, a recreation ground known as a large rural park, a small city park, a neighborhood pleasure ground, a square, a place or a garden, parkways or boulevards or outlying reservations; in fact, the word may mean almost any form of a recreation place where trees and shrubs form a part. One of the practical things a park man should understand is the proper use of each of the foregoing places.

Our large Chicago parks were originally intended as breathing spots, where the tired business man or city worker could relax by strolling, picnicing or driving, sit on grass or otherwise enjoy and rest himself in a quiet way, and very little attention was given to space for such games as tennis, baseball, golf, etc. As the city continues to grow the demand for space in our parks for these games is continually increasing until a point has been reached where the original purpose of the park is lost track of and the large parks, such as Lincoln, Jackson, Washington, Humboldt, Garfield and Douglas are rapidly being converted into playgrounds. I believe that this is wrong and that no more space should be alloted in these parks for games for the following reasons, unless, of course, more space is provided. We have nine classes of park visitors, as I see it, as follows:

Class 1—Children, boys and girls, up to 12 or 14 years of age.

Class 2—Young men and young women, from 14 to 21 years of age, not accompanied by parents.

Class 3—Adults, couples of men and women or company.

Class 4—Adults, men, single or in groups of two or more.

Class 5—Adults, women, single or in groups of two or more.

Class 6—Family groups, man, wife and children, or picnic groups.

Class 7—Automobile drivers and those using conveyances.

Class 8—Equestrians.

Class 9—Invalids and old people.

Taking all of the foregoing classes into consideration, it is obvious that no one park, even of a very large extent, can furnish adequate accommodations for all, especially when you take into consideration the many forms of recreation usually pertinent to a large park, such as band concerts, croquet, roque, casting clubs, rowing, boat clubs, archery, bicycle races, large picnics, bathing, celebrations and many other forms of recreative events which bring together at one time large groups or crowds in addition to the visitors who are interested only in floral displays, the zoological garden and similar attractions and those who simply pass through the park on their way to and from work or for other reasons.

The main purpose of a large city park is to furnish a means of relaxation to the great mass of city toilers from the routine of city life and who find recreation in simply strolling among the trees and flowers, rest the eye on green grass, breathe the fresh air and return to the crowded homes refreshed. Since the great growth of population, and perhaps great growth of popularity of our large parks were not adequately conceived, or, for other reasons, we now find them too congested for all recreation features, it behooves us, therefore, at this time to study means by which the greatest number of people can find recreation in the limited area available. In order to do this intelligently it is necessary to draw distinct lines between play and other forms of recreation. By play I mean tennis, baseball, football or any other form of athletics wherein competition plays a part, also gymnastics of all kinds, etc., etc. For this form of play the park space is limited. By recreation I mean concerts, seeing the animals, seeing the flowers, in and out of the conservatory, picnics, boating, promenading and young couples communing with nature and planning their future.

Having made a careful analysis of the kinds of people who visit the parks and the kinds of games played and the various recreations sought, we next proceed to divide all play and forms of recreation into two classes.

These games and forms of recreation which can be best enjoyed and managed in a limited area should be confined to small parks, school buildings, field houses or vacant lots, and the other forms of recreation are those that can only be carried on in a large park. The result will show that the small parks and playground movement is of the greatest importance, because, as I said before, the areas and facilities in large parks are limited, while the field for advancement in the playground movement can go forward for many years, or as long as there is vacant property or property with old, cheap buildings that can be purchased for a reasonable price. Then, too, I believe the public school buildings should be available for many forms of recreations, such as lectures, concerts, meetings and even dances.

While I believe that our present fine field houses now operated by our park systems are none too good for the purpose, the initial expense for these buildings is enormous. If we expect to expand rapidly in the playground movement, we must save our money for the purchase of land for playground field houses and construct cheaper buildings. On the other hand, I also believe that all games and recreations in the playgrounds should be properly supervised and directed, so that children may be taught the value of correct methods and that fairness shall prevail. Without supervision, a playground will soon lose its effectiveness in the community and will be ruled by a few persons or by a gang, who will make others feel that they are unwelcome.

Time will not permit me to dwell longer on this subject. In conclusion, however, there are three points I wish to emphasize:

First—We must stop crowding our large parks with games and recreations that can better be taken care of in the small playgrounds, for the reason that if we continue the large parks will be ruined for the purpose for which they were originally intended, viz., that of furnishing rest and rural recreation for the great mass of city workers.

Second—When this point is well considered, it will readily be seen that the field of endeavor for our present needs lies in the playground movement.

Third—When the dividing line between large parks and playgrounds is closely understood, park workers and playground workers will then join hands and operate in perfect harmony.

OSKALOOSA, IA.—The Kemble Floral Store, 119 High avenue east, has placed some beautiful and effective leaded art glass signs in the upper part of their show windows.

JOLIET, ILL.—A flower show under the auspices of a bank is an innovation, but the exhibition held in the room of the First National bank was a complete success. Four silver cups were awarded.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—The Luther Burbank Co. will celebrate the fortieth anniversary of Luther Burbank's coming to California, June 5, at the Palace of Horticulture, on the exposition grounds. Mr. Burbank will attend in person.

FT. WORTH, TEX.—A modern house, 40x300 feet, will be added to the range of J. E. McAdam.—N. Nielsen, who has been conected with the florist trade here, will establish himself in business as a florist, nurseryman and landscape architect.

ARAUCARIAS, high grade stock, are said to be in strong demand this season at good prices.

CHICAGO.—Directors of the South Side small parks have been organizing their neighborhoods, and endeavoring to establish a working plan to get local participation in community service.

IOWA now imitates California's Orange day by setting apart Onion day. While not quite so romantic as the golden globes glowing on the green trees, the onion is right there when it comes to steak and—. And didn't Stevenson call it the "rose among roots," to say nothing of the "poetic soul of the capacious salad bowl?"

Glass Market Steady.

The glass market is steady with no prospects for any change in prices. Trade has been rather quiet so far this season, for the growers are not carrying as large a surplus on hand as in former years, but at that the jobbers have only a normal supply in stock.

Tacoma Rose Society.

The annual exhibition of the Tacoma Rose Society will be held in that city June 4-5, and gives promise of being one of the most successful events of its kind ever held in that city. All residents of Tacoma and suburbs, excepting professional rose growers may enter the competition and the contributions of roses will be greater this year than ever before. Cups and special awards will be made in eight divisions.

Utica Park System.

This city, with a population of about 80,000, has 637 acres of public parks and over four miles of boulevard, the park commission having under its jurisdiction two public bathhouses, four city playgrounds, four park play fields, twelve municipal tennis courts, thirty horse, man and park fountains. and a large deer park, and is at present acquiring land for another half-mile of boulevard. Practically the entire park system was donated to the city by the Hon. Thomas R. Proctor, for whom one park is named, and who is at present completing the construction of a large, new park, named Frederick T. Proctor park for his brother. This park is extremely beautiful and remarkable for water effects, evergreens, shale cliffs, open meadows and scenic perspectives. Thomas R. Proctor, although controlling this park himself, has thrown it open to the public.

F. E. Thomas, chairman; Tom W. Johnson, W. C. J. Doolittle, E. B. Townsend, secretary, and Edward M. Swiggett, superintendent, comprise the park commission. S.

Tree Crickets of Garden and Orchard.

Few persons have seen many tree crickets and fewer still realize that there are several species of these interesting little songsters of the night, that they may be both helpful and harmful to fruit-growers, and that they have some most interesting structural peculiarities and habits, unlike those of any other group of insects. Of these crickets there are three species worthy of some attention from orchardists and gardeners, but only one that causes serious harm directly by its own work. The other two may even be quite useful at times, and have usually been placed in the category of beneficial insects, as they often feed upon San Jose scale and other small insects that are distinct menaces to fruit interests. But it is now known that all these species may transport the spores of the fungi that cause certain plant diseases, and that they sometimes deposit these spores where the resultant fungus growth produces cankers and dead areas in bark and wood.

Tree crickets belong to the group of straight-winged insects, which includes our common grasshoppers, locusts, katydids and black crickets; but they are smaller, slenderer insects than any of these, and are of a delicate, light yellowish-green color which makes them quite inconspicuous among the foliage of the plants on which they live. Indeed, during the daytime in bright weather, to see them at all, in their five immature stages, it is usually necessary to search very carefully for the very long, slender, forward-stretched antennæ, which the insect extends from within or below some curled leaf.

Bulletin No. 388, under date of May, 1914, treating on the history and economic importance of tree crickets, will be mailed upon request to those interested in the subject by the New York Agricultural Experiment Station, Geneva, N. Y.

Earliest Forcing of Hyacinths.

Efforts have been made during the past five years to discover a method of preparing hyacinth and tulip bulbs for satisfactory Christmas flowering, and the Netherlands Bulb Society has held Christmas exhibits for four successive years to show the results. The exhibit of 1914 showed great progress over former years, many early hyacinths and tulips being shown in splendid blooms. The modes of preparation vary with the varieties, but in general seem to consist in early digging, rapid, artificial curing and chilling, followed by potting, at latest by September 1.

Only a limited number of varieties have given these good results. The best white was Aventino Arendsen, with l'Innocence, Hein Roozen, La Grandesse and Christmas White; of the carmines, General Pelissier, Garibaldi and Mrs. Stanley; rose, Charles Dickens, Lady Derby, Victor Emanuel, Nimrod, Maria Cornelia; blue, Bismarck, Grand Lilas, Schotel and Captain Boynton, with William I, a very fine dark blue. Yellow Hammer and Ida were the best yellows, and Distinction, a unique reddish purple, gave fine blooms. Tulips were as numerous as hyacinths. Aside from the well-known Duc van Thol and Proserpine, the following sorts gave with this special bulb preparation, perfect flowers, December 23:

Thos. Moore, orange; Mrs. Elwes, violet red, bordered rose; King of the Yellows and Mon Tresor, yellow; Van Schalken, orange scarlet; Le Matelas, carmine rose; Vesuvius and Rembrandt, deep red; Brilliant Star, scarlet; Lady Boreil, white, and the double sorts, Toreador, Couronne d'Or and Salvator Rosa.—Revue Horticole.

Year Book of Agriculture.

We have received the year book of the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., for 1914, containing 715 pages with many illustrations. The contents cover a great variety of topics useful to agriculturists, including the following which may interest some of our readers: "Story of the Thermometer and Its Uses in Agriculture," by Alfred H. Thiessen; "Movement from City and Town to Farms," by George K. Holmes; "The Preparation of Fertilizer from Municipal Waste," by J. W. Turrentine; "Nematodes and Their Relationships," by N. A. Cobb.

Florist Opportunity in Huntington, W. Va.

According to a communication received from C. A. Peters, the only florist with greenhouses in Huntington, W. Va., a city of 50,000 population, and the center of a territory having a population of between 200,000 and 300,000, there is a good opportunity for at least one or two more florists. Mr. Peters writes: "I will be glad to help any good florist locate here in the near future."

HEAVY DEMAND FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

The demand for stock for Memorial day was very heavy this year and stock of all kinds cleaned up completely as the writer predicted it would in his market report three weeks ago. Stock was not as plentiful as in former years, but the quality was fine and prices were much better. Carnations were in best demand and it was impossible to fill anywhere near the orders that were received and orders for several hundred thousands were refused early last week. Most of the carnations sold at prices ranging from $4 to $6 per 100 and in some instances more but the majority of the dealers were satisfied to dispose of what stock they had to offer at these figures. Roses sold well and cleaned up quickly at good prices, especially Richmond, Milady and Rhea Reid. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses were in good demand also, and while American Beauty roses sold well they did not bring the prices that they should, considering the scarcity of other stock and the splendid quality of the flowers that were offered. Peonies sold well and the quality of the stock offered was fine compared to last year and all the available stock was cleaned up at very satisfactory figures. Very few home grown peonies were offered this year and the supply of Cape Jasmine was small and what stock did arrive cleaned up almost as quickly as the shipments were unpacked. Sweet peas were in fair demand and cleaned up quite well at good prices. Gladioli were in good supply but sold quickly. The supply of Double White narcisus was not as large as in former years and what stock was offered brought very good prices. Miscellaneous stock cleaned up nicely and taken all in all, everything was in short supply and sold at very satisfactory figures. The weather was anything but favorable for growing conditions and all records for May rainfall in this city since 1883 were broken when the total for the present month was almost up to that of that year. Previous to this month, the four wettest Mays in the history of the local bureau which was established in 1870, were: May, 1873, 7.20 inches; May, 1883, 7.32 inches; May, 1892, 6.77 inches and May, 1908, 6.74 inches. Considering the unfavorable weather and the prices realized on the stock offered, the wholesale florists have no reason to complain of the Memorial day business, although most of them regretted the fact that they were obliged to refuse so many orders, they are all pretty well satisfied with the outcome.

Bassett & Washburn had a fine Memorial day trade, which was the best that the firm has experienced for many years. The receipts of Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia roses are very heavy this week and the same holds good for yellow roses, which are now in full crop. Carnations were never in better demand than they were this year, and it was pleasing to note that many of the orders called for the new variety Belle Washburn, which is making such a big hit.

Peter Reinberg had a much better Memorial day trade than he did last year, according to Felix Reichling, who is in charge at the store. Everything in both roses and carnations cleaned up completely and the sales on Sunday, June 30, were better than they were any other day during the entire week. Yellow roses are seen in good supply at this store now, but are cleaning up splendidly each day.

Percy Jones had a very satisfactory Memorial day trade and cleaned up completely in all lines of stock at an early hour. The out-of-town demand was never better, and taken all in all, Manager Van Gelder is more than satisfied with the week's business. This firm is filling a large number of orders for ferns this week at very attractive prices.

Tom Sullivan, of the Woodlawn Floral Shop, 871 East Sixty-third street, escorted a very pretty young lady from South Haven, Mich., through the market one day this week, who it is understood is to change her name from Valentine to Sullivan in the near future. Oh, you wedding bells.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. received several shipments of America gladioli from Texas last week that arrived in good condition considering the distant point that they were shipped from and came in handy for Memorial day during the scarcity of other stock.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is in nice crop with orchids and gardenias and some very fancy stock in both lines are obtainable at the store this week. The supply of roses is quite large now, with fancy Mrs. Chas. Russell the principal offering. The demand for supplies for weddings and commencements is very good this week, especially for baskets, ribbons and chiffons. John Enders' son Clarence is helping out in the office during the summer months and likes his new job first rate. The Memorial day trade was heavy at this store this year and stock in all lines cleaned up at an early hour at high prices.

N. J. Wietor says that Wietor Bros. are all through with their rose planting, the last of the stock being set out this week This firm had a large supply of both roses and carnations for Memorial day, but everything cleaned up nicely at an early hour, and the sales during the week were considerably larger than last year. A nice supply of Sunburst roses of fine quality are now reaching the store and are in good demand for wedding work.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are receiving a large supply of American Beauty roses and peonies now, but are cleaning up nicely at good prices this week. The Memorial day trade was very good at this store with both the local and out-of-town exceedingly heavy. Peter Hoefelder was in the market buying, nearly every day, but at that the demand was so heavy it was impossible to fill all the orders.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is the only wholesale firm in the city that handles myrtle regularly. O. Johnson, who is in charge at the store, says that about 2,000 plants all told are grown and that the cuts clean up nicely right along, but that it took nearly two years to establish any kind of a trade for it.

George Reinberg cut his first lot of Ophelia roses this week, according to Robert Northam, who so successfully manages his wholesale store. Bob says that American Beauty roses are a thing of the past as far as the George Reinberg establishment is concerned, for this variety has been discarded entirely.

Fred. Ronsley, the Westminster building florist, has had a good demand this season for small boxwood bushes and rubber plants. He bought a good supply of both for display purposes, but they sold so quickly that he bought a larger stock and since then his sales have increased considerably.

Zech & Mann are handling large quantities of greenhouse grown gladioli in all the leading varieties, in addition to their regular line of stock. The Memorial day trade at this store was fine and all the regular customers were well taken care of, even though stock was scarce.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is showing a good supply of orchids and peonies and report a brisk demand for same. Roses are in good supply at this store now and the shipments include nearly all the newer varieties as well as all the old favorites.

Frank Otto, who recently sold his place at Winnetka to Alexander Clifford, is helping out his successor during the busy period. He is in the best of health and likes to visit the market occasionally, where he has a large number of friends.

Wm. F. Schofield, the North State street florist, had several large orders for the Collins funeral held last week. The window display that this firm made recently was a pretty one and very appropriate for Memorial day.

Zalinger & Hirsch, who operate the stand in the rotunda of the Insurance Exchange building, had a large amount of work for the Schroyer funeral held May 27, the orders consisting of a dozen large pieces.

Erne & Klingel never had a better Memorial day trade than they did this year, which is probably the reason why Charlie and Freddie are happier than usual these days.

I. Rosnosky, with Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., visited the French & Salm greenhouses at Union Grove, Wis., before returning home this week.

The Hughes Plant Co., 4630 Washington boulevard, will add four more plant houses 30x140 feet to the one that was recently built.

George Holdroph, formerly in the employ of one of the local wholesale houses, is now with George Wagner, 3116 Indiana avenue.

Chas. W. McKellar had several large shipments of Cape Jasmine for Memorial day, which cleaned up as fast as they were unpacked.

E. J. Delaney, of Albany, N. Y. has joined the force at Sinner Bros' wholesale store.

MEMORIAL DAY STOCK CLEANS UP.

Memorial day, being on Sunday this year, gave the florists three days in which to sell flowers for Memorial day business, and they were three rattling good days, to say the least. Peonies, of course were most in demand, and next came the old standbys, carnations. The peonies, outside of a few early red, were all shipped stock on this market, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Chicago, and Baltimore shipping here in quantity, and every salable flower was cleaned up before the rush was over. Carnations, of which there was a good supply, also cleaned up entirely. The demand for other stock was also very good. Baby gladioli, America gladioli, Shasta daisies, sweet peas, lily of the valley and swainsona were in good demand throughout the week. Easter lilies sold well, and were quite plentiful. Callas are about over with. Candytuft and Double White poeticus narcissi had an exceptional run, their cheapness making them a big factor in bouquet work and funeral designs. The shipping demand was very heavy, due to the late season for out-door flowers. Frosts and very sharp cold winds and little sunshine were features of the weather the past week. Out-door lockspur, field daisies and blue iris will be part of the daily stock now. Roses too met with a good demand, particularly in the shorter grades. American Beauties of exceptional quality are meeting with a good call. Boxwood was used quite freely for wreaths. Fancy fern and Southern dagger and adiantum fern are plentiful, as is Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus. Commencements which take place here in about two weeks are the next big days for florists outside of June weddings, for which several large decorations are already booked, and the month of June promises well.

May Rainfall in Chicago.

The month of May this year in Chicago has been slightly below normal in temperature and it has been one of the wettest months since August, 1909. The rainfall in Chicago May 27 was 1.27 inches, reducing the shortage for 1915 to less than one inch. A month ago it was between four and five inches short of normal for the period since Jan. 1. It has rained this month twenty-one out of twenty-eight days—some days a slight sprinkle, but on one day 1.71 inches of rainfall. A remarkable vagary of the month was that between the 13th and the 21st, inclusive, it rained every day. The rainfall of May 27 raised the total precipitation for the month so far to slightly in excess of six inches. This is the heaviest rainfall in any May since 1908 as shown by the records of the weather bureau. May in that year recorded a rainfall of 6.74 inches. The forecaster announced cheerfully the present rain period is about over.

SUBSTANTIAL MEMORIAL DAY DEMAND.

Memorial day business was quite satisfactory. It extended over three days, from Saturday through Monday, and kept most every one connected with the business busy during that time. There was no absolute clearance of stock, but it was a very substantial one, and the amount of stock on hand at the close of Monday's business was not very large. Roses, including all seasonable colors and varieties, are fairly plentiful and meet with a steady call. American Beauties are also included in this list. The shorter grades sell better than the longer ones. The lily supply is very heavy. Offerings in good carnations are rather limited. The list of other stock offered in the market includes sweet peas, lily of the valley, orchids, jasmines, which are very plentiful and backing up; delphinums, nymphæas and corn flowers.

NOTES.

P. J. Olinger has been cutting some very fine Russell, Ward and Richmond roses.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market to offer nymphæas this season.

HEAVY RAINS HURT SHIPPING TRADE.

The week preceding Memorial day was a record breaker for rainy weather, the heaviest downfall in years being experienced, and naturally trade suffered from the unfavorable conditions. Delivery of out-of-town orders was uncertain, especially May 28, westbound trains not running on time, being from four to eight hours late, and the day following, Saturday, trains going east of this city were not able to leave on account of washouts. Outdoor stock, especially peonies, suffered damage from rain, hail and wind, but the supply was ample for all demands, with peonies, roses and carnations taking the lead at prices varying from $1 to $3 per dozen. Pot plants were in great demand, and the call for magnolia and other wreaths was greater than a year ago. Greenhouses here are as a rule empty after May 30, but with cool weather and excessive rainfall during May, nearly all of the local growers find themselves with plenty of stock on hand.

NOTES.

Samuel Murray's new shop at 1017 Grand avenue is a great improvement over his former location, both in arrangement and the advantage of increased floor space. The fixtures are up-to-date and attractive, the color scheme being carried out in buff, the lower parts of the walls presenting a wainscoting effect of rough finished brick, above which an effect of rough stone is extended to the ceiling. A balcony offers excellent opportunity for the arrangement of plants and fancy baskets, while the show window with green tile floor and large mirrors at the sides is splendid for display. Four domes in the ceiling with electrical effects also give opportunity for artistic display of plants. A golden horseshoe from Arnold Ringier, Chicago, was in place over the doorway for the opening, June 2nd. Numerous "Good Luck" telegrams and letters were received from other trade friends in all parts of the country.

W. J. Barnes had an excellent supply of stock and did a heavy out-of-town business in addition to his local Memorial day trade. The call for wreaths was heavy at this store.

Arthur Newell had a big demand for peonies and carnations for Memorial day. A large number of wreaths were also sent out from this establishment.

Memorial day sales this year exceeded those of last year at the store of T. J. Noll & Co. The shipping trade was surprisingly heavy and they cleaned up early in everything.

Peonies, roses and carnations, were in large supply at Henry Kussick & Co.'s store, but sold out completely. Shipping trade was also excellent.

The Christ & Moore Floral Co. has been busy with funeral work, which, in addition to good business generally, keeps the force busy.

W. L. Rock Flower Co. enjoyed a Memorial day trade that exceeded all expectations, especially in out-of-town shipments.

Alpha Floral Co. had the biggest Memorial day business in its history. Shipping trade was excellent.

Cut flowers sold out completely and plant business was satisfactory, according to J. Austin.

A. F. Barber reports business good. He had a heavy call for bouquets for Memorial day. E. J. B.

MEMORIAL DAY SALES SHOW INCREASE.

Memorial day was observed here Monday, May 31, and the florists are all agreed that the business done was more than satisfactory, there was a greatly increased demand for designs for placing in cemetery lots, locally, and the shipping trade to outside towns throughout the state, exceeded by far the volume sent out in any previous year for Memorial day purposes. There was a plentiful supply of cut-flowers, peonies and cape jasmines were of excellent quality and sold readily, helping materially to relieve the high priced market condition of the carnations. The flower stores made excellent window displays for the occasion, but it remained for the Barteldes Seed Co. to place a real memorial window. They used stands of rifles of the 1864 type, sabres, canteens and other military accessories and in one corner of the window a marble head-stone draped with immortelles. The Stiles Co. and Furrow & Company each showed very artistic designs in magnolia leaves and flowers and no doubt the big demand experienced for designs was due directly to the efforts made by the store-people in making elaborate displays of their kind of work.

On the evening of May 22 a hail storm of short duration struck a portion of the city and some damage was done to glass. The Stiles Co.'s greenhouses had about 400 lights broken. Fortunately the hail stones were not thick in their descent, but thinly scattered. Some people claim the stones were as large as goose eggs, that is a slight exaggeration; many of them, however, were the size of an ordinary hen's egg.

Furrow & Company will erect a ten thousand dollar greenhouse here this summer. This firm has just completed harvesting a strawberry crop at their Guthrie place. They had a tract of several acres in strawberries and we are informed the yield was a record breaker and came in at a time when the market price was just right.

The Oklahoma State Florists' Society will meet Monday, June 9. Secretary Batten says there will be an interesting programme provided.

FEW MEMORIAL DAY FLOWERS USED.

Oratory, music and flags, but few flowers were in evidence at the observance of Memorial day at the National cemetery near this city. This is a large cemetery, many thousands of soldiers being buried there. June 4, the graves of the Confederate dead in Mount Olivet cemetery will be decorated. There will probably be some flowers and plants used, but Memorial day brings little grist to the florists' mill in this city. Spring flowers have been in great abundance during the past few weeks, but are for the most part over. There has been the usual run of social events and business has been good. A large number of weddings, some of them elaborate affairs, are announced for the near future and will keep things going. Lilies are in great abundance and roses are fine in quality.

Harold M. Joy, son of Thomas S. Joy, of the Joy Floral Co., and himself connected with the firm, was married last week to Miss Ethel McAllister. Mr. Joy is a practical florist, having gained experience not only in the home plant, but gained additional practical experience from prominent eastern growers.

Oscar Geny, of Geny Bros., has recovered sufficiently from a serious illness to be about again in a limited way, but is fairly on the way to complete restoration to his wonted health. M. C. D.

WEATHER BAD AND BUSINESS POOR.

Trade has been particularly dull during the past two weeks. This may be accounted for in part by the very unseasonable weather. It has been raining or cloudy nearly all of the time and it is only at the present writing that we are getting our normal spring weather. It has been bad on out-door flowering stock, such as roses, sweet peas, peonies, etc. The supply of indoor roses is very heavy just now, and with no demand to speak of, even for high-class stock, and prices have ruled very low. Russell, Richmond and Killarney are in heavy supply. Plenty of out-door Ulrich Brunner are coming in, but the quality is rather poor this season, owing to the rains. Cecile Brunners are plentiful and cheap. Carnations are still rather scarce, with prices firm. Orchids, principally cattleyas, are in large supply, with a fair call. Quite a few odontoglossums are also in the market. Spanish iris is about over for the season. Sweet peas, of the Spencer varieties, are arriving in very limited numbers, as they have not as yet recovered from the recent wind storms. There are plenty of grandifloras. The writer has noticed quite a few dahlias at different nurseries, but as yet none are coming into this market. Nearly all out-door flowering shrubs are out of bloom and very few are to be seen in the stores. There are some splendidly grown pot roses being shown by the prominent stores; also rhododendrons and spireas. This stock moves along steadily. Orchids in pots are also featured with a few of the leading retailers. Large decorations have been very few lately.

NOTES.

Our prominent chrysanthemum growers have about completed their plantings for this season. There is probably about the same amount planted this season as last. Many of the growers are growing all the novelties in preparation for the many chrysanthemum shows which are to be held this fall. The presence of Chas. H. Totty of Madison, N. J., has also stimulated interest in this popular flower. Mr. Totty has been visiting as many of the 'mum growers as his limited time will allow, and declares himself well pleased with what he has seen.

The planting of the convention garden is progressing rapidly, now that good weather has set in. Nearly all of the prominent nurserymen and seed houses on the coast will be represented by excellent displays. Nearly all of the available space has been applied for and those in the trade who contemplate making a display are requested to make application for space at the earliest possible moment. The trade in this city and vicinity is planning to make this garden display a memorable one, so hurry along your applications.

game, Calif. The fire was extinguished before it had made much headway. The loss is estimated at $100. This firm is shipping enormous quantities of roses to their wholesale store in this city daily. They have a splendid cut of Mrs. Chas. Russell just now. This variety is a great favorite with this firm and they are preparing to increase their planting of it very considerably another season.

Carl Purdy of Ukiah, Calif., the well-known collector of California native plants and bulbs, had charge of the floral decorations June 25 at the exposition grounds. Luther Burbank is to be honored by the exposition management by having one day set aside to be known as Luther Burbank day. June 6 has been selected as the date on which this will occur.

Podesta & Baldocchi have been making grand displays of Rose Irish Elegance in their store of late and the prominence they have given this rose is being felt in the continual call for this beautiful variety. The J. B. Boland Co., on Kearny street, have been showing some grand gladioli, especially America. They report having a steady call for this variety.

Leo V. Belden, secretary and treasurer of the Luther Burbank Co., has severed his connection with that firm to engage in other business in this city. Mr. Belden has many friends among the trade, who wish him every success in his new venture.

Nels Peterson, of the Peninsula Nursery, has started to replant all his carnation houses. This grower always believes in early planting and is recognized as one of the most successful growers in this vicinity.

SHORT PEONY CROP DISAPPOINTS.

The Memorial day rush is over, but we are sorry to say, it was a bad disappointment to all concerned in the way of peonies. There was plenty of rainfall, but for the latter part of the week there was absolutely no sunshine to open the blooms. What few that did reach the local market were, on the most part, as "tight as bullets," and practically all of the retailers were without peonies all week. Great losses were sustained by the growers, wholesalers and retailers, but, as the weather was uncontrollable, the dealers had to fall back on carnations, roses and lilies to fill their orders. The carnation crop was very good, on the contrary, and some very fine stock was handled. Roses were in fine supply, also, and owing to the peony situation, no trouble was experienced in disposing of them at good prices. Lilies moved well also. Yellow daisies were scarce and sold well. A heavy glut is bound to occur the coming week when the belated crops of peonies arrive, and very little can be expected from them at that time.

Business was exceptionally good on pot stock this season, according to the reports of several of the largest retailers and growers. Geraniums shortened up very quickly and it was not such an easy matter to procure them around the end of the week.

NOTES.

The Blind Floral Co. was well supplied with plants and bedding stock, grown at their West View greenhouses. The store was filled to its capacity continually with its product.

Wm. Turner was also on hand with his usual line of fine pot stock. He also cut a large crop of giganteum lilies for Memorial day.

MEMORIAL DAY PLANT DEMAND ACTIVE.

The corner of West Side avenue and Montgomery street was a very busy place for several days before Memorial day. Being just opposite the cemetery, plant dealers came, in some instances from quite a distance, to sell their stock. There is a small but neat range in the cemetery grounds.

The growers of Jersey City are nearly all plantsmen, most of them planting chrysanthemums when the bedding plants are out. They have all been very active during the past week, as previously the weather had been so cold and wet that much of the bedding work was deferred.

Charles Wrege, 21 Roosevelt avenue, has considerable glass area, having a store in connection, with a good local trade. Mr. Wrege is now well advanced in years and does not take an active part in the work, but Mrs. Wrege was found very busy in the store.

Mrs. J. E. Kelly, 67 Wayne street, is a very active florist. She is in New York every morning for the early market, sells wholesale and likewise fills orders for funeral work and bouquets.

John F. Madden, who has a store at 768 Bergen avenue and a range on Montgomery street, near the Hudson county catholic cemeteries, was very busy sending out plants.

At the range of Robert Leach we found plants going out very fast, the geraniums being well flowered. This is one of the ranges that grows fine chrysanthemums.

Peter Olszewski has a name that is hard to pronounce, but this is nothing against him. He is a clever florist and gardener and is well located at 219 First street.

F. Kerpen, who has a well constructed range on Stegman avenue, reported that his best stock was all sold out in advance of Memorial day.

Peter Henderson, who conducts the range, long the property of his father, the late James Henderson, was found very busy with plants.

Philip Dosch, who now has the John Leach range, on lease, had a fine stock of bedding plants and was doing a good business.

Fred H. Dressel, Jr., who recently bought the Bonnet Floral Shop, has opened a branch in the new market, 137 Newark avenue.

James A. Sullivan, who was formerly engaged in other business, has recently opened a retail florist store at 277 Grove street.

May F. Kendall's store, on Jersey avenue, is well kept and well patronized and she has a clever assistant in her sister.

A. Kiessel, 606 Summit avenue, has a good store and is a constant buyer in the New York market. A. F. F.

St. Louis.

HEAVY SALES IN PLANTS.

During the past week the worst weather ever recorded for May visited us, but Memorial day the sun was shining. Sweet peas became soft and unsalable from the moisture. Outdoor flowers are with us again and to a great extent knock out indoor stock. Jasmines are arriving in all grades. The shorter grades seem to have the better keeping qualities. Carnations, good stock, brought big prices, five and six cents, while inferior stock brought three cents. From reports received, trade for Memorial day was good, there being heavy sales in blooming plants.

NOTES.

H. G. Berning had a fine stock in everything for Memorial day. This house handles some of the largest consignments that come to this city.

F. C. Weber, Jr., is a frequent visitor to the market. He likes to keep posted.

MEMORIAL DAY BUSINESS EXCEEDS 1914.

The feature of the week was the demand for Memorial day. This, as was to be expected, set the price and it seemed a sure enough test of supply and demand. The early part of the week prices were moderate with an upward tendency, which climbed and kept creeping upward until at the last, record prices on almost all lines of stock were obtained. Peonies started at $4 and finally halted only when the choice stock set the figures at $8 and owing to the copious rains and cool weather, the quality was the best ever. By noon, May 29, scarcely anything in peonies showing color was in sight. The tables in the wholesale houses were filled with stock sitting pot against pot, fully of bullet-like buds scarcely showing color. No doubt many of these were salable the Monday following, but not before and they will likely be so plentiful next week that record prices of the other extreme will offset those of the early crop. Roses, while plentiful, met with a good demand, everything of any merit in all grades being sold at good prices; in fact, it was in many cases impossible to fill orders, the cool and cloudy weather of Friday and Saturday having shortened the crop fully 50 per cent. About the only plentiful things were Easter lilies and asparagus green and these were to be had in quantity. Sweet peas sold well considering the quality, which was of the fag end order. Some of the outside stock is seen, the bulk of the crop promising to be in time for the June weddings.

Carnations were good, stock jumping fully 100 per cent in price. Such flowers as could be bought for three dollars on Monday easily brought six on Saturday. Take it all in all, the business was fully as good as last season if not a trifle better, perhaps. In the retail shops almost the entire business was for cemetery flowers, which took the form of wreaths, sprigs and loose flowers. Wreaths were mostly of magnolia, trimmed with fresh flowers, or in the pieces for soldiers' graves, red, white and blue immortelles and palm leaves were used with the wreaths. The general decoration of graves, aside from those of the Grand Army, as is the custom throughout New England, is so little observed as to be scarcely noticeable. It seems possible that this beautiful custom could be brought into vogue here, if a publicity campaign to encourage such a practice was conducted with intelligence and good taste.

NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Guernsey Cattle Breeders' Association will be held at the dairy and rose farm of the Joseph Heacock Co., at Roelefs, June 11. There will be interesting addresses by Dr. Williams, Prof. Ager and Prof. Saunders. An inspection of this model farm, with its hundred acres of corn, its alfalfa fields, model farm and dairy buildings, together with the large, up-to-date rosehouses and their complete equipment, will show features that could scarcely be duplicated anywhere else in this country.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society is taking a step forward, in going outside of its building to hold flower shows, in various community centers to get the co-operation of people in these sections interested in their work and at the same time encourage floriculture and a love for flowers. A peony show was held in Fireman's hall, June 2. An exhibition of sweet peas on the grounds of the Abington Library Association at Jenkintown is scheduled for June 23.

Everybody wants to take a day off and come to the club outing at Schuetzen park, June 21. "Happy John" Gracey is chairman of the committee having the affair in charge. There will be a baseball game, running races, a wheelbarrow trundle, tug of war, a good dinner and dancing. Tickets, $1.50. Everybody come; a good time is assured, rain or shine.

The Leo Niessen Co. taxed their large organization to the limit in handling the business of Memorial day. It was a record day with them. Select American Beauties are a feature this week.

Edward Reid added peonies to his carnation stock as a feature of the Memorial day business and sold out clean of almost everything. A large and satisfactory business was his comment.

The regular spring show of outdoor roses will be held June 9 in Horticultural hall. This is a move in the right direction and will greatly increase the usefulness of the society.

The M. Rice Co. are busy making up new designs in baskets for the fall trade. Their "made in America" creations will certainly make a hit this fall.

Berger Bros.' peony business for Memorial day was immense. Gladiolus and select lily of the valley were also features. K.

TRADE CONDITIONS SATISFACTORY.

The supply of stock kept shortening throughout the early days of the past week, but there was enough to go around. A heavier supply came in Saturday, May 29, and the market was fairly active. The activity was largely on account of buyers and orders from out of town, and the cemetery florists. While there was not a great increase in the local retail trade, business seemed fairly good.

Carnations of the best quality were fairly steady at $4 per 100 throughout the week, and Saturday there were some sales at $5. Good No. 1 roses went at $3 and $4 per 100; specials $6 and $8 for choice varieties. The best greenhouse lily of the valley sold well, going as high as $4 and $5 per 100, but the outdoor stock was poor. It is stated that one dealer cleared out a stock of it at $4 per 1,000. Peonies of ordinary quality sold for 75 cents per dozen, a better grade for $1, with possibly a few sales at $1.25. There were some very good lilies on the market and 6 cents per flower was a fair price. There was no unusual movement in American Beauty roses, they remaining at the rate of $25 per 100 for specials. The cold and wet weather has had a bad effect on some of the tea roses arriving, considerable mildew being noted. A considerable stock of irises, snowballs, outdoor spiræa and deutzia is seen, which has no fixed price.

So far as can be learned, the dealers in bedding plants had good business. While weather conditions are even not yet favorable for the planting of tender stock, as one dealer expressed it, "we cannot wait"; therefore, much cemetery bedding was done in a few days preceding May 30.

May 30.—Weather cold and disagreeable, and rain began falling early in the day. Many people were thus prevented from visiting the cemeteries. Though there was fair business, May 29, stock was not cleaned up and the storm put a damper on Sunday business.

May 31.—There is no unusual activity today, in fact prices are falling off. Special American Beauties are down to $20 per 100. The weather is fine, and if it continues a good supply of stock may be looked for throughout the week. Peonies are even now plentiful and the supply is sure to increase. Gardenias are out of the running and orchids remain cheap. Today is being observed as a holiday.

NOTES.

Many beautiful floral designs were sent from this city May 28, for the funeral of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, which was held at her late home, Garrison-on-the-Hudson. Ralph Armstrong, Madison avenue and 47th street, filled the orders from the Fish family and had charge of the arrangement of flowers at the funeral. The pall was of red roses and lily of the valley and the grave was lined with red roses. There was designs from nearly all the leading florists of this city.

George Hildenbrand.
John Young & Co., New York.

At the memorial services at the Vanderbilt home, May 27, for the late Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who was lost in the Lusitania disaster, there were many fine flowers. Mr. Vanderbilt's body never was found, but the ceremony was practically a funeral service. In addition to flowers, palms, ferns and foliage plants were arranged about the altar, the family orders being with Chas. A. Dards, Madison avenue and 44th street.

John Young, 53 West Twenty-eighth street, has notified the trade that he has taken George Hildenbrand into partnership. Mr. Hildenbrand has long been well and favorably known in the wholesale district as an employe of Mr. Young. The firm name is now John Young & Co., and it has our good wishes.

John V. Philips, of Fulton street, had considerable Memorial day work on account of the Grand Army of the Republic. S. Masur, also of Fulton street, was quite busy during the past week, part of which was on account of Memorial day.

Moore, Hentz & Nash, of the Coogan building, had a stock of roses for Memorial day which consisted of Killarney Queen, Radiance, My Maryland, Florence B., Hadley, Double White Killarney and Aaron Ward. They sold out well.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held on the night of June 14. As this will be the last meeting until after the summer vacation, July and August, there will doubtless be a large attendance.

John H. Meyer, who now has the retail store at Third avenue and 35th street, formerly conducted by R. Willburger, is keeping it in good shape and seems to be doing a good business.

Menlo Park Horticultural Society.

The first spring show that has been held under the auspices of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society took place here June 20. The show was only of one day's duration, but it proved to be a great success, in spite of the very inclement weather which has prevailed in this locality of late. The exhibits were large and varied and it proved conclusively that the growers and private gardeners, and also the members of this society, can do things even if the weather conditions are not all that is to be desired. The display of Spencer sweet peas surpassed all expectations and some grand stock was on view. Out-door roses also were shown in great variety and proved to be a great attraction. The flowering shrub section was very excellent, considering growing conditions, as also were the displays of perennials and annuals.

The sweepstakes gold medal, awarded to the exhibitor winning the most first prizes, was awarded to the Lynch Nursery Company of Menlo Park, Calif. Special mention must be made of the grand new roses shown by George Nunn and the splendid exhibit of pot gloxinias by Joseph Paneicka, gardener to Mrs. Chas. G. Lathrop. Mr. Paneicka's tuberous begonias, as well as his Spencer sweet peas, were very fine. John W. Daly, gardener to J. Lewy Nickel, showed a splendid lot of Burbank's new hybrid amaryllis; also, perennials and flowering shrubs. John Patterson's sweet peas showed splendid culture and the same can be said of his show of flowering shrubs.

David Bassett's roses in the collections carried off first honors, and it was an award well bestowed, as they were grand. The pansy display was a feature and the competition very keen. First honors went to Edward O'Neill, head gardener to the Talbot C. Walker estate, for a magnificent exhibit. An award of merit was given to the Walker estate for a magnificent show of Silver Pink antirrhinum; these were very beautiful and splendidly grown. David W. Slade, gardener to S. Spalding, showed some of the finest digitalis ever seen in this locality. Henry Wright's exhibit of roses was greatly appreciated by the visitors.

Several awards were made for displays of wild flowers arranged by children and there were quite a number of exhibits not entered for competition, chief among which was the carnations of Henry Goertzhain of Redwood City. Sidney Clock officiated as judge and all his decisions were well received.

At the next monthly meeting of the society a smoker will be held and the society takes this means of inviting any member of the craft who should happen to be in this vicinity at that time. The date is June 10. As yet this society is undecided as to where the fall show will be held. As there is no hall of suitable size in Menlo Park it will probably be held in Palo Alto again this year. The members of this wide-awake organization have long held the dream that some day the society would own its own building, but owing to various reasons that time has not arrived as yet. Arrangements will be made shortly for the annual outing, the one day that every member looks forward to with pleasure.

Joplin, Mo.

The second annual rose show given under the auspices of the Country club, May 23, was a decided success from a floral standpoint, although the attendance was greatly reduced by inclement weather. Fifteen-foot tables were used to display the exhibits, which were in six divisions, while smaller tables carried displays from the Country club rose garden, not for competition, while another splendid display, not for competition, was a magnificent vase of Mrs. Charles Russell roses sent by H. A. Hall, florist, to add to the general display. A high compliment was paid the exhibition by William L. Rock, of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, Mo., chairman of the jury of awards, who stated that with professional florists eliminated Kansas City could not stage a rose exhibition its equal.

The jury of awards, consisting of William L. Rock of Kansas City, William P. Stark of Neosho and H. A. Hall of Joplin, performed the finely discriminating duties of their position in a most thorough and satisfactory manner, and prominent among the prize winners were the following:

Mrs. W. H. Landreth, Mrs. David Joseph, G. M. Leonard, S. C. Lindsey, Mrs. J. H. Spurgeon, Mrs. J. M. Hirons, Mrs. C. E. Matthews. Other beautiful exhibits which failed to receive prizes, but were given honorable mention by the judges were made by Miss Jean Gregg Wise, Mrs. H. M. McKenna, Mrs. H. H. Gregg; Mrs. Robeson, Mrs. H. S. Davis, Miss Bess Hackett, Mrs. A. K. Mills.

Newport, R. I.

It seems safe to predict that the coming exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society to be held in the Newport Casino, July 8-9, will be one of excellence, if the interest taken by local growers is any criterion. The casino is an ideal place for the exhibition, being spacious and handsome, and affords visitors a chance to "rub elbows" with Newport's "high society," which may be an attraction for the gentler sex.

COMMENCEMENT ORDERS IN GOOD NUMBERS.

Conditions in the cut flower market have been very dull, a good demand for peonies being the exception. There was the usual good demand for Memorial day stock, and orders are coming in at a lively rate for commencements, giving promise of excellent business.

NOTES.

Halliday Bros are having an excellent demand for out-door plants. Commencement orders are coming in and heavy business in this line is anticipated.

Wm. E. Seidewitz reports cut flower business quiet, but he has been very busy with landscape work.

Hamilton Floral Shop and Samuel Feast & Son report excellent business in commencement orders.

FT. WORTH, TEX.—Good business and a satisfactory clean up of its surplus is reported by the Drumm Seed & Floral Co.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade June 2 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.

DE GRAAFF BROS., Ltd., of Leiden, Holland, are not neglecting the exploitation of their Darwin and Cottage tulips, in the face of war troubles.

ONION SEED crop reports from California continue unfavorable, especially on yellows. The Sacramento river district seems to look best just now.

ATLANTA, GA.—The death is announced, May 22, of J. H. Everett, 65 years old, pioneer Atlantan and proprietor of the Everett Seed Company.

FARGO, N. D.—Landblom & Vincent have dissolved partnership, the latter retiring, and the business will now be conducted as the H. L. Landblom Seed Co.

FIELD CORN in some cases will have to be replanted, owing to the unfavorable weather. That which is out of the ground is about two inches high and off in color, owing to the absence of sunshine.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. V. Jackson, of Falmouth Mushroom Cellars, Inc., Falmouth, Mass.; W. B. Lucas, of the John H. Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis.

SANTA ANA, CALIF.—The Haven Seed Co., making a specialty of tomato seed, will be pleased to see any trade visitors who may favor them with a call during the convention trip.

THE department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., has just issued Bulletin 195 on "Potato Breeding and Selection," containing much information of value to potato breeders and growers.

FLORAL PARK, N. Y.—Linnaeus Allen says cabbage for seed at present looks very fine. There has been plenty of rain which is most needed during April and May to give the stock a good growth.

PARIS, KY.—Spears & Son write May 22: "The blue grass harvest will begin in two weeks. While it is yet too early to form a correct estimate of the crop, the yield will be much less than an average one and in our opinion prices should be higher."

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Puritan Plant & Seed Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. Officers are as follows: Guy C. Hawkins, president; Irving J. Clark, vice-president; Jesse W. Hawkins, secretary-treasurer. The office of the concern will be in the Plymouth building, this city.

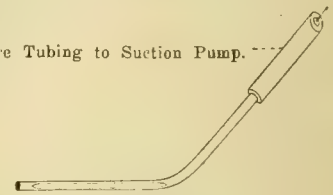
AT the meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, held at New York, May 26, as noted in our issue of May 29, the following directors were in attendance: F. W. Bruggerhof, Capt. Burnet Landreth, S. F. Willard, Joseph Breck, T. W. Wood, John L. Hunt, W. Atlee Burpee and Lem W. Bowen. The visitors included David Burpee, Burnet Landreth, Jr., and E. E. Bruggerhof.

ONION SETS.—Contract growers of onion sets at Chicago, who are in position to know, say that the present stand looks like 85 per cent of a crop. There has been some loss because of low vitality of seed and on very low ground the crop has suffered slightly from rains, but excess moisture of the last two weeks has in the main been helpful. Maggots do not breed in such weather.

LONDON, ENG., MAY 20.—R. Van der Schoot, the well known bulb grower of Hillegom, Holland, is here on his usual annual tour through Great Britain. There is probably no more popular Hollander among the English trade than Mr. Van der Schoot, who has annually visited the trade establishments in this country for 25 years. He meets many of his friends at the R. H. S. shows in this city.

Seed Counter.

In preparing tests of seed germination, a great deal of rather monotonous work is required in counting the seeds. The device to be described was worked out to obviate part of this labor, and has proved very efficient in our seed laboratory. In the hope that it will save valuable time for other workers in this field the following description is presented:



The seed counter is made from a piece of brass or copper tubing 20 cm. in length and about .5 cm. in diameter. This is bent in the middle at an agle of 45° and then on one side filed almost paper thin for a distance of 8 cm. At intervals of .7 cm. on this flattened side ten holes of suitable diameter are punched with a needle and hammer. One end of the tube on the side nearest the holes is sealed with solder or sealing wax, and the other end is connected by .5 cm. rubber pressure tubing to a small Richards air pump.

The seeds to be counted are placed in a flat tray and the pump started. The suction through the fine openings holds the seeds in lots of ten to the tube, which are removed by a flick of the finger. In case more than one seed adheres to a hole the extra ones can be quickly removed by tapping the tube, or with the finger. It will be found advisable to have tubes made up with various sizes of holes, one for small seeds such as tobacco, with openings as small as can be made with a No. 7 needle; one with medium-sized holes of .5 mm., which are best adapted to seeds of the size of radish, clover, etc., and one with holes of 1 mm. in diameter. Seeds with a very rough exterior such as beet seed do not lend themselves well to this method of counting, as the surface is too uneven to be held by the suction. Large seeds—beans, peas and corn for instance—are too heavy to be held by the suction produced by the small Richards pump, but there is no doubt that with a stronger suction such as that produced by a vacuum cleaner this method could be used in counting these heavier seeds.—Orton L. Clark, Mass. Agri. Exp. Station, in Science.

California Seed Crops.

The California Seed Growers' Association, writing under date of May 17, say that continuous rains for the past six weeks and severe cold weather, accompanied by heavy north winds, are conditions that have changed to a considerable extent the rosy outlook for crops early in March.

Onion.—This crop shows more damage than any other. The continued wet weather has started mildew working in the fields and at the present writing the prospect is far from encouraging. Many fields of onions planted on low ground have suffered greatly from the wet condition and even without any mildew the crop will be greatly reduced. Not for several years has the mildew shown so much activity in the onion fields. Should the condition not improve, the onion seed crop is bound to be very light.

Beet.—Owing to the wet condition of the ground, planting was delayed much more than we had anticipated early in March and some varieties of beets are therefore showing a severe rot, principally the Flat Egyptian and Detroit. We are giving the fields every attention possible, hoping to nurse the plants along. The outlook for this crop is not so "rosy" as we thought six weeks ago.

Lettuce.—We are somewhat anxious over this crop. The continued rains are unseasonable and where the lettuce has developed large heads, a rot is very likely to start. In fact, some varieties, principally Big Boston, are showing signs of rot. If, however, we have dry winds for a while, the damage will be small. Late planted lettuce, of course, will be greatly benefited.

Endive, Mustard, Radish.—These crops are looking fine especially the radish; our radish was planted early and has been greatly helped by the rains. We should harvest a good crop on all varieties now growing.

Carrot, Parsnip, Parsley. — These crops do not seem to be injured in any way by the weather and the prospects are promising for a good crop.

SEEDSMEN

1915 is Exposition and Convention year in California. We urge that you plan to visit California this season. Seedsmen who are interested in beans will find the seed bean farms at Carpinteria and Lompoc where, we produce large quantities of seed beans for seedsmen who are particular about quality, especially interesting during the summer season. We shall be glad to have you call on us at Carpinteria, the place where many of the leading varieties of Lima Beans were originated, several of them on our seed farms. We make a study of growing seed beans.

Henry Fish Seed Co., Carpinteria, Calif.

Salsify.—This crop seems a little backward and we do not believe the yield will be up to normal.

Sweet Peas.—The cold blast has killed the first flowers on the sweet peas. The outcome of the crop will depend on the second blooms. We believe, however, the yield will be somewhat reduced.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The potato crop is from two to three weeks late, and appears to be considerably damaged, due to rain and cold weather. Large acreages of tomato plants north of this city have been destroyed by low temperatures, while the same conditions have benefited millions of tomato plants grown locally to supply large packers and growers. Field corn in the east is very backward. Cabbage and pea crops have been materially benefited by weather conditions.

Summer Treatment of Greenhouse Soils.

Greenhouses demand a much richer soil than is usually found in even the best trucking types, and when a greenhouse is built, usually some time passes before maximum yields can be obtained. It is essential that a greenhouse soil should contain an abundance of humus which means future plant food, as well as that its mechanical condition be good. At the Ohio agricultural experiment station, Wooster, and also by many vegetable growers, according to Bulletin 281 of that station, the method used in preparing greennouse soil is the so-called "sod compost." Few of the larger growers have time or material to so prepare the soil for their ranges, but all can certainly prepare enough for use in seed and plant flats.

Its preparation is simple. A supply of good thick sod should be obtained. If bluegrass sod is not at hand, clover or timothy sod can be used as well or any soil in which there is an abundance of decaying vegetable matter. Muck or wood soils are especially desirable. Old greenhouse soils may be used if thoroughly weathered, or if the compost is not intended for immediate use. Good fresh horse manure is desirable, though any available manure can be used, but the drier manures are to be prefered because of their higher calorific value, which results in a quicker decomposition of the mixture. A convenient site is selected, an estimate of the material made and foundations laid for a pile six to eight feet wide and about five feet high and of any desired length. A layer of about six inches of sod is placed, and on top of this about the same amount of manure, another layer of sod, and so on until the pile is completed.

While the compost pile is generally built in the fall and allowed to stand all winter, after which it is worked over, giving the manure and sod a thorough mixing, the compost heap can also be made in the spring, and with care in keeping it moist and by frequently forking it over, it may be made ready for the greenhouse within six months, but a longer time is generally required.

Asters Under Glass.

At the present time there is a close search for a profitable crop under glass. This has induced florists to plant cucumbers and tomatoes to follow carnations, and in turn will induce vegetable growers to try asters and chrysanthemums. We have ourselves used asters to fill our small plant houses where head room is insufficient for cucumbers or tomatoes. The results have been quite satisfactory, as we have been able to produce very fine asters indeed. The market is also favorable to us, as this section (Ohio), is very much against asters out doors.

The great enemy of asters here is the tarnished plant bug. We have known growers of asters out doors who could not account for their lack of success because they were utterly unaware of the destruction caused by this bug. The damage is done by puncturing the young succulent shoots bearing buds. The puncture is first followed by a slight wilting and later by a stunted, knotty growth and either no flowers or worthless ones is the result. This bug is as active as the striped melon bug, hence is hard to combat. By indoor culture we have so far avoided this pest and also the black bettle, which devours the mature blossoms. Under glass we are also able to produce a longer stem, a purer color, and we can carry a crop a long time in perfect condition by withholding water from the blossoms. A long, rainy spell in the fall often plays havoc with out door asters for cut-flower purposes.

So far we have used entirely American seed of American varieties, using mostly the types of late branching. As regards colors, white must predominate, shell pink follows and rose pink in small proportion. The reds, blues and purples are slow sale and must be avoided. Aster plants delight in rich soil and ample moisture. Lettuce beds should grow fine asters. We find lime very beneficial. Asters like all annuals, are very sensitive to checks when young—so much so that when plants are crowded in seed or plant beds and allowed to draw up they are worthless. Spaced 10x10 we have been able to produce from 6 to 10 fine blossoms which have sold for $1 per hundred wholesale. There is a fair demand for good, long-stemmed flowers right up to chrysanthemum season, that is about Oct. 15.

Asters delight under syringing and spraying, which is half the battle against thrips and red spider. We sow our first seeds about April 1 and then at intervals of two weeks up to about June 5.

NEWCASTLE, IND.—Lindey & Dawson, florists, have an excellent supply of stock at their greenhouse on Seventeenth street, and anticipate good Memorial day business.

LANSING, MICH.—According to Prof. C. P. Halligan of the horticultural department of the Michigan Agricultural College, there has been little damage done to the fruit crop by the recent frosts.

WE are in receipt of the Thirty-second annual report of the park commissioners of Minneapolis, Minn., a very elaborate book of 157 pages, profusely illustrated with maps and halftone engravings.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Thomas A. Bean of Dahlgren, Ill., purported to be a nurseryman, was sentenced to serve five years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., by the United States district court, May 14, for using the mail to defraud.

RIVERSIDE, CALIF.—In addition to two city parks and a large play ground, a small mountain, known as Huntington park, is used for planting forest trees. The tract embraces 280 acres and a winding drive leads from the city to the summit, 1,350 feet high.

The Flowering Dogwood.

This tree (Cornus florida) is now in flower and of unusual beauty this year. It is not native in the arboretum, but has been largely planted here and is now the most conspicuous plant, perhaps, in the roadside plantations. Comparatively rare in this latitude, the flowering dogwood is very abundant southward, and in early spring gives to the forest margins of the middle and southern states one of their greatest charms. The flowering dogwood of the east, beautiful as it is, is not so handsome as the species from the Pacific states, Cornus Nuttallii, which is a tree sometimes 60 or 70 feet high, with involucres to the flower-clusters nearly twice as wide as those of Cornus florida. Cornus Nattallii grows in damp woods under the shade of coniferous trees and is difficult to keep alive outside its native forests. It has never succeeded in the arboretum and appears to have flowered in Europe in only a few gardens. The Japanese representative of this group, Cornus kousa, is hardy and flowers abundantly in eastern Massachusetts. It is a small tree which flowers later than Cornus florida and differs from it in its smaller pointed floral bracts, and is chiefly valuable for prolonging the flowering time of these beautiful plants.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 19, 1915.

American Association of Nurserymen.

The officers of the American Association of Nurserymen are making special effort to bring together at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, the largest aggregation of nurserymen that ever attended one of its trade conventions. An exceptional program of papers, etc., is being arranged by Chairman C. R. Burr, and there will be no lack of quality in either speakers or subjects. Chairman T. I. Ilgenfritz is putting the finishing touches on entertainment arrangements. Detroit and its environments afford the greatest variety of attractive places imaginable, either on land or water. A visit to the "City Beautiful" can be made one of the most satisfactory of vacations.

A very thorough canvass for new members is being made by the membership committee under direction of Will B. Munson. The personnel of the committee is: Luther A. Breck, Boston, Mass., New England states; A. F. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., middle Atlantic Coast states; Paul C. Lindley, Pomona, N. C., southern Atlantic and gulf states; H. D. Simpson, Vincennes, Indiana, central states; G. A. Marshall, Arlington, Neb., northern central states west of Mississippi river; M. McDonald, Orenco, Oregon, Pacific coast states. Members in 1914 are urged to send in their renewals with advt's for badge book immediately, to ensure an early mailing of this valuable publication. The 1915 badge button will be a strikingly attractive one. This fortieth convention should go on record as the best ever.

JOSEPH HEACOCK CO., Railway Station, Jenkintown. Wyncote, Pa.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The second May meeting of this society was held Friday evening, May 28, in the County building, Hartford, President Mason, chairman. Edward A. Brassill, acting as chairman of the June flower show committee, G. H. Hollister, the chairman elect, suffering from a felon, being unable to act, created quite a furore by his report on the coming show, which is to be held June 10, in Unity hall, Pratt street, Hartford. During the week preceding the meeting, members of the committee mentioned called upon Mrs. William H. Palmer, Mrs. Russell L. Jones and Miss Rose Johnson, and these ladies, being present, having been appointed a committee to represent the Union for Home Work, the two committees went over the ground thoroughly as to the details of the show. The ladies will serve tea during the afternoon, and tentative plans call for a tea-garden and young ladies (members of the Union for Home Work) will serve a light lunch for the small charge of 10 cents. John F. Huss, superintendent of the Goodwin estate; our president, Warren S. Mason, superintendent of the Pope estate at Farmington, and A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, have promised to furnish flowers and plants for decorative purposes. The society voted unanimously to award diplomas for exhibits of merit. Stumpp & Walter Company of New York offer $2.50 in gold for the best display made by any one exhibitor.

At the meeting there was shown an exceedingly fine specimen of Campanula Medium lavender, measuring more than three feet high and containing 248 blooms. This plant created quite a sensation among the members by its beauty and splendid growth. It was grown by Alfred Cebelius, head gardener for Professor Jacobus, and received a first-class certificate. Mr. Cebelius also exhibited two varieties of Lupinus polyphyllus, blue and rosea, and Emerus robustrum. John F. Huss had a display of shrubs, among them being three varieties of Dueztzia, gracilis, Lemoinii, and apple blossom; also Dictamnus fraxinella, D. alba, D. rosea; Viburnum tormentosum and Spirea van Houttii. He was awarded a certificate of merit. Warren S. Mason, of Farmington, had the following: Anchusa Italica, Trollius Europa, Dicentra spectabilis, Hesperis matrionalis, Hemerocallis flava, Hesperis sweet rocket, armeria or thrift, Myosotis alpestris, Victoria rose, Alyssum saxatile and others. He also received a certificate of merit. Three new members were admitted to the society. The next meeting will be held in Unity hall, Pratt street, on Wednesday evening, June 9, and all the members should make a special effort to be present in order that the flower show may meet with the highest success.

MCMINNVILLE, ORE.—S. H. Maris, of the Pioneer Greenhouses, says trade has been better here since about the first of last September than ever before and has more than doubled this spring in plant and window and porch box work. Prices on plants have been about 50 per cent better than heretofore. This city is surrounded by a very rich farming country and all farm produce has brought good prices, so locally money has been plentiful and times good.

Cast Iron Boilers Crack

I want to thank you for your promptness in shipping the boiler I ordered of you on January 13th. I had a breakdown, one of a battery of two cast iron boilers cracked so it was impossible to use same, so I got you on the telephone at 8:30 a. m., January 13th, and ordered one of your hot water boilers. Same was put in my boiler room in the afternoon of January 15th, after which we built foundation and connected up. Since that time the boiler has taken care of same glass heated by the two cast iron boilers doing the work easier and better in every way.

Los Angeles.

J. J. Reeves, of the Beverly Hills Nursery, predicts that carob is to be the coming street tree for this section. Mr. Reeves must be complimented on the general appearance of the nursery and the lath houses. In the nursery all rows of stock are straight, no weeds between rows, soil all well cultivated and something growing on every foot of ground. Pot and tub plants under lath are all specimen plants and are artistically arranged. Both are great selling helps for the salesman and are convincing to the purchaser.

The West Indian Gardens, at Altadena, Calif., state the business in the sub-tropical fruit trees has been very good for the season just closing. Their fields and lath houses verify the statement, being nearly cleaned out. The different varieties of avocado, the feijoa, the sapota and many of the other tropical and sub-tropical fruits are steadily increasing in demand.

H. J. Scherer, who is well known in southern California in the horticultural field and who has been connected with the Roeding & Wood Nursery Co., Los Angeles, for some time, on June 1, assumed the position vacated by the resignation of G. E. Elster. From his wide experience in the nursery business there is no doubt as to his success. It is Mr. Elster's intention to remain in the nursery business, but not to locate for at least a month, during which time he is to take a vacation, motoring up the coast and spending some time with his parents at Exeter, Calif.

The Jannoch Nurseries, of Pasadena, show increased business by leasing considerable more land adjoining the present grounds. Although a little quiet at this time, P. W. Jannoch looks for big business this coming fall and winter.

"Date Growing, in the Old World and in the New," recently published by Paul B. Popenoe of the West India Gardens, Altadena, Calif., is the only book ever published on date culture. The volume contains over 300 pages, deals in detail with every stage of the operations, from the purchase of land, to the marketing of the crop. Cultivation, fertilization, irrigation, pollenization, artificial ripening, picking, packing, diseases and pests are all given comprehensive treatment and 90 of the most important varieties in the United Sttaes are fully described. It is fully illustrated and is worthy a place on the shelves of every fruit grower.

Devastating Eelworm Found Again.

The devastating eelworm, or, to give it its scientific name, the Tylenchus devastatrix, has been found again in the Pacific northwest several hundred miles from the point where it was discovered in 1913. This tiny thread-like organism is a member of the great family of nematodes and is remarkably destructive to many forms of bulbous plants. Commercially, its chief importance is due to its ravages in onion fields, but it also feeds to a great extent upon flowering bulbs such as hyacinths, and upon such crops as rye, oats, hemp, potatoes, strawberries, etc. This pest has proved extremely destructive in parts of Europe, particularly in Holland, and in Australia as well. Hitherto, the United States appears to have been practically free from it, but the new infestation in the northwest following upon that of two years ago indicates the existence of danger that it may establish itself here. The devastating eelworm thrives best in moist regions where the temperature varies to a comparatively small extent. These climatic conditions are found in Holland and in the areas in the Pacific northwest where the pest has been discovered. On the other hand, there is reason to believe that this particular nematode will not survive cold winters in which the ground is frozen solid for a considerable depth, or that at least it will not become a serious menace under such conditions.

The devastating eelworm is so small that although under the most favorable circumstances it may occasionally be detected with the naked eye, it is practically certain to escape observation. As in the case of microbes its presence is usually made known only by its effects. The young nematodes hatching from eggs laid in the infested plant feed on the juices and tissues of the plant until it is destroyed. They multiply with extraordinary rapidity so that the bulb soon swarms with them, and they also often find their way into the upper leaves. In the case of the onion, the leaves of the affected plants become swollen and flabby and the bulb soft and puffy. The whole plant has a peculiar stunted and distorted appearance, and ultimately the bulb rots away. If a portion of the bulb or one of the swollen leaves be placed in a dish of water and observed under a magnifying glass, tiny transparent worms may be seen escaping into the water.

Once a crop has become infested with these nematodes there is no known cure. In fact, there is no known way of absolutely eradicating any of the soil-inhabiting, plant-infesting nematodes. The most effective measure is to starve the pest out, either by allowing the land to lie fallow, or by planting it to crops that furnish little or no nourishment to the eelworm. Corn and barley are among the crops recommended for this purpose. It is cheaper, however, to prevent the pests gaining a foothold than to fight them in this way. Any diseased plant should be uprooted and burned at once, and no bulbs or seed should be purchased from localities where the devastating eelworm is known to exist, for the pest is most commonly spread by shipments of infected bulbs and seeds. The eggs and larvae of this species of nematode have been known to revive after having been in a lethargic condition in the upper layers of the soil for years. Once a nematode has gained a footing in a locality it may spread in any number of ways. Running water, the feet of men and animals, and infected plant material blown about by the wind are among the most common means.

The Michigan Peach.

Most every year
We're sure to hear
The peach crop has been lost;
That it is chilled,
Knocked out and killed
And buried by Jack Frost.

But if, forsooth,
You'd learn the truth,
Just stroll along the beaches,
And you will see,
Take it from me,
A good large crop of "peaches."

Washington Rose Garden Dedicated

Inspection and Ceremony at National Capitol, June 2.

Rain Christens Arlington Test Grounds.

In response to the invitation of the American Rose Society, a goodly company of its members and other lovers of the rose journeyed to the capital to inspect the national rose test garden and participate in the ceremony of its dedication, which took place Wednesday, June 2. There were twenty-seven visitors registered, coming from Boston and other eastern points, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. In addition were a number of the Washington florists and various members of the United States department of agriculture. The weather was ideal in some respects; there was no dust, no hot asphalt streets, no wilting of collars; but, on the other hand it was a day of rain coats, galoshes and umbrellas, for the heavens were opened and it poured all day long. Such conditions, however, were not sufficient to dampen the ardor of these earnest rose enthusiasts who motored out to the garden and spent an hour inspecting the blooms that had not been beaten into the mud by the steady rainfall and the strong wind which accompanied it.

The garden is some two acres in extent, one half of which is laid out in longitudinal beds, between which are turf paths. One or more of these are planted with the different types or species of the queen of flowers. Section one, contains the Polyantha or baby rambler type; next come several beds given up to the hybrid teas; then the teas, after which come the hybrids. The mosses are given a section, as are the rugosas and the briars. The ramblers are numerously represented, having a place on the light wire fence that marks the enclosure, and others are tied to stakes in the test beds. There are between four and five hundred different varieties now planted out, a number of the sorts being so numerous as to make one or two rows across a plot. All are labeled, but not very conspicuously—a large broad wooden label half an inch thick, painted white, has a raised letter aluminum name plate tacked on top and following the rounder contour of the label. One has to look very close to decipher it.

The plants were for the most part strong and vigorous, some sorts being exceedingly well developed. A raised mound in the middle of the side next that which is to be the extension, will, when the garden is completed be its center and contain a pagoda or summer house. It is also intended to add ornamental features as the roses grow, so as to finally make this one of, if not the must beautiful, garden of its kind in this country. A short distance away is what is called the perfume garden, where there is planted about half an acre of roses in variety, whose flowers are large and very fragrant, and are gathered and pressed for the oil. This experiment is to give data to encourage the making of perfumery in this country.

The Arlington farm, or test garden, contain an immense number of plants in hundreds of varieties, peaches, apples, pears, being planted side by side for comparison. One plot of over 300 varieties of strawberries was seen; another of 300 sorts of irises; thousands of peonies in great variety filled a section. In fact there appeared to be no end to the quantity and variety of plants under test, from all of which careful records are kept and filed for reference, available to any interested person. An interesting feature of the perfume garden was the original specimen of the Wichuraiana hybrid rose, raised by Dr. Van Fleet and named in honor of himself by the authorities. It is a beautiful variety.

A feature of the farm is a model house and barn, surrounded by beautiful lawns, laid out with a wide drive way and with shrubbery beds and some climbing roses giving life and color to the scheme. The barn is made of cement slabs to make it as fireproof as possible. The idea is to present a modern building plan for the small farm that will cost no more to erect than other styles that lack beauty and are not so roomy and efficient. The decoration and plan of the grounds greatly enhance the appearance of the place. It is the intention of the department of agriculture to have in the farm house, as far as possible, all the conveniences to be found in city mansion of like size. The surroundings are to be made beautiful with shrubbery and flowers together with well laid out grounds, all of which is done to make the farmer and his family, find in their home the comfort and independence that is so often sought for and seldom found on the farm.

United States. He told of the influences of roses and other flowers in everyday life and declared that every man that plants a flower garden is a public benefactor.

Wm. A. Taylor, chief of the bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, who represented the secretary of agriculture, accepted the plants for the government. He spoke of the stabilizing effect of flowers in farm life and said a farmer becomes more attached to his home when he has a flower garden and plants about his lawn. The department, he stated, would do all they could to encourage such ornamentation, so as to make the farmer and his family satisfied with their chosen calling.

WASHINGTON ROSE TEST GARDEN.

View Across the Garden.

Returning to the city the dedication exercises took place in the large lodge room, 1214 F street. There were about 60 gentlemen present. Wm. F. Gude welcomed the delegates on behalf of the Washington Florists' Club and introduced the president of the American Rose Society, Wallace R. Pierson, who thanked the members of the society for the support they had given him the past year. He spoke of the modest beginning of the first test garden at Hartford, Conn., which had been of great interest to the trade. The municipal rose garden there, he said, was the finest in America. From this, other trial grounds had been established at Ithaca, N. Y., Minneapolis, Minn., and this great garden in Washington. The problem of handling these grounds had been solved by appointing local committees for each garden. Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., is chairman of the Washington committee and he introduced him to conduct the meeting. Mr. Pyle declared that the garden which was to be dedicated, and in fact, referring to the rain, christened that day, would become in fact, as well as in location, the national rose garden of the country. District Commissioner Louis Brownlow then welcomed the delegates. He spoke of the growing interest in the national capital for gardens and stated that the commissioners stood ready to aid in every way movements of this kind. Mr. Pierson then made formal presentation to the government of the roses now growing in the test garden, stating how they had been donated by rose growers residing in all parts of the

W. A. Mulford, in charge of the experimental farm, explained the plans that had been made for the rose testing garden. He outlined the beds and told of the positions of the various varieties. The turf paths have been planted with various grass seeds to determine which were the best for the purpose. The added improvements as the garden grew in extent were outlined, the ornamental features touched on, and the garden of the future pictured, was most beautiful.

David Fairchild, in charge of the foreign plant and seed distribution, was chiefly interested in the development of hardy roses that can be grown in almost any yard of the country. He stated that the department stands ready to obtain for experimental purposes, any new species of the rose of which it learns; no matter where growing or how difficult to reach, it would if possible, be brought here and its good qualities tested. Agents of the United States are continuously traveling in all parts of the world, investigating new species of vegetables, fruits and flowers, sending or bringing home anything of merit.

Peter Bissett, of the division of foreign plant distribution, also promised that if any new species of rose was known of that could not be obtained through commercial channels, the department would do their utmost to obtain it for trial in this country. Dr. Van Fleet, a noted hybridizer and originator of new roses, notably the Wichuraiana hybrids, American Pillar and Silver Moon, was called on and predicted great things in the future. George Field, the father of the American Beauty, expressed his pleasure at being present. The dedicatory address was made by Wm. F. Gude, whom Mr. Pyle introduced as a general in the rose growers' army of America. Mr. Gude spoke of the uplifting influence of flowers in the betterment of mankind; a fine start had been made in the movement for a natural rose garden and it was up to the florists of the country to make it a garden of beauty that will be a credit to the nation and a place of pilgrimage for all lovers of flowers. He also spoke of the great results obtained through the efforts of Representative Carlin of Virginia in making the Arlington farm accessible by the addition of good roads. He hoped that the work would go on with increasing interest, working up a love for the rose all over the country, until a "rose for every home and a bush for every garden" would become a fact.

David Fairchild, of the department of agriculture, gave some interesting facts in reference to rose species, referring particularly to the species from China, Rosa Hugonis and Xansina as being very hardy, coming from a latitude very similar to this country. These two sorts seemed to open the same kind of vista as the old India species. Rosa gigantea, single white, with flowers six to seven inches in diameter, was a wonder. He passed around two Lumiere color plates, showing these Chinese species in flower. Mr. Pierson also spoke of the splendid work of the American hybridizers in their crosses of Wichuraiana hybrids, and the great results that are to be expected in the future with the introduction of new species that promise even more wonderful results.

Secretary Benjamin Hammond, of the American Rose Society, saw great results from the work of that organization, stating that it had already much to its credit and would continue the work by means of exhibitions and in every way assist in cultivating the love for flowers. No man who planted flowers ever did a neighborhood any harm. The perfected national rose garden, he said, would be the beauty spot that would always be visited by the June brides on their honeymoon trips to the capital. A standing vote of thanks was given to the Washington gentlemen who had done so much to make the visit of the delegates a success.

At the close of the meeting the entire party motored to "Twin Oaks," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. J. Bell, where after a reception by Mrs. Bell, who was a most gracious hostess, and partaking of refreshments, an inspection of the rose garden was made. A series of arches over the walk to the greenhouse, about two hundred feet from the mansion, each planted with a different variety of ramblers, many of them in full flower, was a grand sight, and the arch of Tausendschon was loaded with blossoms and wonderfully beautiful. Another of a single bright pink called Luchstien, was very floriferous and showy, as was a long hedge of the same. Mrs. A. G. Bell, a pink seedling, raised by Peter Bissett, covers one of the arches; it has not been sent out and appears to be a very valuable variety. A summer house, an arbor covered with several varieties, was a feature. The garden contained quite a large collection of hybrid and hybrid tea roses, which with their wealth of bloom made a beautiful display. In spite of the disagreeable weather the visitors thoroughly enjoyed the visit and will ever remember this beautiful spot and its charming hostess.

The Washington brethern, led by the Gude brothers, were untiring in their efforts to provide for the comfort of the visitors. They had planned a visit to Arlington cemetery, an automobile tour through the zoo gardens, Rock Creek park and the environs of Washington, but which had to be given up on account of the inclement weather. E. Allan Peirce, L. J. Rueter and Robt. Kift, who stayed over the next day, were given the pleasure of this trip by the Messrs. Gude, being taken on an extended tour of the city by these gentlemen. Fred Cramer is another of the live wires of the national city, to whom a visiting brother of the craft is always of special interest; only the best is good enough, and no money, except that which passes through his hands, is negotiable. Long life to them all. The gentlemen attending were S. S. Pennock, Alfred Burton, A. Farenwald, Victor Groschens, Chas. E. Meehan, Stephen Mortenson, Edward J. Fancourt, J. G. Eisele, Geo. D. Clark, G. C. Watson, Robert Kift, all of Philadelphia, Pa.; E. Allan Peirce, Alfred E. Robinson, Luther A. Breck, Sheldon A. Robinson, G. H. B. Flowers for Commencements.

The custom of presenting bouquets to the fair graduates on class days and at commencements has long been in vogue, and while at times it has met with opposition from school and college officials on account of the trouble in their correct distribution and the expense entailed by some not able to bear it, the practice still prevails, and can be said to be quite as much a feature as at any time in the past. Flowers are forbidden in some school exercises and have to be sent to the homes of the scholars; in other schools all club together, the graduates adopting a class flower, and by giving the order to one florist, get a quantity discount. The bouquets are then all alike, and there is no jealousy on account of some being larger or handsomer than others.

The standard commencement bunch is generally a loose cluster of carnations or roses in all medium grades, or American Beauties. Sweet peas are also popular. They are often adopted as a class flower, and large bunches of these are almost sure to be seen at commencement time. Where class or school colors are hard to carry out with flowers, it is best to have them select a suitable variety which can be made up and tied with the school or college ribbons and are then generally acceptable. A positive man, who knows the school business, can meet a committee, delegated to do something almost impossible, and by pointing out the difficulties of their plans and selections, substitute something just as effective and more suitable, and which he knows there will be no trouble to procure in quantity. The bouquets, tied with school or college ribbons, can be made of almost any popular flower and come pretty near to filling the bill. A good sample line of college ribbons is a great help in landing orders and should always be on hand in the ribbon case.

Bouquets for these occasions should always have individual boxes; when lying around subject to drafts, they soon present a wilted appearance, but keep fresh when enclosed in the box until wanted for use. Baskets are also popular, particularly those with zinc linings, which hold water or very wet moss, and flowers will keep almost as well in these as in vases of water. Many are what might be called vase baskets, as they will hold quite long stemmed flowers. A basket of this kind, with its high handle and ribbon decoration, is very effective. Snapdragons, which are now very fine and as cheap as roses, arrange splendidly in baskets of this kind. At times the order is for corsages, tied with the class colors. Sweet peas are the best flowers for this purpose; the roses or carnations snap off so easily if not wired, and this is generally objectionable. Many baskets that have become shopworn can be painted or gilded up and worked off in the commencement demand. They should all have tins, which, if not in stock, can often be secured at the house furnishing stores at low prices, the pressed stock sizes of pudding pans or tin buckets, being very often suitable for the purpose. Where school colors are not necessary, a showy bow of ribbon to match or contrast with the flowers, tied to the handle of the basket, is worth the expense in the better finish it gives to the piece. When there is not, owing to price, much leeway for ribbon, a chiffon may be used, together with corsage ribbon of the same or good contrasting color. This is often very effective and is as satisfactory as the higher grades of ribbon.

Care should be taken in orders for these large occasions, that the names of the persons to whom they are directed are written plainly, so as to be read at a glance. If possible a receipt obtained from the head usher or other person having charge of the bouquets should be secured. This is of great help if some of the flowers should not be delivered to the proper persons, and puts the blame where it belongs.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Planting Commercial Stock.

The month of June is the planting season for the commercial cut flower stock and is a busy time for the chrysanthemum grower. Preparations should now be under way to get everything about the houses in condition to receive the plants; all cleaning and repairing both of the house and benches should be attended to. After attending to these matters our next consideration is that of the soil. Chrysanthemums respond readily to liberal treatment and will grow vigorously in a rich soil, but often to the detriment of fine flowers, by exhausting their strength early in the life of the plant by making an overabundant growth of foliage and stem. The aim then should be to prepare the soil rich enough to encourage the plants to make a sturdy, active growth naturally from the start and without any degree of forcing or softness. There will be plenty of time to gradually add more feed as the growth of the plants develop and they are able to take care of it, as well as reap a greater benefit from it. For the same reason (to encourage a sturdy growth) a firm soil is better for chrysanthemums than a light one. Should the soil at the grower's command not be heavy enough, a little clay mixed through it will benefit it greatly. We have to follow this method with most of the soil we use and are able to get good results thereby.

The question of adding a little fine bone meal to the soil at time of planting is in favor with most growers, while others claim the plants are not greatly benefited by it. We scatter a fine dusting of bone over the surface of the beds, then mix it through the soil with a spading fork, after which the beds are leveled off and firmed down ready for planting. Under our treatment we find the bonemeal a great help to the plants' growth.

The varieties of the exhibition section (if not already planted) should receive first attention; then those of early flowering section should be taken care of. The growing season from now to time of setting their buds is not any too long for these early varieties, and any delay in planting will retard their time of maturing considerably. The very early varieties, Smith's Advance and Golden Glow, if wanted for summer flowering, must now be well along in growth. It does not pay the grower with limited space at his command to bother with these very early flowers; the waste during the hot weather is so great that unless he has a special purpose for the summer blooms, they do not pay him to grow them and he will do better to buy from the large grower.

One of the main things to consider when mapping out the plan of plantings is the head room from the bench to the glass, so that each variety, according to the height it grows, can be properly taken care of, and it is better to allow an extra foot of room for the plants' growth, so that the blooms can develop without crowding up against the glass. Polly Rose, Comoleta, Pink and White Ivory are the dwarfs among the early varieties and need 3½ to 4 feet of head room. these varieties, planted early in this month, will attain a height of 4 to 5½ feet; so arrange the plantings accordingly.

Following after the early varieties should come those of the mid-season section, which for best results should all be planted by June 15. Many of the best of the standard varieties of this section will under generous treatment attain a height of more than six feet, so that eight feet is not any too much head room for their best growth.

The planting of the late varieties will come after the others are taken care of, they being now in various stages of growth as small plants, but they should not be neglected by allowing them to remain too long in small pots to get hard and woody or become drawn by standing too crowded on the benches.

It is a good plan to arrange the planting of the midseason varieties in sections according to the height of their growth and the period of their maturing, so that the taller varieties will not exclude the light from the shorter growers, and when a bench of blooms are ready for cutting, it can be cleaned out entirely. The distance apart to plant the plants depends on the variety and growth; varieties with small foliage like Ivory or Golden Eagle can be planted close, six to eight inches apart, but those of stronger growth and heavier foliage must be given seven to nine or eight to ten inches of space. A great deal depends on the location of the bench; if it is situated so that there is free air circulation all around and permits of the plants being worked from both sides of the bench, they can be planted closer than when the bench has one side abutting up close to the side of the building, and can only be reached from one side.

Another very important part of the work is to keep the plants clean of insects by constant sprayings with the insecticide, it being very much less of a job to rid the plants of these pests while they are small and keep them clean, than it is to wait until they have made a heavy growth before tackling them.

Directly after planting our greatest care is in the watering, caution being necessary to see that the plants do not receive too much water before root action has taken well hold of the soil. Do not flood the beds at time of planting, but water the plants in at the roots only, leaving the rest of the soil in the beds until the roots commence to work into it, giving them fresh soil to work into until well established, when the beds can be well watered as needed. To give the plants a good start and keep them in active growth, syringe two or three times a day during very hot weather.

As soon as the plants attain sufficient size to need supports, the work of staking and tying up should be attended before the growths become crooked or damaged.

As quickly as the plants get into active growth again, the side shoots will begin to branch out. They should receive attention as soon as large enough to handle and be kept rubbed out to throw all the strength possible into the main growth of the plant.

Keep the beds clean of weeds, which will not be long in making their appearance in the new soil; also, remember that chrysanthemums need full sunlight and plenty of air at all times.

C. W. JOHNSON.

A London Tulip Show.

A great show of Darwin and Cottage tulips was held May 14 at the Royal Horticultural Society's hall, Westminster, London, Eng., and was well attended. The show was really the culmination of trials that had been held at the society's gardens at Wisley, and of a conference on nomenclature and classification held the previous day. It is, I believe, the first time, at least for 30 years or so, that an exhibition has been devoted entirely to the tulip, and this in itself indicates the importance in which the flower is held today in England. The date of the exhibition naturally precluded many of the earlier varieties so well known for bedding out purposes from being shown, as most of them were already beyond their best.

As an exhibition, the tulip was a little disappointing from the spectacular point of view. There was a general heaviness about the staging of many of the exhibits, and the blooms did not gain in attractiveness by being dumped into short vases. The stems bent over, and the flowers thus lost much of that charm which is one of their chief attributes in the flower garden when growing naturally. The best method of staging tulips apparently was that adopted by Dobbie & Co. of Edinburgh, Hogg & Robertson of Dublin, Barr & Sons, Covent Garden, and R. Wallace & Co., Colchester. With slight variations, these firms displayed their blooms in bamboo or tin stands, with many tubes branching from a central stem, and running up to two or three feet in height. Owing to the long stems of the Darwins, the blooms of these stood well above the foliage, which was present in practically every case. Nevertheless, even this arrangement looked somewhat bare, and it was evident that the numerous sprays of Aspaargus Sprengeri added to the vases in Dobbie & Co.'s exhibit gave a gracefulness and charm to their display that was lacking in the others. On the whole, it may be said that tulips do not display themselves so attractively on the exhibition table as they do in the garden. They seem somehow to lose that life and color that one admires so much when they are actually flowering in the open air. In the case of other plants, the sweet pea for example, that look more or less disheveled when growing naturally, a great improvement is noticeable when they are cut and artistically staged.

The Late H. J. Weber.

As to varieties, these were numerous, and one could not help noticing that two or three names were often given to the same or to a very similar variety. If this duplication of names can be reduced, the conference on nomenclature will perhaps not have been in vain. Among the best scarlets and crimsons, mention may be made of the following: Farncombe Sanders, Prof. Francis Darwin, Scarlet Perfection, Hitchcock, Flambeau, North Dakota, The Tester, and Glare of the Garden. The best pinks were Clara Butt, Julia, alata, Inglescombe Pink, Psyche, and Baronne de la Tonnaye. The yellows were best represented by Bouton d'Or, Inglescombe Yellow, Parisiana, Mrs. Keightley, Avis Kennicott, Lady of the Lake, Ellen Willmott, Yellow Queen. Whites were not very conspicuous, the best being White Swan, Dora, Cygnet and Innocence. Deep colored varieties were present in large numbers, many of them having a peculiar glistening sheen on the petals. The best deep maroon and dark varieties were Philip de Commines, Fra Angelica, Sultan, Zanzibar, Leonardo da Vinci, Zulu, and of course, La Tulipe noire—a name made famous by Alexander Dumas' famous novel of that name. Heliotrope shades, deep violet, and wine purple ones were also in evidence, but it would occupy too much space to enumerate any but the most striking varieties. The names mentioned may help American growers to realize what seems to be the most popular varieties in England, although of course tastes differ considerably according to geographical conditions.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

CUT FLOWER AND PLANT DEMAND LIVELY.

The season here, as elsewhere in the lake region, is late and there is yet considerable outdoor planting to be done. The Memorial day demand for cut flowers and bedding stock was excellent and fortunately there was a good local supply in all lines. Bedding stock is well cleaned up and in some cases it has been necessary to supplement the local supplies of leading items like geraniums from out-of-town sources. Last week the state convention of Elks was held in this city and attracted many visitors. This, in addition to the usual run of planting-out, with June weddings and funerals, gave the local craft all they could handle to advantage. Most of the stores were handsomely decorated for the occasion and the hotels and other places of entertainment made some demand upon the trade for holiday adornment. On the whole, the florists seem fairly well satisfied with conditions although some of them say the general business of the city is not up to the average.

Henry Smith had a fine lot of stock in both cut flowers and plants for the Memorial day business. Carnations at his green-houses are still producing good blooms in large quantity. Mr. Smith has the material on the ground for rebuilding two of his houses this summer. Foreman George Collins has started to clean out the benches for the young stock of which he has a fine assortment in roses, chrysanthemums, carnations, snapdragons, etc., ready to plant.

BY THE WAY.

Eli Cross had the work of decorating the Elks' hall for the festivities last week, which was done in his usual tasteful style. Eli has a good supply of lilies on hand and his daily cut now includes some fine blooms of the new rose Ophelia. He has purchased glass for two new houses, each 18x300 feet, but he has not yet decided upon the right time to build.

In years past this city and vicinity has been famous for its violets, commanding the highest prices in western markets. The disease caused many growers to discontinue this crop but some of them are planning to try it again on a moderate scale this year, probably planting Mary Louise and Princess of Wales.

The Grand Rapids Floral Co. has some fine benches of swainsona and several houses of Comet tomatoes in splendid crop.

Freyling & Mendal have an attractive display of good stock and their business this spring has been highly satisfactory.

John Nellist is making specialties of winter and summer-flowering sweet peas under glass with quite satisfactory results.

H. W. Allersma has had a fine lot of geraniums this season for which there has been good demand.

Visitors: Harvey E. Kidder, of the Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich.; Stephen D. Green, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

ATLANTA, GA.—R. I. Gresham, of the C. A. Dahl Co., florists, is in the East gathering ideas in flower shop construction to be used in a model flower store to be opened on Peachtree street.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.—Chas. Gebhardt and wife celebrated their silver wedding anniversary June 7, all members of the family present. A large number of friends from Chicago and elsewhere joined them in the celebration. The tokens of the occasion were numerous and beautiful. Mr. and Mrs. Gebhardt have the best wishes of a large circle of friends in the trade who were not aware of the event.

OBITUARY.

William C. Martin.

William C. Martin, a retail florist, with a store and residence at 284 Graham avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., died very suddenly June 1 on the base ball grounds of Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. A game was being played between a Philadelphia and a Brooklyn team. At an exciting stage of the game, when Brooklyn tied Philadelphia, Mr. Martin, with others, stood up to cheer. At that moment he was stricken and fell. A doctor soon reached him, but could do nothing, saying he had died instantly of heart disease, superinduced by excitement.

Mr. Martin was born at Sparkhill, N. Y., 44 years ago, most of his life having been spent in Brooklyn, where he was well known as well as in the wholesale district of New York. He was a member of several benevolent societies.

The Late Charles Krueger.

He is survived by a widow and four children, the oldest being a boy 14 years old; the three younger are girls. He is also survived by his mother and other relatives. A. F. F.

Mrs. Katie Bommersbach.

Mrs. Kate Bommersbach, wife of Nicholas Bommersbach, well known florist of Decatur, Ill., died at the family residence in that city, June 2, aged 59 years. She had been in failing health for several months, but her condition was not regarded as serious until three weeks before her death.

Mrs. Bommersbach was born in Indianapolis, Ind., November 15, 1855. With her husband, she came to Decatur in 1881. Both were experienced florists and they started a small greenhouse. They built up a large business and their greenhouses are now among the most extensive in that part of the state. She was a partner in the business and being a lover of flowers, she put her whole heart into the work. The success of the business is largely due to her efforts. In her home life she was a neighborly woman, kind and charitable and always doing something to relieve the sufferings of the unfortunate.

She is survived by her husband and one son, John N. Bommersbach, also a florist.

Henry J. Weber.

Henry J. Weber, 74 years old, founder of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Company at Nursery, Mo., St. Louis county, died June 3 following an illness of more than a year. He was one of the pioneer residents of St. Louis county, having lived at Nursery since his birth. Mr. Weber probably was the only man in the United States who called Gen. U. S. Grant "Sam." He was a warm personal friend of the noted soldier and former President and aided in building the now famous Grant cabin, which has been preserved by August A. Busch on the Grant farm.

Five years ago Mr. Weber retired from business and turned over the nursery, which is at Gravois and Weber roads, to his sons. He is survived by his widow and the following children: Frank, William, George, Walter, Mrs. Amelia Keller and Mrs. Anna Aff.

W. F.

Mrs. Edward J. Welch.

To the many friends of Mrs. Edward J. Welch, wife of Edward J. Welch of Welch Bros. Co., Boston, Mass., the announcement of her death, May 25, after a brief illness, came as a severe shock. She was stricken with pneumonia the day preceeding the funeral of her son, Edward Welch, Jr., who died May 17 of the same disease, as recorded in our issue of May 22. Mrs. Welch leaves a husband, two daughters and one son.

The funeral was held at St. Mark's church May 27, with interment in Calvary cemetery, Roslindale, and was largely attended. Floral tributes in profusion bore evidence of the high esteem in which she was held by a host of friends. The heart-felt sympathy of the entire trade goes out to Mr. Welch and his family in their deep sorrow.

Charles F. Krueger.

Charles F. Krueger, aged 41, died Friday, June 4. The deceased had been in poor health for some time, having been incapacitated for business for the past three months. He conducted the Reading terminal flower stand in the Philadelphia & Reading railroad station at 128 Market street, Philadelphia, Pa. He was formerly engaged in raising plants and flowers, in both of which enterprises he was quite successful. He was of a genial disposition, a good business man, an active member of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia; also of the S. A. F., and generally attended the conventions.

K.

Mrs. Ida Baer.

Mrs. Ida Baer, wife of Henry Baer, one of Peoria's most prominent carnation growers, died very suddenly June 2 of heart failure.

Interment took place Sunday, June 6, at the Lutheran Cemetery, near the Baer home. Besides her husband she leaves to mourn her loss, seven children, the youngest being less than one year old. Mr Baer has the sympathy of a large host of friends in his bereavement.

MOYLAN, PA.—Alfred C. Elkinton will erect a greenhouse, 24x41 feet.

SIOUX CITY, IA.—Preparations are being made by the city for the erection of a greenhouse in Riverside park, to cost $9,000.

AURORA, ILL.—The Gray Seed Tape company, of Plano, Ill., has outgrown its quarters in that city and has leased a part of the old Acorn Brass building in Stone avenue. The entire plant will be moved to this city from Plano.

Cleveland Chrysanthemum Show.

The one flower show of national importance to be held in the fall of 1915, is to be the Cleveland flower show, November 10-14 in the sixth city. This is the strong announcement we have received from the publicity committee which is working to exploit this forthcoming event.

Frank A. Friedley of the Eadie Company, Cleveland, general secretary of the show committee and also chairman of the exhibition committee, informs us that because of the almost unlimited space in the Coliseum, his committee will have room to stage all the entries received without crowding.

This announcement is of interest because of the fact that the annual exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America is to be a part of the Cleveland flower show. Mr. Friedley states that the Cleveland Coliseum contains over 65,000 square feet, all on one floor and is one of the largest exhibition halls in the United States. It is also interesting to learn that its location is in the heart of the retail shopping district and convenient to the hotels and clubs.

The show committee is at work on plans to organize specially conducted parties to travel on special trains from the east and west and promise to announce the details of their plans in the very near future.

Panama-Pacific Exposition Notes

The Palace of Horticulture, with its five acres of floor space in the building proper, and nine acres of outside gardens, has been one of the distinct features of interest to visitors since the opening of the exposition. One novelty that commands close attention is a model cannery, which shows the processes of fruit preparation from the moment the fruit is taken from the tree until it is delivered to the table of the housewife.

Probably not in the entire exposition is there any individual feature that calls for expressions of more spontaneous pleasure than does the orchid house. The display here at all times is valued in the thousands, and on the opening day of the exposition the value of the orchids shown in this room was conservatively estimated at $30,000.

The outside display of The Netherlands occupies an acre and a half, in which are shown the many plant forms for which Holland is world-famous. Particular attention has been given to hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, azaleas, rhododendrons and conifers. The Holland gardens are now in full bloom and present a glorious vista.

The rose competition has brought entries of growers from France, England, Ireland, America, Scotland and Germany, the latter nation being represented by Peter Lambert, of Trier, whose shipment of roses, after pursuing a very devious route through the war zone, finally arrived at the exposition in splendid condition. There are about 30 varieties in the Lambert shipment.

The elaborate and beautiful display made by Cuba is always a magnet that attracts throngs of visitors in the Palace of Horticulture. This occupies the space beneath the great central dome, and included in this display are two splendid microcyus. These majestic ferns are between 1,000 and 2,000 years of age. In this main exhibit are also sixteen royal palms, four cocos plumosa and two cocoanut trees, in addition to a great showing of advanced and tropical floriculture of great rarity.

Massachusetts has an elaborate garden in which carnations, dahlias, conifers and bulbs are featured.

The flag staff at the Oregon building, a Douglas fir, floats the "stars and stripes" 241 feet above the ground. It was cut from a tree grown near Astoria. It weighs 46 tons and would produce enough lumber to build five ordinary eight-room houses.

Rudd-Arnold Wedding.

Miss Helen M. Rudd and R. Mortimer Arnold, of Galesburg, Ill., were married at the home of the bride, Blue Island, Ill., by Dr. Campbell, of the First Presbyterian Church, Galesburg, June 5, and will spend the honeymoon in the vicinity of Lake Champlain. The house was handsomely decorated for the occasion and white stokesias were the principal flowers used in the bride's bouquet. The bride will be remembered by visitors to the Niagara Falls and Cincinnati conventions of the Society of American Florists when she assisted her father, Willis N. Rudd, as secretary of the national organization. Mr. Arnold is a lawyer-farmer of Galesburg and prominent in the affairs of that college town, where the couple will be at home after October 1 at 1550 Cherry street.

MAY BUSINESS FAIRLY GOOD.

The month of May just passed stands as one of the wettest on record—eight and a quarter inches of rain, so distributed as to interfere so seriously with planting operations that some of it will go undone until fall. Much of the florists' outdoor planting for their own use is three weeks overdue and not yet accomplished. Notwithstanding this handicap, the month shows a fair bulk of business—and most lines are fairly well cleaned up in bedding stock of all kinds.

Memorial day week was rainy until Saturday. This interfered with local planting, and with the heavy crop of spring roses and other yard flowers, made quite a cut in local business, although the florists still had all they could do comfortably and a sale volume fully up to last year. Roses, peonies, lilies and jasmine were in ample supply, with carnations practically cleaned up on booked orders. There was fair sale of magnolia, cycas, and laurel wreaths; also, other artificial cemetery goods.

NOTES.

At the recent city election, W. F. Schell, proprietor of the Wichita Nurseries, was elected commissioner of parks and public buildings, and will doubtless find in the city park system ample opportunity for the exercise of his talent as an experienced nurseryman.

Alvin R. Davidson, an old-time Wichita florist, but for past five years with H. A. Hall of Joplin, Mo., is visiting relatives here. C. M. Weintz, a florist of Pueblo, Colo., is also visiting the craft in this city, and spying out for a permanent situation.

Chas. P. Mueller has added an auto truck to his delivery service, making a total of three machines in this department. Frank Mueller of the store force spent the week following Memorial day visiting in Oklahoma.

TRADE OUTLOOK NOT ENCOURAGING.

Business during the past week held up remarkably well for the week after Memorial day. There was a shortage of stock owing to the cool, cloudy weather and prices consequently held up. Roses found a fairly good market and sold from $1 to $16 per 100. Hadley, Russell, Ophelia, Wards and Medium American Beauties were in heaviest demand. Carnations held up well also. Prices on these ranged from $2 to $4 per 100. Sweet peas were plentiful and prices on them far from satisfactory. Toward the end of the week the general trade seemed to slacken, and the outlook for the coming week is not very bright.

NOTES.

Wednesday evening, June 2, a few of the friends of Thos. F. Galvin tendered him a banquet to commemorate his fiftieth anniversary in the business at the Copley Plaza hotel. There were about 100 present, among whom were some of the leading men in the trade, as well as in political and legal lines. The meeting was presided over by Patrick Welch, and Judge Hoitt of Nassau, N. H., was toastmaster. Mr. Galvin was presented with a diamond ring, the presentation speech being made by Joseph Pelletier, district attorney of Boston. Among the speakers were Hon. Jos. Conry, John H. Dillon, chairman of the park commission; District Attorney Pelletier, Hon. Jos. H. O'Neill, Col. W. W. Castle, Henry Penn, Jackson Dawson, W. E. Doyle, Wm. J. Stewart and F. R. Pierson. A most enjoyable evening was spent by all who attended.

Penn, the Florist, has an attractive window this week. The window has been designed to represent a country scene with a miniature railroad and train passing around the front. Telegraph poles have been set up and the miniature bill boards, advertising "Penn the Telegraph Florist," are set up on the side of the tracks. Business at the store continues good after the best Memorial day trade during his career.

On account of the cold weather, which has retarded the growth of herbaceous plants, the peony show will be held in conjunction with the rose and strawberry show, June 19-20. The list of entries is above the average and an especially fine exhibition is expected.

Wm. Elliott is cutting from his Brighton range some especially fine Miller roses. Everything at his rose farm at Madbury, N. H., is running smoothly and some very choice flowers are being sent to the market.

Thos. F. Galvin, Boston, Mass.

Celebrated Fiftieth Anniversary, June 2.

The June exhibition was held at Horticultural hall June 5-6. There was a good attendance and the show proved to be extra good. The exhibits of orchids and azaleas seemed to attract the most attention.

Patrick Welch's new store is proving very successful. The reason is very obvious for one glance at his large refrigerator shows that only the very finest flowers obtainable are used.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will celebrate ladies' night, June 15. A special programme has been prepared and a most enjoyable evening is promised.

BEDDING STOCK TRADE HEAVY.

The bedding season is nearly over, but we can confidently say that it has been very good. The orders have been double, compared with former seasons, and the customers more particular, but the volume of business is away ahead of last year. Some of the largest orders were considerably reduced and others were entirely canceled, but the new orders of moderate size more than made up for this loss. The stock on hand at the beginning of the season compared favorably with last year; geraniums are leading by a long shot, but this year there was a big demand for annuals such as asters, stocks, marigolds, cosmos, antirrhinums and petunias. The formal bedding is gradually giving way to the natural way of bedding, produced with such plants as mentioned above.

The cut flower trade has greatly improved since Easter and is nearly back to the level of last year, which means much. There is a scarcity just now of cut blooms. Outdoor bulbs are about done and there is really nothing to take their place. All outdoor tender plants suffered severely May 27-29, by heavy frosts; fruit trees, which were just over a big show of bloom, are badly hurt. All planted tomatoes were killed outright and incalculable damage done to melon, cucumber, and other hotbed stocks. The thermometer registered from four to six degrees of frost in some localities. Province of Ontario is said to have suffered worse than Quebec.

New landscape gardening is very quiet this spring but there is plenty of renewal of old places, with alterations and repair work going on, no doubt encouraged by the existing low wages in the labor market, and consequently lower contracts for the jobs. The Montreal Floral Exchange through its manager, Wm. Cutter, secured a very desirable contract from the Windsor Hotel Co., which ran into three figures, for renewing and decorating the palm rooms.

Cemetery work, which used to be quite a profitable side-line of a number of growers and florists, is almost all in the hands of the cemetery companies. There are so many obstacles put up by these companies that the florists found it impossible to compete and consequently had to leave the field to them.

WEDDING ORDERS HELP LULL.

On Memorial day business, the weather man played into the hands of the florist. A week of cool, cloudy weather held back out-door stock to the extent that it did not form nearly the competition that had seemed probable. One peculiarity of the trade was the manner in which it kept up on Monday. Peonies were abundant, but prices were held to the average of other years, 75 cents to $1 being realized without difficulty, and a few choice varieties brought as high as $1.50. Just at present there is a lull in cut flowers, but some good orders are being booked for June weddings, running throughout the month. The crest of the bedding trade has been past, but there is still a good deal doing in that line.

NOTES.

Awarding of prizes in the guessing contest put on by the retail department of the Livingston Seed Company, as to the number of mail order envelopes contained in its show window, disclosed some close estimates. The actual number of envelopes was 61,179, and the guess of the first prize-winner, who received $10 in gold, was 60,000. In all, there were 8,000 guesses, each of which represented a sale. The contest was on from May 15 to June 1. Besides its general impressiveness in showing up the magnitude of the mail-order department, it proved to be a good trade-puller on current business.

As an advertising feature for the wedding season, T. J. Ludwig has in his window a scene showing a bride and groom in the act of being married, the principals and spectators being represented by little manikins.

The Munk Floral Company advertised dollar bargains in the first of a series of Friday "Dollar Day" sales, participated in by nearly all lines of merchants, June 4.

STOCK PLENTIFUL.

Business was rather quiet the opening of the week, but is much better at this writing and according to one of the leading wholesalers, trade so far this month has been very good and much better than last year. Stock of all kinds is plentiful and especially fine American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses in the desired lengths are obtainable at reasonable prices. Roses in general are in good supply and of good quality, especially Sunburst and Richmond. Some fine Ophelia and Prince de Bulgarie are noticeable, but do not appear to be any too plentiful. Carnations are arriving in larger quantities and are moving fairly well. The receipts of peonies are very large and choice stock in this line is obtainable in large quantities. A large supply of local peonies is now reaching the market and quite a number are being placed in storage this week. Sweet peas are in good supply, but are not moving as well as they might. Orchids are plentiful and the same holds good for gardenias. Gladioli are seen in large quantities everywhere and Cape Jasmine is in good supply. Lily of the valley seems to be plentiful, which also holds good for lilies. There is also a good supply of daisies, water lilies, poppies, pansies, candytuft and other miscelleanous stock offered and the retail florist now has a splendid variety to select from. The rainy weather on Monday, June 7, affected the local demand considerably but shipping orders were plentiful and while business is not as brisk as it might be no one seems to be complaining.

NOTES.

A. Lange and his large force of assistants have been busy with wedding work the past week at his East Madison street store and according to R. J. Mohr, June 3 was the biggest day of all for 12 large decorations fell on that date. Albert Hall, one of Lange's able assistants, has returned from Elkhart, Ind., where he arranged a large home wedding decoration that called for a large amount of stock and which helped to increase the sales considerably.

Buchbinder Bros. never had a larger or finer display of refrigerators than they have now at their store at 518 Milwaukee avenue where everyone is cordially invited to call and inspect same. A complete line of their various styles is always carried in stock and they are now prepared to equip a store complete at very attractive prices.

USE Budlong's Blue Ribbon Valley.

The cool weather throughout the season has been very favorable to the development of trees and shrubs in all the local parks, which look very fine, and planting for the summer bedding display is well advanced at most of them.

Superintendent Wallis of the Rosehill Cemetery, who injured one of his arms in cranking an automobile Memorial day, is able to be at his office, although the injured member is still in a plaster cast.

L. D. McNeff, of the McNeff-Swenson Co., is back from an eastern business trip.

2,000,000 Feet of Modern Glass

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, and wife will leave some time in July for California, where they will visit E. B. Washburn and O. P. Bassett and families at Pasadena, besides taking in the sights at the Panama-Pacific exposition. Mr. Washburn is advising his customers that there are no afternoon mail deliveries on Saturday during June, July and August, which they should bear in mind, for letters that do not catch the noon delivery will not reach the store until the following Monday morning.

Peter Reinberg is cutting heavily in roses, especially Mrs. Chas. Russell and Sunburnt, but both varieties are moving well and are bringing good prices compared with the other kinds. The shipping trade has been very good the past week and taken all in all business so far this year has been most satisfactory.

N. J. Wietor says that Wietor Bros. are experiencing a brisk demand this week for chrysanthemum and pompon cuttings as well as for cut back stock, and every mail brings in more orders. Some fine roses and carnations are now reaching the store and stock is cleaning up pretty well each day in all lines.

Announcements are out for the wedding of Miss Olive Rebecca Ritchie and Charles Thomas Johnson, son of the well known carnation and chrysanthemum specialist, C. W. Johnson, at the home of the young lady's parents, 1904 Monterey avenue, June 23.

The Fleischmann Floral Co. has had a very good season at its East Jackson boulevard store. J. C. Ashton says that wedding orders especially are numerous this month and that there has been considerable funeral work the past few weeks.

E. C. Amling and family are thinking seriously of taking in the sights at the Panama-Pacific exposition, but if they do they will not leave until late in the fall.

Miss Lillian Smith, the popular telephone operator at Vaughan's Seed Store, has the sympathy of many friends in the loss of her mother, who died June 6.

Zalinger & Hirsch had considerable work for the John S. Reynolds funeral, which was held from the Elks' headquarters at 174 West Washington street last week. The late Mr. Reynolds was secretary for the local lodge of Elks for a great many years and practically every lodge in the nearby cities sent a beautiful floral offering.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are handling regular shipments of Cape Jasmine now and are featuring a fancy grade of sweet peas from the V. Bezdek plant and roses from the Pyfer & Olsem range at Wilmette. H. E. Philpott has returned to Winnipeg after attending the monthly meeting of this firm, of which he is president.

Philip C. Schupp is well pleased with the new rose Ophelia which J. A. Budlong is growing in quantity, and has every reason to be, for the stock that is now reaching the store is magnificent. Once in a while he helps to spade roses, but you hardly ever see him handling any variety but the beautiful Ophelia.

John Propps of the Alpha Floral Co. won a season pass to the White Sox baseball park last week in a drawing, so if he is suddenly taken sick at any time this summer his employer will probably find by consulting the sporting calendar that it will be on one of the days that Comisky's boys are playing here.

George Perdikas says that business has been pretty good at all of his three loop stores this season and that he has no reason whatever to complain of dull times. He is an active member of the Sportsmen's Club of America and attended the big banquet which was held June 4.

Percy Jones will handle boxwood on a larger scale than ever this year and has already contracted for his supply. This firm handles greens of all kinds in large quantities besides a complete line of cut flowers, and enjoys both a good local and shipping trade.

The store known as the White House Florist, 140 South Wabash avenue, always presents an inviting appearance and is a credit to the hustling proprietor, Wm. Kotronis and his wife, who so ably assists him at the store.

Al. Fischer reports business as good at his North Clark street store, but was handicapped somewhat in making deliveries since his new automobile was stolen several weeks ago.

J. C. Craig is enjoying good business at his old stand at 120 South Wabash avenue, where his two sons, Arthur and H. F. Craig, so ably preside.

O. A. Tonner is handling a large quantity of choice home-grown peonies, some of which are coming from the family farm at Galewood.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting heavily in American Beauty roses and some especially fine stock in this line is to be seen at the store this week. Mrs. Charles Russell roses are also in good supply but are cleaning up nicely each day. Three more importations of palms reached the greenhouses at Morton Grove this week, making the fourth one that has been received so far this season. In speaking of the demand for rose plants August Poehlmann says that many orders have been refused for certain varieties which were sold out early and that what little stock is left now will be easily disposed of. Tony Gabel says that all told Poehlmann Bros. Co. have over 265,000 carnations planted out in the field.

Zeck & Mann are featuring a large supply of fancy indoor grown gladioli this week which are attracting much favorable attention at the store. Allie Zech and wife visited the firm's growers at Maywood on June 6 and report nice crops of American Beauty roses and sweet peas.

A. E. Turner, of Rosin & Turner, Mosinee, Wis., is calling on the wholesale trade here this week. His firm is now shipping a large supply of Wisconsin ferns to this market and it is pleasing to note that the quality is unusually fine for early picked stock.

A. L. Vaughan, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., is back from a successful business trip to Racine, Wis. Peonies in large quantities are seen at this hustling establishment this week and the quality is all that one can desire.

The board of directors of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association held a meeting at their store, 176 North Michigan avenue, Tuesday, June 8, when much important business was transacted.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE BEATS 1914.

Business for Memorial day was better than that of 1914, there being no outside flowers on account of the late frost, and a clean-up resulted. Roses, carnations, gladioli and peonies were shipped from Illinois and many pot plants had to be replaced. All stock sold at top prices. The market at present is cleaning up at satisfactory prices, due to weddings and commencements, which will continue for the next week or two.

CLUB MEETING.

At the regular meeting of the local florists' club held at Rice Bros. June 1 it was decided that the space that was available at the West hotel was not large enough to warrant the expense of a show and the Armory was too large for the outlook for this year. It was therefore decided to wait until next year and have the boys make plans for a monster show in 1916 at the Armory or some other suitable building that may be erected by that time. C. G. Anderson of the Minneapolis Floral Co., was unanimously elected a member of the club. Hans Rosaker gave the club an invitation to come out in August and hold a picnic at his place and bring the ladies; date to be settled later. It was voted to suspend further meetings during July and August. An invitation came from C. G. Anderson to hold the next meeting at the Minneapolis Floral Co.'s range.

NOTES.

The local florists' club now has a very fast baseball team. They played the Federals Sunday, June 6, with the score 16 to 6 in Minneapolis' favor. Rube Daly is captain and John S. Rovick of Rice Bros. is manager. They would like to hear from St. Paul.

Wm. Desmond of the L. S. Donaldson Co. has the planting of the Lyons estate at Lake Minnetonka, which will about clean up that firm's greenhouses of bedding plants.

Visitors: DeForrest W. Ludwig, of the E. C. Ludwig Floral Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; A. F. Longren, of Poehlmann Bros., Chicago; Frank McCabe, of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

John Martins of 2938 Bloomington avenue and Mrs. Hammer were married on June 3. Friends in the trade wish them much joy.

TRADE GOOD DESPITE BAD WEATHER.

Despite the very disagreeable and unfavorable weather conditions that have characterized the present season, local florists have very little kick coming about sales totals. The weather Memorial week, after starting out cold, rainy and cloudy, brightened up splendidly on Saturday preceding Memorial day, lasted throughout Monday, and by noon the market was entirely cleaned out and florists closed their doors with a sigh of satisfaction. The greatest disappointment was due to the shortage of the peony crop, and those that were on the market were not up to the standard of previous years, due again to the absence of warm weather and sunlight. Those florists who have greenhouses in connection were very busy taking care of their out-of-doors planting orders and their cemetery work. They are still busy at this, since the cold weather has retarded this kind of work. With the advent of June and better weather many weddings and many other social occasions together with a lot of funeral work have kept florists surprisingly busy.

NOTES.

Emil Kuhnke is advertising his place of business for sale and plans to retire from the growing industry if he is successful in selling his place. Mr. Kuhnke thinks he has enough of this world's goods to retire and has had a long and successful career. He was one of the founders of the Toledo Florists' Club and was always an energetic worker in the interests of this organization.

Harry Heinl's annual five-cent sale of bedding plants was a greater success than ever. He is one of Toledo's expert growers and enjoys an enviable reputation in this section for the quality of his plants and cut flowers. People wait for this sale each year and thousands of plants for planting purposes are disposed of.

Schramm Bros. landed the contract to decorate Toledo Beach, a very popular summer resort on the shores of Lake Erie. This is a large contract and called for several car loads of plants. The work was done under the personal supervision of Mr. Frank M. Schramm.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman has been exceedingly busy in work of all kinds, including several wedding decorations and much funeral work. She expressed herself as exceedingly flattered the way business had been coming her way ever since Memorial day.

Chas. Koelker & Sons have had a good season bedding plants of all kinds selling well and deservedly so, because their stock was of uniform quality. Koelkers have a reputation for growing the best geraniums in this vicinity and this year was no exception. A. C. K.

WILEY CITY, WASH.—J. J. Miller of this city has been appointed superintendent of the horticultural section of the state fair to be held at North Yakima in September.

Kansas City.

HEAVY SUPPLY AND PRICES DROP.

For the past week stock has been exceptionally plentiful, and as a result prices have dropped considerably, especially in roses. Carnations are getting smaller, and are not of a satisfactory quality. Lilies are plentiful and are good stock. The demand for red roses the coming week will be heavy, due to commencements. The florists are all busy with weddings and it appears business in this line is evenly divided. The greenhouses are having a great run in bedding plants and stock for window and porch boxes.

NOTES.

The Martin greenhouses at Shawnee were nearly flooded out last week, there being 10 inches of water in all of the houses and 14 feet of water in the boiler-house, the boiler being completely submerged. Business was good, however, and a large quantity of geraniums, their specialty, were sold.

T. J. Noll & Co. are receiving some extra fine roses, and at a low price they are readily disposed of. They have received their first shipment of new ferns, which are in demand. Shipping trade is still active.

Samuel Murray feels very comfortable in his new store, which has been highly praised by the public, and reports business good, having a number of good orders for coming weddings.

W. L. Rock Flower Co. had good business during the past week, being very busy with funeral and wedding decorations, also preparations for the coming commencements.

The florists across the line in Kansas report business was good Memorial day, followed by plenty of decorating and funeral work the past week.

Henry Kusick & Co. report heavy receipts but a correspondingly good demand moves the stock without waste. Supplies are selling well.

The Humfeld, Orear Floral Co. have moved into their new store, located on a transfer corner, and reports increased business from the start.

E. D. Ellsworth, of the Rosery, reports business is good with plenty of funeral and wedding work. The greenhouses are about empty.

Arthur Newell says business is better than expected and has taken a number of orders for next week for the school exercises.

W. J. Barnes is disposing of bedding plants in quantity and has also been busy with funeral work and wedding decorations.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower and Plant Co. reports a good business both in cut flowers and plants.

Alpha Floral Co. reports stock is good. The funeral work was extra heavy last week. E. J. B.

TRADE BUSY WITH SOCIAL FUNCTIONS.

Weddings and graduations keep the retailers somewhat busy. The weather is wretched, being warm one day and cool the next, with a great deal of rain. Stock is plentiful. Candidum lilies are in large supply. Ferns are scarce, becoming more so every year around this city. Enchantress carnations have been plentiful and selling at low prices. Cape Jasmines have been selling from 50 cents to $2 per 100.

NOTES.

There will be important business to transact at the local florists' club meeting June 10. The location and date of the picnic will also be decided upon, as well as arrangements of the entertainment committee for the carnation meeting.

Foster, the Florist, had a special sale of carnations, two dozen for 25 cents. He is also somewhat of a philanthropist, giving carnations with every glass of soda.

Henry J. Weber, of H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., died June 3. Further particulars will be found in the obituary column elsewhere in this issue.

Mullanphy Florists are doing a great plant trade at their downtown location and have regular special sales.

Geo. H. Angermueller continues to be headquarters for fine orchids and general florists' supplies.

At Shaw's Garden a special display of insectivorous plants are a feature in three varieties.

The Sherman Nursery Co., Charles City, Ia., is shipping quite heavily to this market.

Oscar Heile's son is now assisting his father in the store.

H. G. Berning has a fine assortment of glass flower vases.

SUPPLY EQUAL TO ALL DEMANDS.

We seem to have gotten over the rainy period we have had for the past month. Throughout May it rained incessantly. Now it has moderated so that we have only occasional showers, but they are generally good ones. With the advent of sunshine again, business in this market slowed up very perceptibly, and now the supply is able to easily care for immediate wants. Rose offerings include many fine Radiance, Shawyer, Mrs. Russell, Sunburst, Ophelia, Richmond and American Beauties. Carnations are rapidly losing in popular favor. Many fine gladioli may be had and Easter lilies are good and are plentiful. Other offerings include lily of the valley, sweet peas, orchids, nympheas, cornflower, peonies and coreopsis.

NOTES.

Jos. Hill and wife, accompanied by Fred Lemon and wife of Richmond, Ind., passed through this city while motoring to Augusta, Ky.

C. E. Critchell and wife have been taking in the territory surrounding this city in their new eight-cylinder Cadillac.

L. Frank & Sons, of Portland, Ind., have been sending in some very fine Maryland and Shawyer roses.

C. E. Critchell has been getting some very fine cut ramblers from Thos. Windram.

P. J. Olinger has been cutting some very fine Mrs. Russell roses.

The florist society's regular meeting will be held June 14. H.

Providence, R. I.

Memorial day trade this year was fairly good, but not up to the standard of other years. Small tradesmen and the department stores sold wreaths and flowers at prices that the florist did not try to meet. The business was extended to a three-day period, and thus divided, made the work much easier than usual. All stock was fine and magnolia wreaths and wax bouquets were on hand in quantities and had a good sale.

NOTES.

E. L. Saunders, of Burnett street, is cutting extra fine lily of the valley in quantity.

J. Baraducci has opened a flower shop at 148 Atwell avenue.

SUPPLY OF GOOD STOCK SHORTENS.

The supply of good stock is decreasing daily. Roses are getting smaller and there are few good carnations on the local market, while what few peonies are to be had are shipped in from the north. Some very fine gladioli are to be had at reasonable prices; also Easter lilies, which find a ready sale. Some of the outside sweet peas have made their appearance, but are not high quality stock.

NOTES.

Geo. C. Shaffer had the decorations for the Stone-Stokes wedding, the church and residence being beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, with large clusters of white and pink peonies arranged with Easter lilies and blossoms.

BIG MEMORIAL DAY TRADE.

Taking everything into consideration, the local florists have had a splendid spring business and are more than satisfied. Memorial day sales, in spite of cool and rainy weather, were 30 per cent better than a year ago; in fact, 1915 Memorial day business can be considered the best ever experienced in this city. Heavy rains and cold nights shortened the peony supply, but there were enough to go around and all orders were filled. Carnations were plentiful and had a good call at $1 per dozen. Good roses were scarce, but short stock could be had in quantity. American Beauties were plentiful, as were also lilies. All flowering plants sold well, hydrangeas especially being in strong demand. Sweet peas and daisies sold well, the former bringing $3 per 100. American Beauties were quoted at from $3 to $6, lily of the valley 75 cents to $1, while snapdragons were popular at $1.50.

The executive committee of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society held its spring meeting at Lincoln, June 1, and final arrangements were made for the state fair to be held in Lincoln, September 5-10. Florists from all parts of the state will make an out-door exhibit of bedding plants on an elaborate scale.

The bedding plant demand is practically over and all stock sold well this season, from all reports. GRIPPE.

Hail Damage at Waco, Tex.

A heavy hail storm which visited Waco, Tex., May 26, did heavy damage to two of Waco's florists' establishments and some damage to a third. Tom Wolfe reports that about 7,000 feet of his glass was broken. He has about 45,000 square feet of glass in his greenhouses and the glass broken was pretty well distributed over his entire range. There was not so very much damage to indoor plants as most of the pot stock had been removed; carnations were nearing the end of the season's blooming and he had recently cut his rose stock back. His out-door plants suffered very heavily. He had a fine lot of gladiolus in the field and they were cut to pieces. Insurance was carried on these houses. Repairs will be made as soon as the material can be had and the work done.

that its loss of glass was practically total. Out of 25,000 square feet of glass they saved only 690 panes. About 50 per cent of pot plants in-doors were destroyed. All out-door plants were destroyed almost outright. The damage is estimated at at least $3,000. No insurance was carried. New glass has been ordered and the houses will be repaired promptly. The Mohan Floral Company suffered only slightly compared with the others. Their damage is reported to amount to about $150.

There were two of these hail storms, which visited Waco, the same night. The Wolfe houses were not very badly damaged in the first, which came about 8 p. m. Mr. Wolfe thought he had escaped, but at about 1 o'clock a. m. another severe storm set in and resulted in the very heavy damage to his range of glass.

WEDDINGS AND FUNERALS HELP TRADE.

The June bride has helped a lot the past week, there being a number of weddings in upper circles which called for quite elaborate decorations. Several important funerals also drew on the supply, so that the business can be said to have been satisfactory. The supply of flowers is quite up to the average of the season, the continued cool weather which seems unusual at this time, holding the peonies, which are now such a factor, and lengthening out their season. In the rose section almost all stocks are good, American Beauties particalrly so. Killarneys, while not so large, are still fine, particularly in the special grades. The short Killarneys, so plentiful at this season, are being moved safely, principally by means of special sales; it is astonishing what can be done by bargain sales if rightly managed. Mock roses are coming in fine and are in good demand; they stand the hot weather very well. The Mrs. Ward is a winner; it is one of the most popular roses that has yet been introduced. Carnations are still in good shape. Snapdragon is going out. Sweet peas, new crops, are fine and hold their place against all competitors. Gladioli are seen in splendid shape. Easter lilies are in fair demand, while lily of the valley has an extra call for the weddings.

NOTES.

The paper of F. W. Beirn on motor delivery, read before the last Florists' Club meeting, was most opportune. The attendance should have been much better for such a treat. The motor truck is now so generally used by the trade that any information on this subject should have been enough to have crowded the room. What will bring a good attendance?

The trade were sorry to a man to hear of the death of Charles Krueger, who conducted the flower stand in the Reading terminal station, this city, where he had built up a good trade. He passed away on June 4 after a few months' illness. His funeral was held June 7. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

The rose gardens at H. A. Dreer's nurseries, Riverton, N. J., are now at their best. Every one in the trade should pay them a visit at this time, preferably by the first morning train to see them before the hot sun opens up the flowers. Such a collection is not duplicated anywhere in this country.

Quite a number of the craft journeyed to Washington June 2, to see the rose test gardens and assist in the ceremonies of their dedication. The weather was miserable, but all appreciated the efforts of the Washington brethern in offsetting the conditions.

The M. Rice Co. have been busy with wedding accessories, staff baskets, shepherd's crooks, bridesmaids baskets and the like having had a large sale for the June weddings.

The Leo Niessen Co. are featuring peonies, having an immense stock from their growers. Easter lilies and special lily of the valley are also leaders.

The Jos. Heacock Co. are cutting fine Radiance roses—it seems to agree with their treatment. Quantities of special Killarneys are also seen.

The Robert Craig Co. are having a great runs on crotons and dracænas. Their stock of these specialties is the largest in the country.

Berger Brothers are handling some splendid Gladioli America and Hollandia; select lily of the valley is also a feature.

Edward Reid is justly proud of his local and eastern American Beauties—they are of the true Reid brand.

WARM WEATHER AND STOCK PLENTIFUL.

Warm weather has at last arrived, and stock of all kinds is becoming more plentiful. Local peonies are now coming in, and many are going into cold storage for future use, as about a week of this kind of weather will see the finish of the outdoor flowers. Roses of all kinds are in good demand; however, a slight touch of mildew showed last week. American Beauties have a good call and these flowers are exceptionally fine value, in both long and medium grades. For warm weather funeral work the short grade of this variety is used quite freely. Sweet peas, both short and long stems are in good supply, both Butterfly and other varieties. Field daisies are plentiful and good stock. Lily of the valley has been a little short of the demand. Carnations are quite plentiful, but are in good demand, stock being exceptionally fine. Easter lilies are very plentiful, with a fair demand.

What might have been a serious auto accident took place Memorial day in Brooklyn, a suburb, when an auto in which Fred C. Witthuhn and his son Walter, collided with another car. The left rear wheel and fender were torn from Witthuhn's car. The cars were running about 15 miles an hour. All escaped injury. C. F. B.

STOCK MOVES BUT PRICES LOW.

There was considerable business during the latter part of the past week, but stock went cheap. The early days of the week were dull. The weather was cool, for June, which was a good thing for the trade in general, particularly for the peony growers and shippers. As it was, there were too many peonies on the market and June 5 the best could be bought wholesale for 50 cents per dozen and ranging from that figure down to 25 cents per dozen. There is a story of an old market gardener who talked turnips so incessantly one season that all the neighbors grew turnips—he grew something else. It would appear that somebody has been talking white peonies, as there is an enormous stock of them about. Carnation prices have been dropping off and $2 per 100 is now about the top with 50 cents and $1 for left-overs. The rate of $15 per 100 is the best for special American Beauty roses, many selling for less. Other roses are plentiful and cheap. The Gen. Jacqueminots, which have been retarded by the cold weather, are now beginning to come in, so there is a good prospect for plenty of cheap roses. Cattlyea gigas are wholesaling at the rate of $35 and $40 per 100 but the Mossiæ variety can be bought for from $10 to $20. While the situation is not reassuring it is not as bad as it would be if the weather was warm. The retailers, or a part of them, greatly miss the steamer trade, but aside from that their business, so far as we can see, is as good if not better than it has been in June of some other years. The cold weather is keeping people in the city who would otherwise be elsewhere.

June 7.—The market is very quiet this morning with a surplus of stock. Peonies are practically going "a-begging" and carnations are not much better. Good peonies are selling at from 25 to 35 cents per dozen, carnations from $1.00 to $1.50 per 100 and $15 per 100 is about the top price for American Beauty roses, with all roses moving slowly. Lilies are down to three and four cents per flower. The outlook for this week is a glut.

NOTES.

Charles Beekman, Jr., of Elmhurst, N. Y., who sells the product of his father's carnation range in the Cut Flower Exchange, will be married June 16 to Miss Minnie Speyer of Steinway, N. Y. The happy couple will spend their honeymoon in Massachusetts, after which they will be at home in Elmhurst. Mr. Beekman is a clever young man and though we are not acquainted with the young lady, we assume that she will make him a worthy helpmate.

The annual outing of the New York Florists' Club will be held at Witzel's Point View Grove, College Point, July 14. F. W. Armitage, with Hitchings & Co., 1170 Broadway, is chairman of the outing committee. As Witzel's is a popular resort, with good grounds, and noted for good dinners, an enjoyable day may be expected, weather permitting.

Calling recently at the store of the Boulevard Floral Co., 2391 Broadway, we noted good features. The windows were tastefully decorated with plants and cut flowers and the cut stock on hand was of the best. Peter Theopine, who buys for and manages this store, is a bright lad.

Costos Sakelos, the Colonial Florist, recently opened another retail store on Broadway. Mr. Sakelos is enterprising and has the artistic temperament.

In addition to good cut flower stock, William Kessler is now handling fine plants, well flowered hydrangeas being interesting.

F. F. Kessler, of the Coogan building, in addition to other good stock, is now handling Jack roses and Spanish iris.

The annual outing of the Greek-American Florists' Association will be held at Witzel's Point View Grove, July 7.

John Young and Co. continue to receive a supply of good orchids, roses and much other stock.

Badgley, Riedel & Meyer are receiving fine sweet peas from Louis Enne, Flushing, N. Y.

W. P. Ford is near to being headquarters for peonies, as he has all the best varieties.

At Walter F. Sheridan's, fine stock of Rose Mrs. Charles Russell is noted.

At Geo. C. Siebrecht's, very fine pink peonies are noted. A. F. F.

Albany, N. Y.

At the June meeting of the Albany Florists' Club, Roman J. Irwin, chairman of the transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club, spoke of the preparations being made by the New York men to attend the S. A. F. convention in San Francisco, August 17-19. It is expected that a special train will be made up to go by way of Albany. The cost of the trip will be from $325 to $350 a person; time, 32 days. Members of the local club were invited to accompany the New York party on this trip and some will no doubt do so.

A vote of thanks was extended to Guttman & Raynor, Inc., wholesale florists, 101 West 28th street, New York, for 25 blooms of the new seedling carnation, Olive Whitman, which the firm sent to Albany. The flower is scarlet, of good size, carried on an unusually strong stem. It will probably be introduced next year. A discussion arose over the flower show in November. As opinion seemed to be divided it was deemed best to postpone final action until the July meeting when it is expected that the attendance will be unusually large.

John H. Bochman, a Hollander, now traveling for Henry F. Michell Co., seedsmen, Philadelphia, Pa., said the war is a great hardship for Holland and that he had to seek a position in this country on account of the decline in business there. He said he was glad to be able to locate here and in his travels has secured some good business. Mr. Irwin said also that the past two weeks showed an encouraging increase in orders from territory in which he had traveled and expressed his belief that the outlook is encouraging.

F. R. Bilson, the president, named Patrick Hyde, Edward F. Tracey, and L. H. Schaefer a special committee to visit a member who was reported to be seriously ill with typhoid-pneumonia and to do what was possible for him. The meeting adjourned at 9:40 p. m. to enjoy refreshments furnished by the entertainment committee and a social hour.

Memorial day trade in this city was excellent. Thomas F. Tracey, manager of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, reports that the demand for cut roses, carnations, and peonies was unusually large and that the retailers had no trouble to dispose of all their stock. In regard to peonies the quality this year was most excellent and the supply about up to the demand. In some cases the flowers brought $8 a hundred, wholesale.

Horticultural Society of New York.

The June exhibition of this society and of the American Rose Society was held, in co-operation with the New York Botanical garden, in the Museum building of that institution, June 5-6. Owing to the continued cold weather just before the exhibition, peonies and roses were much retarded in their development. The display of these flowers was therefore relatively small. There was an excellent display of the flowers, of shrubs and trees and of herbaceous plants, including a large representation of irises. The display of flowers, of shrubs and trees made by T. A. Havemeyer was of especial excellence, containing many unusual things. A large display was made by Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., including a collection of irises, another of flowers of herbaceous plants, and also an excellent collection of rhododendron flowers. A group of plants, containing fine specimens of pelargoniums, calceolarias, spiraeas and fuchsias, was exhibited by Mrs. F. A. Constable, and attracted much attention.

The bronze medal of the American Rose Society was awarded to Gen. E. A. McAlpin, for the best vase of hybrid tea roses, out-door grown. The judges were A. J. Manda, Wm. Tricker and John Scheepers, and prominent among the successful contestants in the competitive classes were the following: Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J.; John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y.; J. A. Manda, West Orange, N. J.; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Wm. Tricker, Arlington, N. J.; T. A. Havemeyer, Gen. E. A. McAlpin, Mrs. F. A. Constable and Mrs. Harold I. Pratt.

"Best Memorial day business ever" is the verdict of Worcester florists regarding the demand this year. Bouquets and all kinds of pot plants sold well, and everything in cut flowers was cleaned out. The city was flooded with "fakers" who got rid of thousands of artificial wreaths and some cut flowers.

The season of June weddings is here, and the florists are happy. On June 2, H. F. A. Lange had the largest wedding decoration of the year, and the other firms report much activity in this line.

THE SEFTON MFG. CO., 1331 W. 35th Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

North Bergen, N. J.

It is about as hard to do away with old names as it is to teach an old dog new tricks, but for official purposes, Uncle Sam often does it. About a year ago, we believe, a new free delivery post-office was established under the name of North Bergen; the territory which this office covers includes the original North Bergen, New Durham and a part of West Hoboken, the Hudson boulevard being the line of demarcation. A. E. Asmus, who some time ago retired from the firm of E. G. Asmus & Son, is now mayor of North Bergen.

George Schubert, at 303 Paterson plank road, has a fine range of 40,000 square feet of glass. Mr. Schubert is an expert fern grower and his range is an interesting place to visit. He has an abundance of stock in all stages of growth. There are hundreds of flats of young stock coming up from seed and much older stock that has been potted off and keeps up the supply that is constantly going out. Mr. Schubert's range includes that of his father, the late August Schubert.

The firm name is now E. G. Asmus' Son and E. R. Asmus is proprietor. He has another range at Closter, N. J., the total glass area of the two ranges being 200,000 or more square feet of glass. This firm has long been noted as growers of fine roses.

Herman Schoelzel, is well known as a plantsman who grows a variety of good stock, and has gained prominence as a fern grower. Mr. Schoelzel is also well known as an active member of various horticultural societies and clubs.

William Otte, 4055 Boulevard, also writes it North Bergen. He has a well kept range of 25,000 square feet and specializes in geraniums.

A. F. F.

West Hoboken, N. J.

The plant growers of West Hoboken seem to be prosperous and contented, regardless of the fact that there is considerable talk of business dullness in their neighborhood. The tying up of many great steamships that formerly sailed regularly to and from Hoboken has had a depressing effect on the business of this city but the people seem to be making the best of that misfortune.

Herman C. Steinhoff is another West Hoboken grower who has made a great success of the business. He grows a variety of stock, including lilies, pot roses and bedding plants. He has another large range and nursery at West Norwood, N. J., and several capable sons who assist him in the management of his extensive business.

Emil Leuly, who is a wizard in fern growing, has as usual, a large and clean stock. Mr. Leuly is a noted bicyclist and has ridden his wheel to the conventions of the Society of American Florists for a number of years. He intends to go this year and expects to reach San Francisco in 45 days.

John Birnie, who now conducts the range for many years the property of his father, the late John Birnie, is fairly well sold out of bedding plants and is now planting chrysanthemums. The late Mr. Birnie made his range noted for fine geraniums and his son has sustained its reputation.

Oscar Boehler not only has a range of considerable extent but also does a good retail business. Through his courtesy we attended, for an hour, the annual picnic of the North Bergen schools, June 4, held at Schuetzen Park, and the kiddies certainly had a fine time.

H. Baumann is another fern specialist whom we found fat and happy. He has a considerable glass area and specializes in table ferns.

Rudolph Wittman is well sold out of bedding plants of which he had a large stock and is now planting chrysanthemums.

The Boulevard Florist is a recent retail enterprise at 148 Summit avenue, George Apostle being the proprietor.

W. Gulliksen has a prosperous retail store at 150 Summit avenue, with a considerable glass area at Secaucus, N. J.

George Giatras has rebuilt a number of houses and is preparing for a large stock of ferns for next season.

H. Baumann has a son who conducts a prosperous flower and bird store on Summit avenue.

A. F. F.

WINCHESTER, IND.—I. J. Byers reports Memorial day trade good, the demand being heavy for vases filled with vincas and flowering plants. Some peonies were in bloom, but out-door roses were off-color. Carnations and snapdragons were used in quantity for bouquets.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif., President; J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., First Vice-President; E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district on the whole are looking well.

ADVICES from Santa Cruz, Calif. are to the effect that the freesia harvest will begin about June 7 under favorable weather conditions.

VISITED CHICAGO: Howard M. Earl, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., enroute to the California sweet pea show and seed trade convention.

THE sweet pea seed crop in New Zealand is almost a failure on account of the dry weather last year, and deliveries on orders placed by American houses will be practically nil.

JOHN DEWIT, the well-known representative of Ernst & Von Spreckelsen, Hamburg, Germany, who went to the front last August, is home on furlough. He has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant and was decorated with the iron cross at Tannenberg.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade June 9 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.—The Leonard Seed Co. supplied the grass seed for the new automobile speedway at Maywood.—J. C. Vaughan visited Grand Rapids, Mich., last week.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Crimson clover seed is in great demand and it has developed during the week that local dealers will be able to supply the new crop seed on or before the middle of August at prices ranging from $9 to $9.50 per 100 pounds.—R. J. B.

THE Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co. is mailing the seed trade invitations to visit its establishment at Gilroy, Calif., during the convention tour with illustrated booklet showing the great onion seed fields and other products of Santa Clara County. The invitation is tastefully decorated with eschscholtzia in color. Gilroy is only 85 miles from San Francisco.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—A. J. Brown, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., expects to join the Chicago delegation to the San Francisco convention. Mr. Brown reports good wholesale and retail business this season and contracts for his pea and bean specialties well booked up.—The L. F. Jones Seed Co.'s business has been well up to the average with the prospect of continued good demand throughout the present month.

THE Wholesale Seedsmen's League has put itself on record as favoring the sale of seeds heretofore sold by the bushel as a unit of measure, by the hundred pounds as a unit of measure, as is done in California. The adoption of such a unit would meet the difficulties of the existing legislative enactments of various states fixing different weights as the weights per bushel of peas, beans, corn and other articles.

THE high prices have induced Michigan farmers to plant a considerable increased acreage of beans this year. The buying prices of white beans at Grand Rapids June 3, hand picked, were $2.75 to $2.80; red kidney, $3 to $3.25; the selling prices, including bags in car lots, $3.10 to $3.15 for white; red kidney, $3.50 to $3.75. Cash beans in Detroit the same date were quoted at $3.10; July, $3.15.

American Sweet Pea Society.

CALIFORNIA SHOW DATE ADVANCED.

California has experienced a wave of warm weather the past week which has forced sweet peas very rapidly into bloom. After the heavy and unusual rains of May, sweet peas had taken on an unusual growth and the sweet pea exhibition, to be held in the Palace of Horticulture, Exposition Grounds, was postponed until June 23 and 24. On account of the warm weather and the fact that the peas were blossoming prematurely, the officials of the American Sweet Pea Society were forced to change the date again from June 23 to 24 to June 11. The exhibition now will be held on Friday, June 11.

LESTER L. MORSE, President.
San Francisco, June 5, 1915.

San Francisco Convention.

S. F. Leonard, chairman of the American Seed Trade Association's transportation committee for the annual convention to be held at San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, states there will be a big party starting from Chicago this week, Saturday, June 12. Mr. Leonard urges members and their friends to make reservations without delay. The train leaves Chicago June 12, at 8:05 p. m. via the Santa Fe, Kansas City, June 13, at 9:00 a. m., where any number can join the party if reservations are made before the train starts June 12. Particulars of the programme, itinerary and rates appeared in our issue of April 3, page 590. For reservations and all further information address S. F. Leonard, care of the Leonard Seed Co., 226-230 West Kinzie street, Chicago. Telephone, Main 2762.

Seed Crop Outlook.

Owing to the conditions in Europe, American seedsmen find it impossible to make statements at this time of any definite percentages of crop deliveries. In France, Holland and England, owing to the dry weather prevailing during the summer of 1914, the shortage of plants prevented the production of a normal supply of plants for the biennial seed crops of 1915, and because of the unfavorable weather during the past winter the present prospects of crops of beets, mangels, cabbage, carrot, turnips and rutabaga, have been so reduced as to make an intelligent forecast of the results impossible at the present time. Besides the above conditions the general shortage of labor must be taken into consideration. The above conditions also make it impossible to estimate on yields of such annuals as radish, spinach, egg plant, pepper and endive.

American grown crops of peas, beans and corn have been planted up to date of normal acreage. In California liberal preparation has been made for onion, carrot, celery, lettuce, radish and sweet peas, the stands of which are almost uniformly good, with good growing conditions. Salsify promises to be a short crop, and while mildew has made its appearance in some fields of onion this may, or may not, become serious.

Wasting Boxes.

"For our shipping department it is necessary for us to buy some boxes," says a prominent merchant, "and while the idea of saving one box may not appear to be very much, yet in a year's time at 5 cents each I have no doubt that interest on an investment of $1,000 could be saved by carefully opening our boxes and nailing the tops back on them. This might seem a little thing, but no one can deny the fact that the man who is willing to take care of the little things will some day find that it was worth the while. This same efficiency can be improved by carefully noticing broken packages on the shelves and selling goods from these packages instead of breaking open a new package for each sale. There is absolutely no action more uncalled for than that of tearing a hole in the top end or side of a box in preference to lifting off the cover."

Seed Dealer - Not Farmer.

Judge A. M. Cochran, of the United States District court, recently handed down a decision in which he affirmed a recent decision of Referee A. M. Cox, of Cynthiana, Ky., in the bankruptcy case of R. B. Hutchcraft, a seed and feed dealer of Paris, Ky. The bankruptcy proceedings were started against Mr. Hutchcraft after he made an assignment to the First National Bank of Paris. Mr. Hutchcraft claimed exemption from involuntary bankruptcy on the ground that he was a farmer and tiller of the soil and therefore exempt under the statutes. The courts decided that while he is an extensive farmer his main business was that of a dealer and that he could be adjudged a bankrupt. The failure was due to the failure of the George Alexander bank of Paris a few months ago.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Strawberries are at least two weeks late, and from present indications will still bear abundantly July 4. A record pea crop has been produced and prices are holding firm. Shipping demand for cabbage is unusually good. A new and heavy demand for cold storage potatoes has developed.—R. J. B.

Head Lettuce.

The popularity of head lettuce is on the increase. This is partly due to the long continued season of southern shipments. Often this southern lettuce is of excellent quality and the nature of the product adapts it for long shipment. With this southern supply new problems have come up. As this lettuce is enroute for a long time, it bleaches and yellows, to which the buyer has become accustomed to such an extent that the fresh home-grown product is rejected as "green." No argument will help. The city buyer wants his head lettuce hard and bleached. Therefor soft and green heads are hard to sell at any price. Those who would buy a loose lettuce prefer a leaf lettuce of the Simpson or Grand Rapids type. We have made a specialty of head lettuce for years and have found that in our locality we cannot produce head lettuce to suit the market by seeding the crop outdoors as the heading period falls into the month of June, when temperatures run too high.

We have spared no experimentation to find suitable varieties, soil or fertilizers, but the final result is a conviction that we cannot overcome the defects of high temperatures. Hot weather means loose lettuce and coupled with overhead irrigation means rotten lettuce. A cloudy spell followed by intense sunshine in June means sunburnt lettuce. However, by forwarding the plants in a cool greenhouse and transplanting out as soon as weather permits, say from March 25 to April 10, we can head the crop in May, when weather conditions are generally favorable. For a number of years our May crop has been excellent, so much so that experts have pronounced it the best lettuce ever shipped into our market from any source whatsoever.

The next big trouble was a succession. This May crop comes in a big rush and after we have the trade all looking to us for head lettuce we generally were out, as a few hot days in June and a bad rain would wind up the crop. All attempts at succession have failed. However, we have succeeded fairly well with cold storage. As soon as our May crop is at its best we pack away one-half in cold storage. Then we can prolong the season fully six weeks. The requirements are perfectly sound, hard, mature heads, cut and packed dry and stored at once in a temperature above 32 degrees and below 40 degrees. We have used with success either the standard bushel hampers or the common bushel strawberry crate. Either of these will hold from 20 to 25 heads and the storage charges are 5 cents per month per crate. We are only two miles to large city storage house, hence have made no attempt to put in our own plant. This lettuce will bleach in storage and resembles the southern crop. For varieties we can find nothing as good as Big Boston. We are using a part of the newer French Green Big Boston and French Unrivalled. These latter are more compact and a few days earlier.

Canned Tomatoes Seized.

Dr. I. K. Phelps and Patrick Cronin of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture in Washington, are in Chicago for a conference with Assistant United States District Attorney Frederick Dickinson, who is preparing to start suit in a number of cases under the pure food and drugs act.

It is probable that suits will be started against a number of canning companies and wholesale grocers. Within the last month more than a dozen shipments of navy beans have been seized.

Deputy Marshal Maurice Klein yesterday seized 400 cases of tomato pulp at the Griswold & Walker warehouse at 347 East North Water street, consigned to J. M. Paver from the Scottsburg Canning Company, Scottsburg, Ind. The 400 cases contained 9,600 cans of tomatoes and the federal chemist's report on his investigation of a sample showed 34,000,000 bacteria to the cubic centimeter.

Two hundred pounds of coumarin, valued at $5 a pound, used in the making of artificial vanilla compound, has also been seized. It is alleged to have been composed of 50 per cent of acetanilid.

NEW YORK.—The Jakarsen Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital of $50,000.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Three greenhouses, each 30x160 feet, will be remodeled and new houses added to the range of H. Kleinstarink, Letterle avenue.—Wind that attained a velocity of over 70 miles an hour caused damage to glass at the ranges of F. Walker & Co., Anders Rasmussen and other growers in this vicinity, May 25.

BUSINESS IS NORMAL.

Trade has been about normal the past week. Orders for commencements are keeping up well and design work has been especially good. Cut flower stock sells well, with peonies leading in popularity. The graduation exercises at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis helped the local trade, many of the floral arrangements being sent from this city.

Edward A. Seidewitz's forces were kept busy with orders for the June week at the naval academy. Orders for commencement designs have been numerous.

The Florists' Exchange supplied their quota of cut flowers and designs for the June week and commencement exercises at Annapolis.

Design work for commencements has been heavy and the forces at Hamilton Floral Shop and Halliday's have been kept busy.

Chas. E. Smith & Son have removed to their new building on Liberty street and report a heavy demand in cut flowers.

Cut flower sales at Wm. J. Halliday's have been good, helping to hold business normal.

R. J. B.

FT. WORTH, TEX.—Five hundred and one entries have already been received in the flower garden competition in the city beautiful campaign. The entries this year already equal the total number of last season.

SOUTH BERKSHIRE, MASS.—Improvements, which will include new greenhouses and other buildings, to the extent of about $200,000, for growing flowers, fruits and vegetables, are contemplated on the estate of William Hall Walker.

A large nursery company has just purchased 4,000 acres of land near the town of Mission, north of here, and will rush work on the tract. The vast acreage will be planted to olives, oranges, lemons, grape fruit, vines of all kinds, peach, pear, fig, plum and prune trees. More than half a million plants are now on the way to the tract and will be ready for transplanting next winter. Several carloads of machinery and implements of all kinds have already arrived.

Two Chinese Roses.

For many years the cinnamon rose, Rosa cinnamomea, has been the first rose in the arboretum to open its flowers, but this year two Chinese species are beginning to flower at the same time. These are R. Hugonis and R. omeiensis. The former has pale, yellow, single flowers about two and a half inches in diameter and is a tall, perfectly hardy, free-flowering shrub with slender, erect and spreading, pale brown stems and small pale leaves. There are not many yellow flowering roses that are perfectly hardy and free-flowering in this climate and R. Hugonis is certainly one of the most valuable single roses which has lately been introduced into gardens. It is a native of western China and was first raised in England from seeds sent to the British museum by the missionary for whom it has been named. There is a plant of this rose in the shrub collection which will be in full bloom when this bulletin reaches its Massachusetts readers. Rosa omeiensis is flowering in the arboretum for the first time. It is a vigorous shrub with young stems covered with bright red prickles, and pure white fragrant flowers hardly more than an inch in diameter, borne singly at the ends of short lateal twigs, and bright red ellipsoidal fruits which are borne on stout, elongated, yellow, fleshy stalks, and are very showy. It is common on many of the mountain ranges of western China at elevations of from 6,000 to 11,000 feet above the sea, and sometimes grows 20 feet tall and forms great thickets. Its name is derived from that of one of the sacred mountains of China, Mt. Omei, where it is common. This rose promises to be a valuable and distinct garden shrub in this climate and its hardiness, vigor and stout stems armed with numerous straight spines suggest its value as a hedge plant. It will be found in the collection of Chinese shrubs on the southern slope of Bussey Hill with the other roses raised from seeds collected by Wilson in western China. — Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Drug Plants Not Unusually Profitable.

Although a large amount of money is spent annually for the importations of crude drugs, and the extermination of a number of valuable native drug plants is threatened, government specialists do not believe that the growing of drug plants offers any unusual opportunities for profit to the American farmer. Drug plants are subject to the same diseases and risks as other crops and, in addition, knowledge of the best methods of cultivation and handling is less general than in the case of other and better known crops. In issuing a new bulletin, Farmers' Bulletin 663, "Drug Plants Under Cultivation," the United States department of agriculture, therefore, warns farmers that in order to have the cultivation of drug plants financially successful in this country, the introduction of improved methods and the extensive use of machinery is probably necessary. Prospective growers are urged, therefore, to acquaint themselves with market conditions before investing any considerable sum of money in this way.

In suitable soil and under favorable weather conditions the following plants have done well under cultivation in numerous places in the Central and Eastern States and, if the difference in climatic conditions is not too great will probably be suitable in other regions:

Anise	Echinacea
Belladonna	Elecampane
Burdock	Fennel
Caraway	Henbane
Catnip	Horehound
Camomile	Pennyroyal
Conium	Sage
Coriander	Stammonium
Digitalis	Tansy
Dill	Thyme

The bulletin mentioned contains specific instructions for the cultivation of each of these plants and of a number of others. In general, it may be said that many wild medicinal plants are much more difficult to propagate from seeds than species commonly grown in gardens. Moreover, in growing medicinal plants from seed it is much better to start the plants in a greenhouse or hotbed than to sow the seed directly in the field.

JOSEPH HEACOCK CO., Railway Station, Jenkintown. Wyncote, Pa.

Secaucus, N. J.

Komitsch & Junge are specialists in orchids, sweet peas and chrysanthemums. Their peas being now well cut out, they are filling up the space with chrysanthemums. At the residence connected with this range, where the partners live, there is a fine lawn and garden, many beautiful flowering and foliage shrubs being noted.

Carl A. Woerner, who now has the range formerly owned and worked by Otto Grundmann, has a very fine stock of lilies that will be in bloom in about a week. He has other lily stock coming on and aims to supply the market throughout the year.

Emil Savoy, who is a plant specialist, was found busy potting up a stock of palms that had just arrived. He has planted in the field a fine stock of bougainvilleas.

The large range located on the County road which was recently conducted by a company, is now conducted by A. Shirfield.

W. Gulliksen, who has a retail store in West Hoboken, has a considerable glass area here and grows a variety of stock.

H. J. Rarum has had a fine cut of sweet peas and is now preparing for chrysanthemums. A. F. F.

Los Angeles County Hort. Society.

The regular meeting of the society was held June 2, the feature of the evening being a talk on "California Native Flowers," by Theodore Payne, considered the foremost authority on this subject, and the largest attendance ever assembled at any of our meetings, filled the hall to its capacity. The specimens of subjects were never so numerous. Mrs. Belle Miller, of La Cresenta, exhibited over 40 varieties of the native flowers; Dr. and Mrs. Bullard and E. D. Sturtevant also added many rare varieties, not included in the collection of Mrs. Miller. Mr. Payne stated that California has the most wonderful native flora on the globe, but that people of California do not realize the beauty of our wild flowers as much as do the people of Europe. Many varieties of our native plants are grown quite extensively across the water, and are highly prized. For some reason or other little attention has been paid to them here in the past, but of late through Mr. Payne's efforts much interest has been aroused, so it is hoped in the future our gardens will contain many of the free blooming varieties, both in the flowers and shrubs. For the shrubs, Mr. Payne emphasized the Fremontia Carpinteria Californica, the ceranthus and others. He described the flowers, their beauties, their usefulness and the localities of the state where the different varieties habitate. He did not specialize on any one or two varieties, but took the different specimens on exhibition and spoke of their culture and propagation. At the close of his address he was given a standing vote of thanks by members.

At the next regular meeting the chair appointed Frank Lewin of Hawthorne to deliver a paper on roses.

Mr. Blake, representing the Pasadena Horticultural Society, extended a cordial invitation to this society to attend their annual picnic Sunday, June 20, at Eagle Rock Canyon. Upon a straw vote it was estimated that Los Angeles would attend about 150 strong. A vote of thanks was extended to the Pasadena society for their hospitality. The secretary was instructed to mail out announcements with return card, to all members, giving full information and route of transportation to the picnic.

Frank A. Lewin, H. J. Scherer, Harry Johnson, Chas. Gutting and J. N. Fennelly were proposed for memberships in the society, and favorably acted upon.

Though the planting season is now well advanced, great activity is yet noted at the nursery and range of Bobbink & Atkins. Shipments of shrubbery and various plants are constantly going out. As a matter of course, with planting, cultivating and cleaning up, the nursery is a very busy place.

At the range of the Julius Roehrs Co. there is great acticity. The large stock of young plants of the various types of Begonia Lorraine is selling fast. In addition there is a constant shipment of various plants from their large greenhouse stock.

What They Say:

Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,
L. Buckendorf,

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Freesias.

A crop of freesias, or a few plants in pots in bloom, at Christmas is a valuable asset on that holiday. In order to have them in bloom at that time the bulbs should be planted by July 1. Select the large strong bulbs, and by careful inspection many will be found on which the root eyes are beginning to swell. These will make the earliest blooming plants, and this selecting will produce plants that will all bloom at the same time. The bulbs should be planted in a good soil enriched with well rotted manure, but no fresh manure; it is a well understood principle that bulbs of all kinds do not grow well in soil full of fresh manure. Eight to ten large bulbs in a 6-inch pot will give the best results. The pots should be well watered and placed in a dark, cool place until the shoots appear above the ground, when they should be given a light location. As soon as the growths get tall enough they should be staked and tied. By continual early selection of the bulbs, and keeping the earliest separate, an early strain can be assured.

Calceolarias.

A plant that always attracts attention and is as decorative as cineraria or other plants of that kind, and yet but little grown, is the calceolaria. The culture is very similar to that of the cineraria and is fully as easy. The seeds should be sown at once and shaded until they have produced one or two leaves when the shade should be made lighter. As soon as large enough they should be potted into small pots and shifted along into larger sizes as fast as is required. They should, as soon as well established, be given a light, airy location not shady enough for them to become drawn, but if in the full sunlight will have to be watched closely that they do not get dry. They will require cool quarters during the winter, if nice stocky plants are desired, and under this treatment fine 6-inch pot plants may be had in bloom in early spring that will surely attract attention. For the last potting a good rich soil will be required and when they begin to bloom watering with liquid manure will be beneficial. Like the cineraria they are quickly ruined by aphis and constant fumigation will be necessary. Many growers stand the plants on tobacco stems which are renewed as the strength is lost.

Bougainvilleas.

The plants of bougainvilleas that are through blooming should be cut back into shape and potted in preparation for the next season's growth. Much depends upon the summer care of all hard-wooded stock if nice specimens are to be grown. They should be plunged outside in a frame or placed in full sun in a light airy house. Outside culture is far preferable for all this class of stock in order that a good strong growth, well furnished with foliage, may be assured. Be sure that they never get too dry. The great danger of all hard-wooded stock is letting it dry out, for it does not show it as quickly as the softer growing plants, but the check is more severe and the plants seldom fully recover from it. The young stock rooted earlier should be placed in a similar location, and kept well pinched back into shape, until enough shoots have been obtained to insure a good shapely plant, when they can be allowed to grow freely, but any extra strong leaders are better cut back during the season. Any chance flowers that show should be picked off at once, that a good strong stocky plant may be obtained and the strength all retained for that purpose.

Oleanders.

A plant that does not receive the attention that it should is the oleander. While there probably would not be a large demand for this plant, yet it is an old time favorite, and well grown specimens in bloom are a valuable addition to a porch or lawn. They are too often so sadly neglected that they get unshapely and far from being an ornament, but a little attention to trimming them into shape after they get through blooming will keep them in good condition. They can be wintered in any cool quarters, and if brought into the heat and light in early spring will be full of bloom in June and July and a valuable decorative plant. The cuttings root easily and at any time when the plant is in growth, and grow very rapidly for a hard-wooded plant. Any florist carrying a line of assorted stock should include a few of these in the variety which he cultivates. The only insect which troubles them is the mealy bug, but a good frequent hard syringing will soon dislodge them.

Nephrolepis.

Probably no plant that the florist grows gives more return for the labor spent in its culture or the space that it occupies than the Boston fern and its various sports. The old Boston is still, however, the easiest to handle and grow. The plants should be repotted every year, and with good treatment are sure of making nice plants. Any plants that are in poor condition can be divided and with the young stock planted in a bench of good rich soil. The house should be shaded enough to assure of good color on the foliage, but not heavy enough to prevent the house being maintained at a good high temperature. During the day the house should stand at about 80 degrees with a little ventilation which should be closed down before the sun leaves the houses. The plants can be set six inches apart and the soil should be two parts loam, one part leaf mold, and one part rotted manure. The house should be frequently syringed to keep a moist atmosphere. Under these conditions fine plants can be produced from young stock in three months. In September they should be lifted and placed in 6-inch pots, if single specimens are desired, or three or four plants can be placed in a 9-inch or 10-inch pot if larger plants are wanted. In lifting the plants they can be cut around about two inches from the crown, and lifted with a trowel, leaving the runners in the bench, if the place they occupy is not wanted at once. The runners will immediately break into small plants which can be placed in flats for young stock for the next season. The finer varieties of this fern, such as Whitmani, do not submit to the lifting and potting as well as the old Boston and better plants can be obtained by potting along into larger pots as may be required. The only insects that trouble these ferns are the brown scale, and the plants should be kept clean from these either by washing, or spraying with aphine, or a weak nicotine solution.

Poinsettias.

The propagation of poinsettias should be pushed to the utmost at this time, for it is the plants that are rooted early in July that make the best single specimens at Christmas. Those that are rooted later in July and during August will make fine plants for pans, placing four to eight plants in a 6-inch or 8-inch pan, for they will be much shorter than those rooted early in July. The plants that were rooted earlier should now be growing nicely and should be shifted into larger pots as soon as they require it; under no circumstances allow them to become pot-bound until the bracts begin to set in November. They should be placed in the bright sun as soon as strong enough to endure it, that the growth may be short and sturdy and the leaves as close together as is possible. A long, drawn plant grown in the shade, with the leaves far apart, is not the typical plant for the holidays and does not meet with approval.

Municipal Rose Gardens.

The chief attraction of every large city is its public park; it is the pleasure ground of the people who take great pride in it themselves and never tire in extolling its great beauties to the visitor. If a convention elects to come to the city, a drive through the park is sure to be one of the important events in the entertainment of the delegates. The particularly bright beauty spots are the conservatories and flower beds, the brilliant colors of the latter being always sure of favorable comment.

In nearly every city park there are beds of roses, but with few exceptions they are not of such importance as to be even an attractive feature. In the month of June walking through the suburbs of any large city or town, in which reside the well-to-do class of people, whose spacious grounds or even medium-sized lawns show the owners take a pride in them, one is sure to see many beautiful roses; the ramblers on porches, pillars, pergolas or fences, while beds of hybrid perpetuals, hybrid teas and other sorts are all aglow with their glorious blossoms. While these private collections give great pleasure to their owners and are much admired by the passers-by, they are but a glimpse, of what is possible and what should be a reality in every large community—a municipal rose garden. This should be in a portion of the park, easy of access, one, two or more acres being set aside and turned over to the landscape gardener to lay out in the latest up-to-date manner, with pergolas, summer houses, arches, pillars and other useful and ornamental supports for the climbers, while terraces, depressed beds and level surfaces are prepared for the hybrids, free flowering hybrid teas and baby ramblers of the polyantha type. The surface of this garden should be a sod with no gravel or other paths. As the beds are laid out and planted, the paths become evident, and have many advantages over the gravel. The unbroken green surface is a much better setting for the garden as a whole.

What is possible in an extensive and well arranged garden of this character has been shown in the comparatively small one-acre garden at Hartford, Conn. This beautiful spot, with its well arranged beds, its arch-covered grass walks, its pillars and long trellis fences, when all aglow with their beautiful masses of color the first week of July, make this indeed an earthly paradise, the delight of thousands of visitors daily during the season. Such an attraction, of greater or less extent, in keeping with the population, should be possible in every community of this broad land. There has never been an annual event in any city or town that could compare to the beauty and magnificence of a well-kept garden, planted with the great variety of the climbing, the hybrids, the hybrid teas and the polyantha roses that are now available. With each recurring season "Rose week" would be the special event of the year. Nothing could be more inspiring or elevating than this beautiful display of nature at its best, heightened by the skilled hand of the landscape artist to get the best color and landscape effect.

As an educational feature and help to the florists' business, it could not fail but be of great benefit. Many a neglected yard would be put in order, porches would be seen to blossom out that never knew a rose before, entrance gates would be arched with bloom and ever-flowering roses would brighten the corners of many a heretofore neglected garden.

THE PARK ROSE GARDEN.

Imagine a plot of five acres in extent. As one approaches, along the drives are seen single specimens trained to pillars of such varieties as Tausendschon, Excelsa, Lady Gay, Philadelphia Rambler, Gardenia, American Pillar and a host of other favorites. Arriving in the garden the scene is almost beyond description, its undulating surface of green sward, the terraces, the depressed plateaus, the long pergolas, the arched paths, the lattice-covered seats and the summer houses, all covered with their wealth of buds and blossoms, are masses of color, gorgeous in the extreme. The hedge-like lattices, enclosing the grounds with their solid banks of white, red, pink or yellow, are dazzling in their beauty.

The hybrid teas in the depressed plateaus and other beds, the polyantha or baby ramblers in the long borders and in the terraces join in the spring festival with the ramblers and keep up the interest throughout the summer.

Is not such a paradise of roses worth working for? It is possible—the expense of installation is not prohibitive, nor is the care and preservation. If the trade in each community would get together, select the ground, have their landscape artist prepare a colored plan, get the park commissioners interested, also the prominent citizens. Garden societies and civic improvement associations are to be found in all large cities and towns. "The City Beautiful" is the slogan everywhere. Let the trade lead the way with a generous subscription and others will follow. Push the good work along; the realization is well worth all the effort that will be found necessary to bring it about.

Working Up the Surplus.

Even with the most careful buying, almost every day will have its surplus. At one time the run has been for pink or red roses; the white are left at another, white and red carnations accumulate, and if not disposed of, or used up in work, there will be a loss in this item. Vases of snapdragons hang fire—nobody fancies them, or calla lily stock begins to gather pollen; the sweet peas are accumulating and getting light in color; violets are also overstocked, too many of yesterday's are still left, and so on down the line—one thing today, another tomorrow, depending on the demand.

While it is inevitable that there will be loss from unsold stock, a careful and studied handling will prevent this becoming serious. Flowers that are to open, or not fresh enough to be sold by the dozen, can generally be used up advantageously in baskets or in work for funerals. Many occasional customers, particularly those who buy commencement flowers, or wreaths, sprays, etc., for funerals, are not quite certain just what they want, so that the salesman who knows his stock and what needs to be sold, makes his suggestions with this in mind. Sprays or wreaths are recommended and the order taken, if possible without specifying the exact flowers to be used. "Just leave it to us and we will see that you get something handsome," is the final word, which the piece when turned out is almost always sure to be for the price.

The variety combinations of stock on hand that is not moving, can be made very presentable with a little careful handling and not too much mingling of colors. In the wreaths, roses that are pretty well open can be used as a foundation, and with hyacinths, freesias, sweet peas or lily of the valley, violets, etc., to top off, without covering up or hiding the roses, a very creditable piece can be turned out. The roses for the spray should always be fairly full; smaller, tight buds are not nearly as effective. The snapdragons can be worked into a beautiful spray with roses; in fact, almost anything can be used in such an arrangement, and when tied with a suitable ribbon is very effective.

Keeping down, or using up the surplus, is a part of the successful management of the store. Stock that is accumulating is to be pushed, and should the customer favor white flowers, when it is desirable to work off the pink, then it is up to the salesman to so change their mind that they think that color will be the best and they go away with the idea that they made the best choice and secured just what they wanted. Many orders are received over the 'phone and in most cases the customer will take the suggestion of the salesman as to the best flowers to be used, so that if careful handling of the stock is kept in mind when sales are being made, there will not be very much left to go down the chute.

Plants can also be handled and worked off before they are a total loss, principally by reducing the price. Many storekeepers hold on to the original profit, even after the plant has began to have a passe appearance. Some customers like to bargain, offering 50 cents to $1 less than the price asked. After this has been refused, the plant then stands the dealer, not what it originally cost him, but the price refused, as he could have sold it for that figure, made his smaller profit and invested again. It is best to keep close tab on the blooming stock, moving it off as it deteriorates by reductions in price, taking less profit rather than holding for the original figure and taking a total loss in the end. Better sell things quickly at a smaller profit and with new additions, keep the stock fresh and inviting.

Cocos Weddelliana.

This dainty, graceful, slender-leaved palm has of late years become a great favorite. At one time it was rarely grown to any size, most of the plants being used as a center for ferneries. Many growers tried it and gave it up in turn, as the foliage would turn yellow, scarcely fifty plants out of a hundred being salable. Growers in Europe finally began to grow the palm into larger sizes, which added greatly to its beauty and effectiveness. With this example before them, Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa., who had grown the cocos in quantity in smaller sizes, took up the production of larger plants. Its peculiarities soon became known to them, and now it is as easily managed as a kentia, a large range of several houses is entirely filled with it, where it can be seen growing luxuriously in all sizes up to plants five feet in height. It has many uses, first as a center for ferneries, larger sizes adding grace to the plant baskets of the holiday season, or banked with choice ferns as a center table piece. Larger plants are in a class by themselves as ornaments in jardinieres for the drawing room, their bright, glossy foliage, with its graceful curves, almost lace-like in appearance, makes it a plant gem of the first water. When of good size, it is quite a hardy plant, standing very well the average atmosphere and treatment of the ordinary dwelling. It is a plant that should be in every florist's stock, as if more generally introduced, it would become a companion to the kentia. In cut flower work it can be used to advantage, small to medium sized plants cut off and used for a spray of green, or to add a touch of elegance to a large wreath or other design, are more than worth their cost.

Dreer's Rose Test and Peony Gardens.

For the past three weeks the nurseries of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., have been the Mecca of the lovers of flowers, both amateur and professional, their object being especially to see the roses in the test garden, which, on account of the cool weather, have come along gradually and have been better than ever before. While it can be called a test garden, yet it is more correctly an exhibition of varieties—an outdoor museum as it were, containing everything of merit in the classes displayed.

The hybrid teas are the feature; all the meritorious sorts, which have won a place, are seen in blocks of six to a dozen plants, while the newer varieties, from one to a half a dozen plants, are in their second or third year. The most recent introductions of this or last year, are all on trial; one or more plants of a kind, many of them under number. They are a grand sight at this time, entrancingly beautiful, with their great variety of form and color. Messrs. Eisele and Clarke went carefully over the beds one day last week, looking for some that could be discarded, but found their task most difficult, and finally determined that they must confine the cutting down to the hybrid perpetuals, which could not keep up in the race with their more beautiful and particularly free flowering relatives of the hybrid teas.

The roses are planted in long longitudinal beds with grass turf walks between. This green background sets off their masses of color in great relief and is much pleasanter to walk on than gravel. To describe the varieties would take a volume. They must be seen and no one ever goes away without increased admiration and love for the queen of flowers. Many similar gardens on a small scale have been started with the inspiration of a visit to this garden of delight.

The peonies, on a large plot three miles from the main nursery, would take almost a day to inspect. They are gorgeous masses of color when in full flower, a sight worth a visit of itself. All the standard sorts are to be found here correctly named. The undesirables have been weeded out through a process of elimination, while all the new ones that are brought out annually are given a chance. Peonies take a long time to become set and of sufficient strength to produce their best flowers; those of the first year or two are apt to be disappointing, propagation being necessarily slow of a new sort, as it must be done by division of the roots. It takes almost ten years to get up any sized stock of a new variety.

One could spend a week going over and inspecting the various sections and divisions of this great establishment and then not see it all. The herbaceous collection seems almost to be without limit. The hardy phlox, when in flower, are wonderful in their great variety. The acres of dahlias of all classes are the largest and most varied collection in the United States. Cannas are also a feature, as all the standards, everything of merit and still untried new varieties, are seen in this section, acres and acres in extent. Acres of petunias grown for seed, each flower separately hybridized, for which this house is celebrated, the water lily pond, the iris beds and a host of other specialties grown in quantity are seen and all go to make up the magnitude of this great nursery.

In the immense ranges of glass are found the largest and most varied collection of tropical plants in this country. Kentia palms are handled in all sizes by the thousand. A special feature is the Cocus Weddelliana, all grown here from the seed up to speciman plants four to five feet in height. Ferns are seen in a bewildering assortment. Cibotium Schiedei is a specialty; this firm was the first to send it out as a hardy fern, suitable for decorative purposes. Adiantum Farleyense and the Glory fern are also grown by the houseful. Take it all and all, it is the greatest establishment of its kind in the world.

The master hand, whose skill and untiring energy has brought it to its present enviable position, is Jacob G. Eisele. He is still at his post, in vigorous manhood, and with his corps of able assistants, brought up under his supervision, is to be found every day, planning and working with them for a still greater efficiency. Floriculture at Mass. Agric. College.

The department of floriculture offers several new courses for the next college year. The outline of courses to be given in floriculture is as follows:

Course 1. Greenhouse management. This course is designed to familiarize students with the methods followed in the management of greenhouse crops. The students are instructed in the practical operation of glazing, concrete bench construction, watering, potting, fumigating, ventilating, and in the method of propagation of plants by seed and cuttings. They will also be expected to arrange their hours according to the needs of the work. Juniors—Lectures, 2; laboratory, 6 hours; credit, 5; prerequisite, horticulture, 2. Associate Professor Nehrling and A. S. Thurston.

Course 2. Greenhouse management. Continuation of Course 1. In addition, work in the use of cut flowers and plants in decorative work, the arrangement of flowers in baskets, designs, vases, table and home decorations, will be considered. Juniors—Lectures, 2; laboratory, 6 hours; credit, 5. Associate Professor Nehrling and A. S. Thurston.

Course 3. Commercial floriculture. A detailed study of the methods of culture of greenhouse plants and cut flowers for wholesale and retail markets will be carried on. The care and marketing of all florists' crops will also be considered. Assigned readings on these topics. Seniors—Lectures 2; laboratory, 4; credit, 4; prerequisite, floriculture, 1 and 2. Associate Professor Nehrling.

Course 4. Commercial floriculture. A continuation of Course 3. Seniors—Lectures, 2; laboratory, 4; credit, 4; prerequisites, floriculture, 1, 2 and 3. Associate Professor Nehrling.

Course 5. Greenhouse construction. The design, construction, cost, maintenance, heating and ventilating of greenhouse structures. Also the drafting of specifications for commercial houses and private ranges. Should be taken with Floriculture 1. Juniors—Lectures, 2; laboratory, 2; credit, 3; prerequisite, horticulture, 2. Associate Professor Nehrling.

Course 6. Garden flowers and bedding plants. The propagation and culture of annuals and herbaceous perennials, bulbs, etc. Also a detailed study of all bedding plants used in outdoor work. Seniors—Lectures, 2; laboratory, readings and field trips, 3; credit, 3. Associate Professor Nehrling and A. S. Thurston.

Course 7. Conservatory work and decorative plants. A study of the types of tropical and subtropical foliage and flowering plants used in conservatory work. The arrangement and care will also be considered. Assigned readings. Should be taken with Course 4. Arrange time. Lectures, 2; laboratory, 2; credit, 3; prerequisites, floriculture, 2 and 3. Associate Professor Nehrling.

This spring a bontanical collection of herbaceous perennials has been started under the immediate supervision of A. S. Thurston, who has been making a special study of this subject. The collection which now contains about 400 different species and varieties, will be used for class study, observation and experimental study. The collection will be added to annually and it is intended to make this collection the largest and best in New England. The garden is composed of 18 beds, with 5-ft. grass walks. The main part of the garden is made up of three series of beds, with four beds in a series; each of the beds being 54 feet long and 12 feet wide. One row of six plants of each species or variety is the unit; and for convenience of study each genus is kept together. At the head of the garden there is a double row of beds each 30 feet long and 8 feet wide. To one side of the garden there are three large blocks of peonies.

With the close of the college year the regular work in floriculture has ended. Professor A. H. Nehrling, the head of the department, will stay in Amherst through the month of July to teach in the summer school, in which he offers two courses, one in amateur floriculture and one in garden flowers. At the close of the summer school Professor Nehrling will take a trip to the Pacific coast, where he will attend the two expositions and also take in the S. A. F. convention. He will return by way of Florida, where he will visit his father, Henry Nehrling.

A. S. Thurston, the assistant in floriculture, will spend the summer in graduate study at Cornell University.

The department strongly advises its students to get all the practical experience possible, and so each summer a number of the men go out into practical work. As usual, the department has placed a number of men for the summer. During the summer months, the department will make numerous repairs, among which will be the painting of the greenhouses and the construction of concrete frames.

Cult of the Daffodil in England.

Some 20 or 30 years ago it was thought by many that the daffodil and narcissi had outlived their welcome and that there was a danger of sinking rapidly in popular favor. Some of the big market growers had given up growing them because so many others had started the same game, and prices were not what they used to be. Then that far-seeing nurseryman, the late Peter Barr, took them in hand, and once more the public interest in them began to revive. Public parks and gardens took them up and planted them in thousands, not only in formal beds, but also in "wilderness" and more or less unkempt spots on the lines recommended by W. Robinson in his naturalizing crusade in British landscape gardening. Indeed, it may be said with truth that the ideas enunciated by Mr. Robinson 20 and even 40 years ago, although at the time regarded as rank heresies, have for many years been carried out in almost every garden of note in the British Isles. Curiously enough, however, people are under the impression that they themselves originated the idea of natuarilzing daffodils and narcissi in grassland and woodland, but the fact really is that they have grown up more or less permeated by the teachings of Mr. Robinson when they were only children. And now we have every class and grade in society in love with these charming amaryllis.

Perhaps one of the chief reasons that the daffodil and narcissus have advanced by leaps and bounds into popular esteem is that they have lent themselves so readily to the wiles of the hybridist. He has stepped in and by crossing and inter-crossing the different sections, has completely broken down the arbitrary lines previously laid down by botanists. Some wonderful creations have resulted from the labors of the hybridist. Of course, leading firms like Barr & Sons, Thomas Ware, Bath, Pearson & Sons and others, have held a predominant position in the daffodil world, but of late years amateurs, wealthy and otherwise, have taken a hand at the game, and have distinguished themselves by some wonderfully fine productions. Perhaps the oldest and most scientific of these is Mr. Engleheart, who at one time was practically alone in this field of labor. It was he who showed what was possible by careful selection and breeding, and since the laws of Mendelism have come to be recognized as a force in matters horticultural, immense strides have been made in the yearly production of novelties.

This is clearly demonstrated every spring at the Royal Horticultural Society's shows in London. Here one sees the very latest pets among daffodils and narcissi, and the only tantalizing thing about some of them is that when one advances, notebook in hand, to write down the name of some exquisite variety, he is disappointed to find that it is labelled with a number, like a convict without a name! Of course, the raiser tests public opinion in this way, and he soon finds that if a certain number or numbers are asked for frequently, he has struck a really good thing that is worth developing and naming.

At present the number of varieties is bewildering, and the sections so well defined a few years ago, are now broken down to such an extent that it is difficult to "place" some of the newer forms. In 1910 the narcissus committee of the Royal Horticultural Society attempted to draw up a logical system of nomenclature, to bring order out of chaos, and to a certain extent they have succeeded. There are now 11 different sections or divisions into which all daffodils or narcissi are supposed to fall; and if they do not fall into them naturally, they are pushed into one or other of the sections most suitable for the time being. Nevertheless, there are forms that elude all rules and regulations and must be described as nondescripts.

Of the 11 sections, perhaps the large-flowered or trumpet daffodils still holds supreme sway on account of size, boldness and grandeur of the blossoms, whether these be all yellow, or all white or cream, or bicolors, that is, with a yellow, lemon or primrose colored trumpet, and a white perianth. Among the self yellows the palm must be given to King Alfred, which never fails to attract universal admiration owing to the size, substance, deep color and perfect symmetry of the blooms. Queen of the West is another fine variety after the same style, and in the absence of King Alfred would make a splendid substitute. The older favorites like Horsfieldi, Emperor, Empress, Henry Irving, Golden Spur and Victoria, still hold their own, and they want a lot of beating for freedom of blossom and easy cultivation, especially for the market grower.

Next to the trumpet section, there is no doubt that the Poet's or Pheasant's Eye narcissus has taken a very remarkable hold upon the public. It has lent itself so readily to hybridizing, and has already evolved so many graceful forms, remarkable for the pure coloring of the perianth, and the enlargement and brilliant tinting of the corona, that there seems to be a fine future before it. The well-known variety, ornatus, and the later flowering one, recurvus, although still grown for market in hundreds of thousands, have been superseded so far as size, form and beauty are concerned. Nevertheless these old favorites will hold the day for several years to come, until the newer creations have become so numerous that the price of them will bring them within the means of the ordinary grower for market. At present perhaps the variety nearest this state of affairs is one called Horace. It has a bold, flat flower with pure white segments, and a conspicuous eye or corona, is a good "doer" and throws its blooms up on good, stiff, long stalks. Flowers of this variety realize twice and often three times as much in the florists' shops as those of ornatus, which comes in at the same time. Another good variety, in the same way as Horace, but about twice as dear, is Cassandra. It is perhaps a little larger and fuller than Horace, and perhaps if one has the latter there would be no need for the other, as they do really come fairly close together.

One other section of the newer narcissi is worth mention, namely, Poetaz varieties. At first the hybrids of these, obtained by crossing the Poet's narcissus with the bunch of Tazetta narcissus, were disappointing. The flowers were neither one thing or another, and were lacking in purity of color. Experience, however, has taught the hybridist how to obtain better forms, and now we have some that are models of vigor, purity of color, and excellence of shape. The individual blooms, although smaller than those of the Poet's narcissus, are nevertheless more substantial in petal, and what is a great gain from the florist's point of view, several flowers are borne on top of a long stout stem, instead of a solitary one as in the ordinary poeticus. As a market flower, I think there is a future before the Poetaz narcissi. This year I grew a few hundred bulbs, and sent the flowers to market with some of the late Poet's narcissus. The Poetaz were sold in a jiffy, and fetched three times more than the others. So I intend to develop that particular line at present. W.

GOOD TRADE FOLLOWS BEST MEMORIAL DAY.

Every florist in this city, without any exception, claims that they have experienced one of the best Memorial day's businesses in their history. The weather was ideal, and prior to the day itself, a very large shipping business was done which kept the market cleaned up every day. A great lot of flowers were sent to the northern part of the state and also to Nevada. The wholesale men disposed of a vast amount of stock in this way that otherwise would have been thrown on this market. Prices brought for all classes of stock were very satisfactory, as, owing to the previous period of bad weather there was no great abundance of outdoor stock. There were plenty of roses, all of which cleaned up well. The greatest call was for sweet peas and carnations. The former, unfortunately, were in short supply, as was expected. Carnations were in fairly good supply and advanced sharply during the week, owing to the steady demand. Bride gladioli as usual were in great demand and the supply was hardly enough to go around. America and Mrs. Francis King were also used largely. The demand for pot plants of all kinds was rather light, but in this city there is never a very great sale of plants for this day. What the people want is a great quantity of flowers. Trade has been holding up very well during the days following Memorial day. There are plenty of flowers of all kinds. Carnations are again plentiful and sweet peas are in great abundance. Spencers are very plentiful now and are bringing much better figures than common varieties. Orchids are also plentiful, especially cattleyas. Lily of the valley is coming in in large quantities and is all being disposed of easily. American Beauties are scarce, but all other roses are plentiful; some of the varieties are beginning to show the effect of the hot spell. Dahlias are coming in slowly and peonies are over.

NOTES.

The most interesting event held during the past week was the sweet pea show, in the Palace of Horticulture, under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society. Owing to the recent hot spell the date of the exhibit had again been changed to June 11, instead of June 23-24. The management of the show felt they were acting in the best interests of all by changing the date, because at that time the sweet peas were at their best. Lester L. Moore, president of the American Sweet Pea Society, left nothing undone to make this show a splendid one and used large space in the daily papers of this city, advertising the show. On June 12 the children of this city were invited to make a display of sweet peas, also under Mr. Morse's direction. Frank G. Cuthbertson, assistant secretary of the society, was Mr. Morse's co-worker in this project, which proved a great success.

The schedule for the chrysanthemum show to be held at the Palace of Horticulture in October, in conjunction with the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society has been mailed during the past week. The schedule is a very comprehensive one, showing a very large prize list. The committee in charge have worked long and carefully in preparing this list and it is on the whole quite satisfactory. H. Plath is to be manager, John R. Fotheringham, assistant manager, and T. F. Taylor is secretary. All the cash prizes offered are donated by the exposition. W. E. Rewer says that many growers have been preparing for this show for a long time and all expect it to prove our finest fall exhibition.

The seedsmen of this city are very busy just now preparing for the arrival of the American Seed Trade Association. President Morse has all the details well in hand. He is receiving hearty support from all the prominent California seed growers. Nearly all of them have been in this city as individuals, but this is the first time the association ever met in this city as a body.

H. Schluter, of San Rafael, paid a visit along the peninsula, the first in over 20 years. Mr. Schluter was once a private gardener in that locality but since establishing his nursery at San Rafael has never been able to see the early scenes of his labors. He plans to leave next fall for a trip around the world and retire from business.

Saturday, June 5, being Luther Burbank day at the fair grounds, the exposition directors presented Mr. Burbank with a bronze placque as an appreciation of his work in horticulture. A great many thousand packets of seeds of some of his improvements were distributed among the visitors free.

Chas. Navlet is making quite a prominent display of Spencer sweet peas in his new flower stand in the Emporium. G. W.

WORST GLUT OF THE YEAR.

The past two weeks have seen us through the worst glut of the year here, and there are so many flowers around that a person feels weak when he realizes that there are practically no sales for the thousands and thousands of flowers which find their way to the market. Of course the dumps and the street fakirs are usually the main arteries for the outlet. The extremely warm weather, which we have been having of late, has been making the growers and wholesalers work overtime, and, at the same time, is very detrimental to the retail business. June weddings and commencements are about all that keep trade alive, and transient business is practically dead. The carnival men, by the way, help to clean up the surplus stock of flowers, but the prices realized on this trade are very low. Carnations seem to be leading in the heavy supply, and are sold at from $5 to $10 for the best stock. Roses run a close second, and bring a trifle more. Some very fine America gladioli are being offered at $4 per 100, but even at that low figure, it is very hard to move them. Peonies are plentiful and good, but there is hardly any call for them. Good lilies and lily of the valley are about the only articles that are considered scarce these days. The plant business is holding out fairly well, and mixed hanging baskets are about all that have a good call. In spite of the general warmth, we have had a good amount of rainfall lately, which has helped outdoor flowers and carnation plants considerably.

NOTES.

E. J. McCallum has just finished up a week "touring" some of the Ohio towns with his road salesman, Ross Adgate. They called on the trade along the route, and found business good in florists' supplies.

W. A. Clark has been sojourning for a few days at Conneaut Lake, but says that this will not in the least interfere with a real vacation at Chautauqua later in the summer.

C. Phillips has taken over the business of the McKees Rocks branch of R. J. Daschbach, and keeps himself busy reviving trade there.

Frank Farney, of the M. Rice Co., passed through the city the early part of last week.

Boston.

BUSINESS VERY QUIET.

During the past week business was very quiet. Owing to the warm, sunny weather a large quantity of flowers were cut. On Saturday, June 12, there was a good cleanup, owing to the celebration of Memorial Sunday, but prices did not change. Roses, although quantities found a fair market, sold at low figures. Prices ranged from 2 to 8 cents, the demand being for short stock. American Beauties are being sacrificed at exceptionally low figures. Carnations were poor property. Many sold at 50 cents per 100, but the average price was from $1 to $2 per 100. Sweet peas went fairly well and prices ranged from 25 cents to 75 cents per 100. Peonies are coming in larger quantities and consequently prices have decreased. Good red and festiva maxima bring 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Gladioli sell fairly well, the best America bringing $1.50 per dozen.

NOTES.

William Tailby, of Wellesley, Mass., had charge of the decorations for the graduation at Dana hall, Friday, June 11, at Wellesley. Many flowers were used for this occasion and nearly all the leading florists' delivery autos of Boston were sent out heavily loaded. The Waban Rose Conservatories had over 200 boxes of roses to deliver for the occasion.

The Montgomery Rose Co., of Hadley, Mass., is sending to the Boston Rose Co. a fine lot of roses at present. Russell, Hadley, Ophelia and Sunburst were noted as being especially good. They at present are cutting from only two houses, the rest being newly planted and under the process.

F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, Mass., has a novelty in the line of a foliage plant for cut flower use. It is called a hardy adiantum and has much the appearance of the commonly used maiden hair fern.

J. Marshall, of Newport, R. I., is sending to Wm. Carr of the Boston Flower Exchange, some very good specimens of California yellow poppies, which take very well as a novelty.

E. K. Farr, of Stoneham, Mass., is cutting one of the cleanest and best looking lots of sweet peas coming to the markets. They are all Spencers, and of the choicest selection of colors. F. L. W.

St. Louis.

STOCK PLENTIFUL BUT DEMAND LIGHT.

The period of June weddings and the closing exercises of schools, etc., form the outlet for flowers. Stock has been plentiful all week with the demand limited. Summer dullness will be here in full force shortly. American Beauty roses, long stems, are plentiful. Carnations are getting smaller and ferns have been very scarce. Candidum lilies are seen everywhere as well as field daisies.

NOTES.

The local florists' club met June 10 at the Odd Fellow's hall, 50 members being present, with Jules Bourdet in the chair. Resolutions on the death of Henry J. Weber were passed. The picnic is to take place June 22, at Ramona park. Nothing will be done on the Carnation Society matter until the October meeting. A smoker took place after the meeting and all ex-presidents were called on for remarks.

The wholesale houses have decided to close at one o'clock Saturdays and remain closed until Monday morning. This will perhaps cause quite a few of the retailers to close up entirely Sunday. The growers will be notified and will ship stock so as to arrive Monday instead of Sunday. This will be a great boon for the employes at the wholesale houses, especially during the summer season.

O'Leary, the Florist, was robbed at his residence of jewelry amounting to over $300 and $35 cash. The thieves escaped just as O'Leary arrived with his machine, having been telephoned to at the store as the thieves were seen entering the house.

A severe storm struck this city June 13 and considerable damage was done in the parks, trees and shrubs being blown down. The plate glass window of John Shields, 1227 Florisant avenue, was blown in and $150 damages are reported.

V. J. Gorly and wife will leave June 15 for the Panama-Pacific exposition and will attend the S. A. F. convention. F. X. Gorly will manage the business in his absence in all departments.

Miss Lillian Weber, employed by the Mullanphy Florists for four years, and Frank Delaney, will be married June 16. Miss Weber will carry white orchids and lily of the valley.

The floral display in the new conservatory at the Missouri botanical garden is at its height. The orchid section is especially attractive.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Conrad Bergstermann, June 11, very suddenly, aged 59 years.

Alex Siegel will leave in July for his cottage at Mackinac, Mich. W. F.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The society held its first spring flower show in Unity hall, Hartford, June 10-11. The various exhibits were laid out to represent flower beds, some being oblong, others oval, crescent shaped, circles and half-circles. On each side of the entrance leading to the hall were box trees shown by W. W. Hunt & Company. The central exhibit was a towering mass of splendid palms and tropical plants surrounded by a border of maidenhair and other ferns. This was staged by President Warren S. Mason, superintendent of the estate of A. A. Pope, Farmington, which was also represented by an attractive bed of perennials, blue lupinus, German and Spanish iris, salvia, phlox, and Spanish roses. In passing from one exhibit to another the observer was delightfully charmed with the striking likeness to actual flower beds.

W. W. Hunt & Company had an oblong outline composed of perennials, including blue and white lupines, various peonies, and the whole rising to a high centre of blue scabiosa. Single and double columbine, anchusa, campanula, buttercups, Jacob's ladder, phlox, and a superb group of Pennsylvania anemone, sweet william; Iceland poppies, lychnis and hardy pinks.

John F. Huss, superintendent of the Goodwin estate, was another exhibitor of a wonderful variety of flowers, the centre of his bed being formed by the unusual yellowish blooms of Isatis glaerca. Gorgeous oriental poppies in red, pink and orange, German and Spanish iris, white and pink, alum root, fox gloves, anchusa, pink and blue lupines, red weigelia, petunias and sweet peas are among the other flowers in the group; and the same exhibitor made the stage a veritable bower with palms, flamingo flower, fancy leaved calladium and pink spirea, with especially interesting primroses never exhibited before, discovered in northern China by Professor Wilson, of Boston.

An effective round bed in which blue predominated was shown by Oscar F. Gritzmacher, of New Britain, anchusas, bachelor's buttons, peonies, double daisies, pansies, roses and Scotch pinks entering into it. A very beautiful, round bed composed of exquisite roses was shown by Niel Nelson, also containing in the center Pink and White Enchantress carnations and sweet peas.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, arranged a long bed of roses of all kinds and also displayed 25 blooms of each variety of roses grown in the Cromwell Gardens, which made a most charming spectacle. Four tables were decorated by John Coombs, Edw. Welch, and Louis Chauvy, assisted by Miss Benson, to represent bridal tables. Each was a remarkable creation of beauty. The design of this remarkable exhibit, which was the principal topic of discussion in Hartford the past week, was the creation of Walter A. Cooke of the house of Stumpp & Walter Company, and the society takes this opportunity to thank this gentleman for his assistance in making our first spring show a grand success. The following are the awards and judges:

The judges of perennials were Mrs. Samuel O. Prentice, Mrs. Morgan G. Bulkeley and Mrs. William H. Palmer. Those of the decorative tables and flowering plants were Mrs. Frank C. Sumner, Miss Rose Johnson and Miss Virginia Browne. Following are the prize awards:

Perennials—James J. Goodwin, first; W. W. Hunt & Co., second; A. N. Pierson, Inc., third.

Palms and foliage plants—James J. Goodwin, first; Mrs. A. A. Pope, second; A. N. Pierson, Inc., third.

Decorated tables—Edw. Welch, first; John Coombs, second; Louis Chauvy and Miss Benson, very highly commended.

Bedding plants—Walter L. Goodwin, first; J. A. Brodrib, second.

Certificates—W. W. Hunt & Co., Spear & McManus, John Coombs, J. A. Brodrib, J. Vidbourne & Co.; Park department, John C. Willard, Mrs. W. Seliger, Louis Chauvy, Jno. F. Huss, Alfred Cebelius, Warren F. Mason, Oscar Gritzmacher, Niel Nelson and A. N. Pierson, Inc.

ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

COMMENCEMENT ORDERS HEAVY.

Orders for commencements have kept all local florists working to their full capacity, and as the market is overloaded with especially good stock, it has not been difficult to supply the demand. Carnations have been more plentiful than at any other time this year, outdoor sweet peas are in very good condition and orchids are starting in a way that promises very good business.

NOTES.

Edwin E. Seidewitz has received word that six roses shipped by him to Ireland, May 22, have been received in perfect condition. Business on the whole has been good with him. His force has been very busy with commencement orders and funeral designs, and he has had the decorations for two or three of the most prominent weddings of the season.

Hamilton Floral Shop, Samuel Feast & Sons, Halliday Bros. and Charles E. Smith & Son report excellent business in commencement and design work.

SATISFACTORY MARKET CONDITIONS.

The market conditions are satisfactory all around. The wholesale houses have plenty of stock with which to fill orders, and the retailers, having a wide choice as to variety, at prices a trifle lower than the previous week's quotations. Special sales in carnations, roses and peonies were advertised by several of the retailers. The weather has turned cooler, and peonies will be holding out much longer than anticipated. There are an abundance of Easter lilies on the market, and big shows can be made for comparatively small investments, where stock is bought in quantity. Snapdragon, larkspur, swainsona, sweet peas, daisies and coreopsis are part of the daily stock. Colored water lilies are arriving in fairly good supply, with a good demand. Some very good orchids can be had at very reasonable prices, and stock is exceptionally good. String smilax was in good demand, but rather scarce. Lily of the valley remains scarce. Roses of all kinds are in better shape, the color being particularly fine on Killarney. Shipping, trade continues good. C. F. B.

Nassau County Hort. Society.

The June meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held June 9 at Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y. Gustave Hamrin of Glen Cove was made a new member. The judges of the monthly exhibit were John W. Everett, A. Fournier and Robert Jones. Their decisions were a first prize to James McDonald, for twenty-five pods of peas; a certificate of culture to Ernest Westlake for three heads of cauliflower.

The judges for the rose show at the Nassau Country Club were named and they are Angus MacGregor, William D. Robertson and George Ashworth, James Gladstone is the show manager. An offer of a silver cup for table decorations at the fall show was received from Mrs. Herbert L. Pratt.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Lillian Dailledouze.

Mrs. Lillian Dailledouze, wife of John A. P. Dailledouze, and daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Dailledouze, Flatbush, Brooklyn, New York, died suddenly on the morning of June 11. She had been somewhat indisposed from an ailment of the nose and head, the exact nature of which we have not learned. She was to have been operated on, but her condition was not considered serious by her friends. She arose as usual on the morning mentioned, but was stricken and died in half an hour. She was 25 years and 6 months old. She was born in New York (Manhattan) and was the daughter of Philip and Mary Richter Woelfel, her father being now a druggist of Brooklyn. She was a young woman of loveable qualities, and a member of the First Dutch Reformed church of Flatbush. She is survived by her husband and a son 7 years old, by her father and mother and other relatives. Services were held at the home of Eugene Dailledouze on the evening of June 12, Rev. Dr. J. E. Lloyd, who had been her pastor, officiating. The interment was private and in Evergreen cemetery. The death of Mrs. Dailledouze was a great shock to her husband and his parents and the other relatives and friends.

John Starrett.

John Starrett, who was engaged in the florist business in Chicago up to about a year ago, died on his farm near Tampa, Florida, June 13, at the age of 72. He was formerly in the employ of Chas. Fisk and later head florist at Hotel LaSalle, which position he held until he moved south. He was well and favorably known to the trade and had a host of friends in this vicinity and elsewhere. The body was brought to Chicago for burial and the funeral was held from the home of his son, John Starrett, Wednesday, June 16. A widow and one son survive him.

Mrs. Elsie Patterson.

Mrs. Elsie Patterson, wife of John Patterson, a well known employe of Vaughan's Seed Store, New York, died June 7. She was a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, and came to New York about a year ago to marry Mr. Patterson. Another pathetic feature of her death is that she is survived by an infant child. Mr. Patterson has the sympathy of many friends in his bereavement. A. F. F.

Lest We Forget.

American Gladiolus Society.

It is important that all who intend making trade exhibits at the American Gladiolus Society's show, Newport, R. I., August 18-19, should advise Henry Youell, chairman exhibition committee, Rochester, N. Y., at once as to the space they will require. This will facilitate matters and prevent disappointments. No charge for tables will be made.

National Flower Show.

The national flower show committee met in regular session at the rooms of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, Horticultural hall, June 10, with Chairman Farenwald presiding. John Young, New York, secretary of the national committee, was present. Practical details for the conduct of the national flower show, to be held in Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, 1916, were more or less definitely worked out. At a meeting with the same committeemen, President Newbold of the New York Horticultural Society, who did so much towards making a success of the New York show, was in attendance and explained in detail the plans and methods pursued by that organization in connection with the national exhibition. Chairman Asmus, of Chicago, is expected in Philadelphia next week, at which time there will be another meeting of the committee.

W. F. THERKILDSON,

[The Chicago railroad strike and changed business conditions have compelled Mr. Asmus to defer his conference with the committee until next month.—ED.]

Boiler Tubes.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

How long should tubes last in greenhouse boilers? Which is best, hard or soft water?

Illinois. SUBSCRIBER.

The length of time boiler tubes will last depends upon so many conditions that no very definite answer can be given. It varies with the thickness and quality of the tubes, as well as with the character of firing, and the care given the boiler. The quality of the coal used will also have much to do with the life of the boiler.

When hard water, containing large quantities of lime and similar minerals, is used a thick crust of scale is deposited upon the tubes, and unless this is removed occasionally, or some anti-scale compound is used, the tubes will burn out much quicker than when soft water is used, or the tubes cleaned of scale.

Under good conditions a boiler should last ten years and might remain in service for twenty years or more, while with poor tubes, upon which scale is allowed to form, they might burn out with hard firing within five years.

Propagation of Clematis Montana Varieties.

The Revue Horticole of March 16 contains an article on the propagation of Clematis montana, and its varieties grandiflora and rubens, establishing the fact that these clematis should only be multiplied by cuttings. Experiments in grafting on stocks of flammula, viticella and vitalba were apparently successful, but the plants were found to die within two or three years, only such plants surviving as rooted above the graft. This is the cause of much loss of C. montana rubens, of which many grafted plants were sold when first introduced about 1906. Cuttings, while producing fewer plants, make vigorous and lasting ones. A second article, April 1, calls attention to the ease of propagation of montana and paniculata from seed, especially the great quantities of the latter, grown in Orleans for the American trade. A new clematis, vedrariensis, a hybrid obtained by Maurice Vilmorin, and introduced this year, is lighter in color than C. montana rubens, and more vigorous, and may be expected to supersede it in the gardens.

Lake Geneva Gardeners' Association.

At the next meeting of the Lake Geneva Gardeners' and Foremen's Association, which is scheduled to take place July 5, arrangements will be made for holding a mid-summer fair under the auspices of the association. A peony exhibition will be held Saturday, June 19.

STREET CAR STRIKE AFFECTS BUSINESS.

The greatest street car strike in the history of the city has affected business somewhat, but the seriousness of the situation that finds 14,000 employes of the surface and elevated lines out of work and the better part of 2,500,000 passengers without daily means of transportation was fully appreciated by all the people, but the day's work had to be done and the feat was accomplished in the best of humor on all sides. The tie-up on the surface lines is complete, and not a wheel has turned on the 1,000 miles of track within the city limits since 5 o'clock Monday morning, June 14. On the South Side branch of the elevated, trains are run at times, but do not relieve the situation any, as only a few passengers are carried and most of these were given free rides. Automobiles of every description, date and make, horse-drawn buses, trucks, vans, farm wagons and express wagons are pressed into service and the situation is not as bad as one might expect during a street car strike in a large city like this. The strike is affecting business considerably, but not as much as everyone thought it would at first, for the local demand is fairly good, all things considered, and might be a whole lot worse. The shipping trade has been very good, and while business in general is regarded as quiet it is almost as good and in some instances as good as it was in June last year, according to several of the leading wholesalers. There is plenty of stock of all kinds to go around, with no scarcity at all, although red carnations have cleaned up quite well on several occasions during the past week. The supply of American Beauty roses is very large and choice stock in all lengths of stem is obtainable at very reasonable prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are in good supply, but move fairly well, especially in the longer grades, at good prices. The first Hoosier Beauty of the season is now reaching the market and the report is that this new red rose is in good demand at good prices. The supply of the new rose Ophelia is quite large, but cleans up fairly well each day. Sunburst are in good supply, but are moving fairly well. Some fine Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and all the other varieties of roses are obtainable and the buyer now has an opportunity of making a splendid selection at very reasonable prices. Carnations are in large supply, but are not moving any too well, although the quality of the stock offered is good for this season of the year. Sweet peas are in good supply, but are not bringing the prices that they should. Indoor grown gladioli are seen everywhere in large quantities, but there is very little demand

Cape jasmine are to be had at all the stores, but are not cutting much figure in the market. Orchids are in good supply, but clean up fairly well at times. Lilies and lily of the valley are in good supply and the usual amount of miscellaneous stock, both greenhouse grown and outdoor, is seen. The cars started running again about noon June 16, the third day of the strike.

NOTES.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, and wife are busy making preparations for their trip to California in July, where they will visit for some time with O. P. Bassett and E. B. Washburn and families and later take in the sights at the Panama-Pacific exposition. Mr. Washburn and wife will tour southern California with O. P. Bassett and wife in their machine and will no doubt have a most delightful time. Mr. Washburn has been closing the store an hour earlier this week in order to give the employes more time to reach their homes during the present street car strike.

A. L. Vaughan and L. R. Bohannon of the Bohannon Floral Co. were busy swapping fishing stories when the writer called at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store this week, so do not be surprised if the two suddenly depart for the wilds of northern Wisconsin or Michigan, where the brook trout and black bass are plentiful. Both gentlemen believe in attending strictly to business and also that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, and that fishing away out in the wilds, where one cannot be reached, is about the best place of all to spend a vacation.

BEAUTIES-ROSES-CARNATIONS

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a good supply of the new rose Hoosier Beauty, which is attracting much favorable attention at the store and is selling well at good prices, considering the general market conditions. A fine grade of American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are seen in good supply at the store, and the same holds good for orchids. T. E. Waters says that the new supply catalogue is in the press and will be ready for mailing soon and that any one who likes to secure a copy may do so by simply addressing a card to the store asking for it. In speaking of the present strike situation. Otto W. Frese says that business is going along uninterrupted as usual and that he has not noticed any difference as far as the deliveries are concerned, although several of their own trucks are kept in operation all the time.

The local wholesale florists received an announcement this week from the St. Louis, Mo., wholesale firms, Geo. H. Angermueller, C. A. Kuehn, H. G. Berning, Wm. C. Smith and the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., to the effect that they have all agreed to close their stores on Saturday during the summer months at noon, commencing June 19, altogether on Sundays and at 5 p. m. every day. A. T. Pyfer called on all the wholesale florists in the Atlas building in regard to Sunday closing here and everyone that he talked with so far is greatly in favor of it, providing all the other houses will do likewise. No doubt Sunday closing will meet with the approval of everyone and will take effect soon.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a nice supply of Killarney and White Killarney roses and carnations which are of fine quality for this season of the year. The demand for chrysanthemum cuttings and plants keeps up in splendid shape, according to N. J. Wietor, and every mail brings in more orders. Mr. and Mrs. Wietor celebrated their eighteenth wedding anniversary on June 16, and the only thing to mar the day was the fact that their youngest son, Harry, is still confined to the hospital with scarlet fever.

Wm. H. Amling is doing considerable repair work at his establishment at Maywood, which is in charge of Winandy Bros., who are well along with the job. As soon as the Amling job is completed the Winandys will start work on the erection of the new Dietsch house that Wm. Wichtendahl, of Maywood, will devote to carnations this season.

The Garland Manufacturing Co. has already shipped a large quantity of material to Ottawa which will go into the new iron-frame vegetable house, 76x900 feet, that it is building for Davis & Steiner of that city. Winandy Bros. have the contract to put up the house and will start work on the job this week.

Fred G. Hunt has leased the Howard establishment at Glencoe known as the Glencoe Violet Farms for five years, taking possession on June 15. The range consists of three houses, 24x150 feet, and will be devoted to chrysanthemums and novelties, for which he is famous.

To reach our store take a Chicago Avenue, Division Street, Milwaukee Avenue or Armitage Avenue car at State and Randolph Streets and get off at Huron Street. When there is no car strike on (like now) all the mentioned ones stop right in front of our store.

Joseph Ziska & Sons are finding that a delivery car is a pretty good investment, for the machine has been kept going at all times from early until late, especially during the present street car strike. Joseph Ziska, Jr., brought his Hudson down several days this week to help out during the rush.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are having their share of trade and are doing a nice shipping business, which covers a good part of the territory west of the Mississippi river. Miss Nettie Parker, secretary of this firm, is planning on spending her vacation at Niagara Falls this year.

Zech & Mann never offered a better grade of indoor gladioli than they are right now. The force is now planning their vacation, and from the present outlook everybody is going fishing, especially Allie Zech, who visits northern Wisconsin lakes every year.

Percy Jones is handling a large quantity of ferns this week in addition to a complete line of other green goods. Carnations are seen in large supply at this establishment and the quality of the stock offered is unusually good for this season of the year.

A. Lange has a very pretty window display at his East Madison street store in which the June bride plays an important part. Tom White is now doing the buying in the local wholesale market for this enterprising house.

J. A. Budlong never had a better crop of summer roses than what is reaching the store now and the shipments include nearly all the best new varieties as well as all the old favorite standards.

USE Budlong's Blue Ribbon Valley.

Tom Best, with the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., wife and daughter are visiting friends here this week. Mr. Best has a host of friends in this city and they are all pleased to see him again.

A. L. Glaser, of Dubuque, Ia., was in the city again this week on business. He says that if he could sell his store and greenhouses in Iowa he would open a retail establishment in this city.

A. Lawson, formerly with A. Lange and later in the employ of C. Megchelsen, 4654 Grand boulevard, has opened a handsome new store at 1553 East Sixty-third street.

S. Klemn & Sons, of Whiting, Ind., now make their trips to the local market in a new Ford delivery car.

Erne & Klingel are still handling large quantities of smilax and have built up a nice trade in same.

Kyle & Foerster are installing another large refrigerator in their new store this week.

Hoerber Bros. are cutting a good supply of Ophelia roses, which are in brisk demand.

Peter Reinberg is all through planting his roses, which is the earliest in the history of the firm, according to Emil Reichling, who is in charge. Most of the houses are 29x300 feet and all told 40 have been replanted this year. Ten houses are devoted to Mrs. Chas. Russell, one to Killarney Brilliant, six to Ophelia and three to Milady. The varieties Mrs. George Shawyer and Mrs. Aaron Ward have both been discarded and the old standby, My Maryland, has been given considerable more bench space than formerly. Twenty houses of American Beauty roses are being grown this year, 16 houses of Richmond, six of Sunburst, 11 of Killarney and 15 of White Killarney. The Reinberg greenhouses never looked better at this season of the year than they do right now and Emil Reichling is to be congratulated upon the well kept place and healthy condition of the young stock just planted. Mr. Reichling has been with Peter Reinberg 15 years and it is a pleasure to note that the bug which Reinberg used to be troubled so much with has been driven off the place for good.

The John C. Moninger Co., manufacturer of greenhouse materials, reports business as good, with the outlook very encouraging. E. F. Anton Then's big No. 3 auto plant van became a jitney bus on Monday, June 14, making the route from the Hotel Sherman to Bowmanville. Two long boards furnished side seats and accommodated many.

Vaughan's Seed Store is making fine displays of peonies and hardy perennials at 31-33 West Randolph street. New crop freesias will be on hand next week.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is showing some fine home-grown peonies at its Michigan avenue store.

DEMAND SLACKENS A TRIFLE.

Market conditions have been very good, all stock cleaning up well at good prices, until Saturday, June 12, when it took a little persuasion and shading in prices to make things move. Peonies are coming in fine, but some show the effects of frost, by only opening on one side. Daisies have been scarce and are in good demand at $1 per 100. Roses are in good supply and the quality is good. Prices range from three cents to eight cents. Bachelor buttons have made their appearance and are fine in quality. Carnations are dropping with the roses and good stock can be had at $1.50 to $3 per 100.

NOTES.

The florists' club base ball team played a game with the Oasis, a semi-pro team, and were defeated by the score of 12 to 0, at the league park, Sunday, June 13. They play Wayzata at Wayzata, Sunday, June 20. They still want to hear from St. Paul.

Minneapolis Floral Co. received a shipment of ferns and crotons that Mr. Anderson says are the best yet. Max Kiser of the Merriam Park Floral Co. is busy planting the pans on the electroliers for the city.

Supt. Wirth of the park board has the new Gateway park about finished. It is one of the beauty spots that greet the visitors when they leave the depot.

H. E. Philpot has been here the past week. He has been helping Frank Gustafson of St. Paul dispose of his stock.

E. Farley is with H. B. Whitted in the Fifth street store, and says that he does not like the western country.

H. E. Evans has taken charge of the cut flower department of Pearl Bros.' store and reports business very good.

MARKET NOT ACTIVE.

After a slight cessation last week and some good weather we are again having rainy weather. Now, however, the downpour is not so continuous, but makes up in violence what it lacks in continuity. The market, while fair, is not very active and prices generally are very moderate. Roses are still in a very large supply. The larger part of the receipts in this line are of a very good quality. Carnations are deteriorating very rapidly. Some white varieties, however, are very good when everything is taken into consideration, but they meet with only an ordinary call. Easter lilies are good and are plentiful. Gladioli sell fairly well. Lily of the valley and orchids enjoy a good call for the June weddings. Sweet peas come in for some of this demand. New eastern ferns have been added to the list of greens.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some American Beauties that for the time of the year are very fine.

Tom Windram recently returned from his trip to the Lake Shore Ferneries at Leesburg, Fla.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Bismarck, Thursday, June 10, when Oscar Leistner, 319 West Randolph street; H. W. Wilkerson, 56 East Randolph street; Theodore Keirchner, 319 West Randolph street, and Chas. O. Youngstrand, Morton Grove, were elected members and the following applications were read: G. F. Matkens, Western Springs.

Carl Cropp's report on the work of the flower show committee was presented, showing that the matter of the fall flower show has been thoroughly investigated and now awaits deferred report on securing the Coliseum, which is expected June 21. Alex. Henderson reported that the Municipal Pier building would not be ready in time for the fall exhibition. A resolution placing the club on the flower show guarantee fund for $1,000 was adopted. Chairman of sub-committees were announced as follows: August Poehlmann, finance; George Asmus, premium list; M. Barker, publicity; Arnold Ringier, gardeners' exhibits; N. P. Miller, commercial exhibits; J. C. Vaughan, poster; H. H. Wilkerson, special features; A. Henderson, trade displays.

Vaughan's Seed Store had an exhibit of iris and peonies, and French & Salm, of Union Grove, Wis., had on display a splendid vase of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses, cut from 2½-inch grafted stock planted March 13.

Resolutions on the death of the late John Zech were presented and ordered spread on the minutes with copies to the family and the firm of Zech & Mann, the committee being H. N. Bruns, A. T. Pyfer and M. Barker.

The annual picnic was discussed and referred to the good-of-the-club and sports committees, who will decide when and where it will be held and report at the next meeting.

On motion of Arnold Ringier, honorary members of the Cook County Florists' Association were given similar standing in the consolidated club.

George C. Thompson, with Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., and C. E. Pinney, of the Kentucky Tobacco Products Co., Inc., Louisville, Ky., were present and addressed the meeting.

KEYSER, W. VA.—Construction of a greenhouse, 30x300 feet, with heating plant, is planned by C. L. Wiseman.

SUMMER WEATHER MAKES ITS BOW.

Real summer weather has come at last, which will hasten the summer exodus and help the business of the summer resorts. There is a great plenty of all the popular flowers. The peonies are almost over, the cold storage stock helping out those who can use them. Carnations are getting weaker in the stem, but are very good for the season. Snapdragons are nearly over. Greenhouse gladioli are fine, and larkspur is a good seller. There is still a good assortment of roses, but American beauties are getting frilled around the edges. The Ward is coming fine; it is certainly an all 'round rose. Easter lilies are in fine shape, but on account of the quantity coming in, sell very low, $3 a hundred buying the best. Other stock is about the same.

NOTES.

Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa., one of the foremost rose growers of the country, has not for some time past had as good returns from his rose beds as formerly. He attributed the trouble to be first one thing and then another—the soil, the heat, the watering, the air, the attention; in fact, he studied the subject from every angle and finally by a process of elimination he discovered it was the quality of the water. This has been obtained from a water company, who four years ago, were obliged by the state authorities to treat the water, so that all possible typhoid germs and other bacteria were destroyed. To do this, alum, lime and other ingredients were introduced, which made the water chemically pure. At the same time, however, Mr. Farenwold has discovered that all useful bacteria that helped and enabled the roots to take up the entire nutriment of the soil was also destroyed, which has made a very material difference in the health and productiveness of the plants. At an expense of between three and four thousand dollars he has now an independent water supply of his own. He sunk an artesian well, which has a capacity of 160 gallons a minute and also constructed an open reservoir at the lowest point of his grounds where he catches all the rain water and adds to the quantity from the well. Engines, which burn crude oil, furnish power for the pumps at an expense of about $200 a year. Mr. Farenwald is always after the best results, never counting time, trouble or expense of investigation as anything, compared with the achievement. His acre rose garden is just now in its height of bloom, the various ramblers being a mass of colors. He is a rosarian, first for profit, and then for the pleasure it gives both himself and the community in which he lives. May his tribe increase.

Matters of the great national show are looking up. Secretary John Young and F. R. Newbold of the Horticultural Society of New York met with the local committee during the past week and some good work was done. Mr. Newbold was particularly interested in the methods employed to interest society people and gave the committee many good points as to how to get and hold them in the work. With the lease for the building signed and the floor plan laid out, there is something definite to work on and great progress is looked for from now on. Let everybody put their shoulders to the wheel and push; the youngest in the business can lend a hand. The Philadelphia exhibition should, and must, excel all those gone before.

meeting. Mr. Heacock while able to be present, was much handicapped by an attack of sciatica rheumatism. A substantial lunch at the noon hour was much enjoyed.

Monday, June 21, is the day of the annual outing of the florists' club at Schuetzen park. Tabor station on the Reading road is the place. Baseball between growers and wholesalers vs. seedsman and retailers is first on the program to be followed by racing events for men and women in separate classes, according to their birthdays. The tug of war will be a feature as usual. A good dinner, to be followed by dancing in the club house, will be a most enjoyable feature. The committee reports a number of unusually fine prizes to be given to winners of the events.

The orders for the commencement bouquets of the the various girls' high schools of this city have been hotly contested for by the retailers. For the West Philadelphia High, sample bouquets were submitted by eight firms and under number were voted for by the class. Messrs. Vallers & Pennock Brothers ran very close, the latter winning out by two votes. The arrangements are to be of pink Killarneys. Vollers received the order for the Wm. Penn High, while Samuel Aitken captured the bouquets for the Girls' Normal. Both of these are to be red roses.

The rose show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Wednesday, June 9, was much superior to any held for several years previous. The exhibit of George C. Thomas, Jr., was particularly fine, he staging over 180 varieties, most of them of the hybrid tea class. A number of other large estates, through their private gardeners, made exhibits, showing nearly all the newer sorts.

New and beautiful baskets, with all the novel tonal effects, for which the M. Rice Co. are celebrated, are keeping their factory force on the jump these days. Mr. Eschner says, "War or peace, they must have the goods." and he is sure their fall stock will be found better than ever.

The Leo Nissen Co. has been busy with demands for wedding and commencement flowers. An immense quantity of peonies have been used. American Beauties and sweet peas have been a feature the past week.

American Beauties are a headline with Edward Reid, as are also his Reid brand carnations and sweet peas which grade high for the season.

Berger Bros. are strong on My Maryland roses, which are now at their best. Special lily of the valley and superior out-door sweet peas are features.

PEONY SURPLUS DEMORALIZES MARKET.

During the greater part of the past week the wholesale market was demoralized by a surplus of peonies. It is not recalled that peonies were ever before so plentiful and cheap. As an instance, the best and freshest festiva maxima could be bought for 25 cents per dozen and many sold for less, grading down to 10 cents per dozen. When it came to stale and open stock it went for whatever the hucksters would offer. One of these enterprising gentlemen was noted, who displayed a placard on his pushcart load of peonies: "Six for 5 cents." As may be supposed, this avalanche had a depressing effect on nearly all other stocks. Strictly first-class long-stem roses held up to five and six cents, but there was much short and inferior stocks that sold for from 25 cents to 75 cents per 100. While $2 and $3 per 100 was paid for some special carnations, many went at from 50 cents to $1 per 100. Fine stock of the orchid flowering sweet peas went for 50 and 75 cents per dozen bunches. There was little change in American Beauty roses and orchids from our quotations of June 12. It would appear that another week from this writing will about finish the peonies, and the carnations are failing fast since warmer weather set in, so relief is in sight for the market. Considerable good stock of Gladiolii America is now coming in, but moving slowly.

June 12.—The only encouraging feature, if it can be called that, in the wholesale market today is that there does not seem to be a possibility of business getting any worse. The push-cart men are much in evidence with peonies and carnations at one cent apiece. It is almost impossible to move lilies and they have been offered as low as $10 per 1,000. Lily of the valley ranges from 75 cents to $1.50 per 100.

June 14.—There is no change in the condition of the cut flower market, which continues to be overloaded with stock. As has previously been noted, there is a little special stock of roses and orchids that brings a price, but left-over and inferior stock is going largely to the push-cart men. Peonies and carnations and the short greenhouse roses seem to be the worst propositions to move. The weather is warm and the peonies cannot last much longer.

NOTES.

One of the oldest florists, and an interesting man in the retail trade of this city, is Simon Hefele, of 3361 Third avenue, Bronx borough. Mr. Hefele has been in business at his present location for 55 years, which of itself should be a matter of interest. He owns the property at the above number, where his store, residence and a small greenhouse is located. He formerly had several more greenhouses, but sold their site a few years ago for a handsome sum. He is now 72 years old, but active, and busies himself with his greenhouse and store, assisted in the store by his amiable wife. They have reared a large family of sons and daughters and have interesting grandchildren about them. The two sons are active business men, one being a civil engineer. When they began business at their present location, they were in the little town of Harlem and have lived to see a great and populous city grow up about them. May they live many more years to enjoy the fruits of their industry and thrift.

L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, N. J., was in this city June 8, calling on H. E. Froment, who sells the product of his two rose ranges. He is now shipping to Mr. Froment the first cut seen in this market of the new red rose Hoosier Beauty. While the stems are at this season necessarily short, the buds have substance and are a fine color. The progress of this rose will be watched with interest. Mr. Coddington and wife will attend the Panama-Pacific exposition, probably in August.

M. A. Bowe supplied the flowers for "class day" at Vassar College, Poughkeepsie. There were 157 bouquets made up from a variety of the finest flowers on the market. Mr. Bowe and his staff have likewise been very busy of late with wedding decorations. In addition to decorations in this city and Brooklyn, they arranged an elaborate decoration at Hempstead and another at Glen Cove.

William Plumb, a well known florist and landscape gardener, who has been in Cuba for nearly a year managing a large sugar plantation, arrived in this city, June 9. He will remain here during the heated term, returning September 1. He tells of the great royal palms, the orchids and roses that flourish in Cuba. He states that Paul Neyron is a rose that does well there.

W. H. Mallow, 640-642 Fulton street, Brooklyn, furnished over 1,000 peonies for the annual celebration of the Protestant Sunday schools of that borough, June 10. William Berri, owner of the Standard Union gave a luncheon to the notables at the University club, where the flowers were used. Two hundred thousand children assembled at Prospect park.

It is stated that Hans Donhauser, a well known grower and retailer of the Astoria section, was robbed by burglars of $1,600 on the night of May 31. Mr. Donhauser, who is near one of the cemeteries, had good business on and previous to Memorial day. He took the money to his residence, Monday, June 1, and the thieves entered that night.

James G. Carlaftes has a fine store at the corner of Westchester avenue and the Southern boulevard, Bronx borough. Mr. Carlaftes has been in business in this city for a number of years and is one of the prosperous Greek-American florists. He is a past president of the Greek-American Florists' Association.

At the store of Esch, the Florist, we found business active and it was stated that they had enjoyed a good season. This business, which was founded by the late George Esch, is now a well managed corporation that purchased it from the widow of Mr. Esch, but retained the name.

H. E. Froment, M. C. Ford, W. P. Ford and John I. Raynor, a retired florist, have all been recently summoned for jury duty. Emil Schloss, who, figuratively speaking, is a half-brother to all the florists, has also been on the jury.

Albert Johnson, the grower of East 29th street, Brooklyn, who several years ago leased his range and went to Virginia, returned several months ago and now has a fine showing of ferns, bedding plants and other stock.

George N. Hart and James Marketos, both well known in the retail trade of this city, have opened a store at Narragansett Pier, R. I.

S. C. Gilbert, a florist, of 275 Columbus avenue, was visited by burglars on the night of June 11 and lost $100 and jewelry.

Leo Klein and wife, of Lexington avenue and 60th street, will go to Mt. Clemens, Mich., July 1 for a stay of six weeks.

The closing, and moving uptown of a number of business houses that were near it (23d street near Sixth avenue) has been a contributing cause to the failure of the Musee.

The Eden Musee, where the first orchid show staged in this city was held, has gone into bankruptcy and we learn that the collection of wax figures, mummies and other awe-inspiring features will be sold at auction. Among them is the mummy of Meuna, an Egyptian princess, who became mummified "late in the Twelfth Dynasty," —figure out for yourselves when that happened. There is also a wax figure of William Sulzer, for a time governor of this state and yet in the flesh. Edmund G. Dannell, manager of the Musee, has stated: "Long before half of the people knew the difference between an orchid and a crook-neck squash we had the first orchid show ever given in New York, in this building. Some people had an idea that the orchids were a dramatic company, and one patron of the house on that occasion actually asked what time they would perform. We were the first to exhibit moving pictures in New York, and among other things moving pictures have reduced the revenue of our house."

A. F. F.

New York Florists' Club.

The local florists' club met in its rooms in the Grand Opera House on the evening of June 14. Considering that the day and evening were excessively hot, there was a large attendance. The outing committee reported progress and promised a very enjoyable affair, July 14, the day fixed for the outing. The steamer Ursula will take the party to Witzel's grove and there will be good music, plenty of eats and an interesting program of games and races. The flower show committee reported progress. The committee appointed at last meeting to interview the public service commissioners relative to the carrying of packages of flowers on the street and subway lines reported that the trade be urged to carefully wrap the stems of all flowers in order to avoid dripping.

T. A. Havemeyer, N. B. Irwin, H. E. Mengham, Ester Gerlaird, New York, and Wm. A. Rodman, Brooklyn, were elected members, and C. F. Heitzman, John Scheepers and Geo. Hildenbrand, all of New York, were proposed for membership.

Roman J. Irwin, chairman of the transportation committee, wishes to hear before July 10, from all who intend to make the trip to San Francisco, Calif. The start will be made August 5. His address is 108 W. 28th

National Floral Corporation
220 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Street, New York. The round trip will be made in about 32 days, the cost for each person will be $350, including railway fare, hotels, etc. The convention opens August 17. Charles H. Totty made an interesting address on his trip to the Panama-Pacific exposition, San Francisco. He spent some time there, being one of the judges on horticulture. He was greatly pleased and interested with his experience and thinks the exposition a wonderful success. He was roundly applauded at the close of his speech.

Bertrand H. Farr, president of the American Peony Society, whose home is at Wyomissing, Pa., was at the meeting, and spoke interestingly, both on peonies and irises. He spoke of peony planting at Washington, D. C., in autumn, and choice varieties, along the lines that have been followed by the American Rose Society. He brought up the matter of difficulty in tracing the names of many varieties, and said that the future of the peony rests with the amateurs. He urged that only the best varieties be grown. At the conclusion he was given a rising vote of thanks.

The exhibits were as follows: Bertrand H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa., irises in variety, vote of thanks; Wm. Tricker, Arlington, N. J., white campanulas, and Polyantha Rose Mrs. Turbat, vote of thanks; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., collection of dahlias, vote of thanks; Joseph Manda, West Orange, N. J., new lavender swainsona, named Mrs. Joseph Manda, certificate of merit.

The house committee, Philip F. Kessler, Myer Othile and George Mustae, were active in supplying the wants of the inner man. A. F. F.

Pansies. Vaughan's Cut Flower Mixture.

This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut-flower growers, who have realized big returns from the sale of the flowers. Pansies are as easily grown as violets, require less care and bring better returns. Sow now for winter blooming. Trade pkt. 25c; ⅛ oz., 85; ¼ oz., $1.40; oz., $5.00.

Mignonette. True Machet. Vaughan's Selected Stock.

The seed we offer produces dwarf, vigorous plants of pyramidal growth, with very thick stout flower stalks. Finest in every way for florists' use and for pots. Trade pkt., 10c; ½ oz., 40c; oz., 75c.

Mignonette. New York Market.

The plants grow from 2 to 3 feet high and produce flower spikes up to 20 inches long, according to the quality of the soil, weather and treatment. Packet (about 1000 seeds), 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.00; oz., $7.00.

Cineraria. Vaughan's Columbian Mixture.

It consists of a mixture made up by ourselves of the choicest English, French and German strains and cannot be excelled in variety of colors, size, shape and substance of flowers and perfect habit of plant. Trade pkt., (500 seeds), 50c; 3 pkts., $1.40.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE

CHICAGO, ILL. NEW YORK, N. Y.

Texas State Florists' Association.

R. C. Kerr, president of the Texas State Florists' Association, announces that many features of interest have been arranged in connection with the second annual convention of the organization, which will be held at Fort Worth, July 6-7.

Railroads have made a special rate of one and one-third fares for the round trip from points in the state to Fort Worth. A live programme, instructive and interesting, covering questions of direct interest to the craft, has been prepared, and aside from 75 per cent of the florists of Texas who will attend, Illinois, Missouri, Mississippi, Colorado, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Tennessee will be well represented. A nice line of exhibits are assured, and the Ft. Worth Florists' Club has arranged a splendid programme of entertainment.

The tentative programme of the Florists' section of the International Association of Rotary Clubs, to be held at San Francisco, July 19-23, has been announced. Mr. Kerr, who is a director of the Rotary Club of Houston, Tex., urges all florists who attend the Rotary convention to remain over for the S. A. F. Convention, which a number of the florists have announced their intention of doing. The programme of the florists' section at the Rotary convention is as follows:

Monday, July 19—1:00 p. m. Luncheon at St. Francis hotel. (Get together and get acquainted.) After lunch, adjournment for section meeting.

"How to Put Our Business on the Highest Plane, and Carry Out the Principles of Rotary."

"Rotary Florists Co-operation in Exchange of Business."

"The Florists' Page in the 'Rotarian.'"

"How Rotary Florists Should Serve Their Local Rotary Clubs."

"How to Create Interest in the Convention Florists' Sectional Meetings."

"Reports of the Houston Meeting."

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

BERMUDA reports the Lilium Harrisii bulb crop hurt by drought.

LOUISVILLE is quoting cowpeas at $1.65 per bushel and soy beans at $1.75 per bushel.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade June 16 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.

EDMONTON, ALBERTA.—A. E. Potter & Co. are reported to have made an assignment, with call for meeting of creditors, June 28, J. A. Mackinnon, assignee.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The family of A. J. Brown left for their summer home at Northport, Mich., where Mr. Brown will join them on his return from the coast.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—A. Currie & Co. say this has been the best year in their business. Stocks are well cleaned up in nearly all lines and the demand at this time is fairly good, mostly for replanting, due to the unfavorable weather in May.

JOHN T. BUCKBEE, of Rockford, Ill., when in Chicago, June 10, riding in the auto of A. Bonteau, of the International Forwarding Co., found himself in a serious accident when the car skidded and seriously injured a woman crossing the street.

ADVICES of June 12, from the Twin Falls, Idaho, pea and bean districts, say peas are looking fine, beans about half planted. A big delegation of seedsmen interested in Idaho seed growing districts will take in that region, returning from the San Francisco convention.

VISITED CHICAGO: R. C. Steele, of the Canadian Seed Co., Toronto, Ont.; S. A. Wilson, of the L. L. Olds Seed Co., and wife, Madison, Wis.; Wm. T. Phillips, of the Wm. T. Phillips Seed Co., and wife, Toledo, O.; George C. Thompson, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

GARDEN BEANS are not yet fully planted in Michigan. Some contract growers say their farmers have been told not to plant until the warm weather has come to stay. The A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, is advising its growers to inoculate their seed beans with nitrogen bacteria.

REPORTS generally regarding mail and counter seed trade throughout the country are that business fell off badly after the end of April, but counter trade in June has held up considerably better than May indicated. The weather has been good for everything except cut flowers and field corn.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, under date of June 15, writes as follows: "Our business at Chicago showed a fair increase the first four months of 1915, but since the end of April the falling off has been material. June, however, is holding up better than usual. Our advance orders for import stocks are running good."

STURGEON BAY, WIS.—The Reynolds Preserving Co. report their first planting of peas in bloom, June 11, and the crop looks very promising. The cold, wet weather evidently has not damaged them in the least, and with favorable weather from now on the canning factory will probably start the first week in July.

CINCINNATI, O.—J. Chas. McCullough, Mrs. McCullough, Miss Ethel McCullough, Miss Leslie, of Chicago, and A. J. Brown, of Grand Rapids, Mich., left Chicago, June 15, for the seed trade convention at San Francisco. Trimble McCullough will join the party at the exposition and motor with them to San Diego, later proceeding to Trimble McCullough's home at Lompoc, where they will camp for a week among the hills and trout brooks.

Timothy.

Thomas M. Hunter on the Chicago board of trade, June 11, bid $7.25 on one to 100 cars of September timothy but declined one car at $7.50. There were no buyers for spot timothy at $6.

Connecticut Seed Crops.

Orange, June 14.—Seed crops here are looking only fair. Some fields are showing much blight and will not be a full crop. Many fields of beet did not start yet and will not be over 50 per cent of a crop. Carrot is looking very poorly. Turnip and kale will not be over 50 per cent of a crop here. Sweet corn germinated poorly and the field stand is thin. F. C. W.

New York Seedsmen.

An interesting event of the past week was the marriage, June 10, of David Don, of Weeber & Don, to Miss Edith C. Vine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood W. Vine, of Ridgewood, N. J. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. P. C. Pearson, of Christ Church, Ridgewood, officiated. This firm has also been featuring peonies in the windows and reports good sales of roots.

S. D. Woodruff & Sons say their business during the past season has been fully 25 per cent ahead of the year before and has kept their force of help working to the limit. Stocks have never been so low in their warehouse as they are at present. Watson S. Woodruff and wife and two sons, Styles D. and Watson S., Jr., are attending the San Francisco seed trade convention.

At the store of Peter Henderson & Co., there was a fine display of cut blooms of peonies, all named varieties, during the past week. There were probably near 200 varieties and they attracted much attention. Patrick O'Mara, of this firm, has returned from New Orleans.

J. M. Lupton, of Mattituck, L. I., and Thomas Madsen, the Danish cabbage seed dealer, are attending the San Francisco seed trade convention.

Grenell Will.

The will of the late William H. Grenell, of Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., and Saginaw, Mich., was recently offered for probate. It is said that Mr. Grenell left an estate of something like $200,000. There were no charitable bequests. Mr. Grenell Huggins, the grandson, is the principal beneficiary and succeeds to the business and property on reaching the age of 25 years. Other beneficiaries are Mrs. Grenell, the widow, George P. Grenell, Miss Isabelle M. Swett, Chas. E. Goodnough, Matthew J. Huggins, son-in-law, Mrs. Anna Grenell Huggins, daughter, and O. E. Grenell, cousin. H. H. Waite, of Adams, N. Y., Charles E. Goodnough, of Ellisburg, N. Y., and Miss Isabelle M. Swett, of Saginaw, Mich., are named as executors. It was the desire of Mr. Grenell that the seed business be continued as long as it is profitable and desirable under Miss Isabelle M. Swett's management.

Onion Sets At Chicago.

Onion sets are making a remarkable growth this cool, wet weather. Growers are fearful that the heavy growth of tops may fall over in case of hot weather and rot, causing decay and possible injury to the sets before they can be rightly cured. George C. Thompson, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., who visited a large number of the onion set growers last week, says: "While a considerably increased acreage was sown, excessive moisture hurt the germination and this with smut and washouts will probably reduce the crop to about last year's proportions. The crop should be made about July 4, with sufficient whites and yellows and a shortage of reds. A better rotation of crops and the use of new ground would probably tend to eliminate the smut."

H. H. Chester & Co., Chas. E. Waterman and others have greatly increased their warehouse facilities.

Convention Seedsmen At Chicago.

Quite a large number of seedsmen visited Chicago last week, enroute to the annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, to be held at San Francisco, June 22-24. The visitors called at various places of trade interest, leaving on the Santa Fe, June 12, at 11 p. m. The train was about three hours late in starting, as on account of the heavy traffic and washouts at various places some difficulty

Mushrooms Under Benches.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please advise how long mushroom spawn can be kept and the proper way to grow mushrooms under greenhouse benches. L. L.

Iowa.

Mushroom spawn can be kept theoretically for a long time, belonging in nature to dormant life, but in practice we find that our changing climate makes long-keeping undesirable and unsafe. Sooner or later exciting conditions occur and generally our spawn is injured and lost. Hence, the ever present demand for fresh spawn. Spawn in storage is very similar to seed, demanding a cool, dry place with a fair degree of ventilation and a steady temperature. Violent changes in temperature carry with them an unavoidable fluctuation of air moisture, which causes most of the trouble.

To grow mushrooms under greenhouse benches also looks nice in theory and not so attractive in practice. We do not wish to say it cannot be done, but we do wish to say the practice is very often undesirable for several reasons; labor involved and bad effects on growing greenhouse crops. The manure, when used for building the beds, has enough heating power remaining to seriously interfere with the air in cut flower houses at night. This may not be the case when a small bed is built, but where one or more beds are put in the entire length of a house, some trouble may be expected. We have had a bad case on our hands the past winter where we stored Sugar Pie pumpkins under greenhouse benches in large quantities. The thing looked fine at first, but we soon found that our lettuce plants were badly mildewed, owing no doubt to the moisture given off by the pumpkins. In 25 years we have never before had mildewed lettuce plants. So much for experience.

The requirements for mushrooms under benches are a moderate temperature, say a lettuce or carnation house; no heating pipes under that particular bench. Use dropping or sliding curtain of boards or dark cloth to prevent air currents drying out the beds; also to exclude light and sunshine. Operations should be begun in September so the crop comes in during the cool months and be off about April 1 to 15.

We believe in one thing well done being better than two things half done, hence a separate mushroom house is generally better than under-bench culture. MARKETMAN.

Onion Crop Estimates in Louisiana.

The Bermuda and Creole onion crop of La Fourche Parish, La., this year is estimated by the truck crop specialist of the bureau of crop estimates to be about 2,000 acres; this is the second most important onion section of the south. The census bureau reported 2,500 acres in 1909; thus the acreage this year is about 20 per cent less than in the census year. The condition of the crop in the middle of May was only fair, estimated at 76 per cent of a normal. Excessive moisture prevailed in the first two months of the year and a drouth of 70 days afterward, causing the onions to be small and stemmy. Further damage was caused by frost, March 22. No damage by insects is reported. About 35 per cent of the crop has been harvested.

Mushrooms and Other Common Fungi.

It is impossible to tell the difference between mushrooms and toadstools by any of the so-called "tests," according to specialists of the department of agriculture, and the only safe method is by studying each species from a botanical standpoint. It is well to look with suspicion upon any mushroom which is not positively known to be edible, and they should never be eaten except when perfectly fresh at the time they are prepared for food. As an aid in identifying the common species of mushrooms and in distinguishing between edible and injurious varieties, the department has recently issued Bulletin 175, Mushrooms and Other Common Fungi. This bulletin names and describes 159 species of mushrooms and other fungi. The importance of being able to identify poisonous varieties is emphasized by the fact that the list comprises 72 poisonous or suspected species.—Agri. Dept. News-letter.

Summer Utilization of Greenhouses.

The suggestion is often made that the greenhouse might be used during the mid-summer months for growing crops, but as yet in Ohio such use has not been found practicable, according to a bulletin of the state agricultural experiment station at Wooster. The conditions in greenhouses are entirely controllable and it is quite possible to grow many of the heat-loving or tropical vegetables, such as egg plant, peppers, squashes, etc., but most greenhouse men seem to desire a period of rest during mid-summer. Nearly all have some outside interests requiring attention at this period and help is in greatest demand at this time.

Cover crops can be grown during this period, but the cost of caring for them usually makes them too expensive, considering the relatively small amount of vegetable matter they add to the soil. The care in watering the summer mulch is much less and it adds much more organic matter to the soil.

PEONIES PLENTIFUL AND FINE.

The market the past week was influenced greatly by the weather and the outdoor stock. Peonies have become more plentiful, and sweet peas and roses show a surplus. Carnations are getting smaller every day and are not so good as they have been. Roses of all varieties are being cut now in large quantities and are extra good. The peonies are coming in faster than they can find a market. On account of the weather being so bad recently, the season has been late, but are now fine. The trade are having many decorations for weddings this month. One florist having a large stock of palms has had them out every day this week for weddings and graduations. Business is very good and the month of June this year should be a hummer.

Business the past week has been very good; floral work and cut flower sales held up well. Outdoor stock is now coming in good and is having a good sale. Gladioli are extra fine, in fact, never were better. Growers all have fine crops of carnations and roses that are selling at a low price and finding ready sale.

The Florists' and Gardeners' horticultural show to be held this week should be better than ever and will draw a large crowd.

Mrs. A. E. Olsen, of Riverside, R. I., is cutting fine sweet peas now and finds a ready sale for them.

NEVADA CITY, CALIF.—The report of Horticultural Commissioner Norton, filed with the board of supervisors shows that over 10,000 fruit trees, mostly Bartlett pears, were planted during the month of March. This brings the spring planting for the county up to nearly 60,000, and the commissioner estimates that the fall planting will be much larger.

NEW ORLEANS, LA. — The Metairie Ridge Nursery company, through its president, Harry Papworth, has asked permission of the police jury to make certain improvements on parish property between the Seventeenth street canal and the company's nursery, facing Metairie Ridge, the plans including the planting of trees, shrubbery, etc., that will serve to beautify the property.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Ten thousand people, 200 floats, 50 marching organizations in brilliant uniforms and 30 bands participated in the fraternal, military and industrial parade held in connection with the annual rose festival. Rains Injure California Fruits.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF. — California's fruit crop this season will be of an average size and below the average in quality, according to a report by the deputy state horticultural commissioner, made public June 7. For this condition unprecedented heavy rains are held to be responsible. Southern California alone escaped the general loss.

American Academy of Arborists.

Arborist is the term now being generally accepted to designate men proficient in city and landscape forestry. The association will be conducted on a highly technical and professional basis, its aim being expressed in the constitution as being "to place and maintain the practical arboriculture and landscape forestry of the country on the highest professional basis." There are to be two classes of members. Field Mice as Farm and Orchard Pests.

The ravages of short-tailed field mice in many parts of the United States result in serious losses to orchardists, farmers and those interested in forest conservation. They are commonly known as meadow mice, pine mice and voles, while locally they are called bear mice, buck-tailed mice or black mice.

Farmers' Bulletin No. 670, entitled "Field Mice as Farm and Orchard Pests," published by the United States department of agriculture for general distribution, describes the habits, geographic distribution and methods of destroying meadow mice and pine mice, and discusses the value of protecting their natural enemies among mammals, birds and reptiles. Owls as destroyers of mice are given special mention, and trapping is suggested where the pest are present in small numbers. On large areas, where mice are abundant, poisoning is the quickest means of destruction, and the bulletin recommends several formulae and method of application.

Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Society.

There was an excellent attendance at the monthly meeting of the society, which was held at Greenwich, Conn., June 11, President Sealey in the chair. Two new names were added to the membership list, and several proposals for membership were received and filed. The summer show committee reported everything in readiness for the exhibition to be held in Town hall, Greenwich, June 18-19. The fall show committee also reported progress and announce the preliminary schedule is now ready for distribution. Eleven classes are provided for and prizes of cash, silver cups, medals, cut glass and silverware are offered. This exhibition will be held in the Armory, Stamford, Conn., November 2-3. The outing committee announced the date of the annual outing as August 11, at Edward's Rye Beach Inn.

There was a grand display on the tables for which the exhibitors deserve great credit. The judges' awards were as follows:

Dehn & Bertolf, Greenwich, Conn., display of flowering shrubs and perennials, honorable mention; specimen gloxinia plant from James Linane, very highly commended; vase of peonies from James Foster, honorable mention; spinach exhibited by Joseph Tierman, vote of thanks; specimen Calceolaria Stewartii from James Stuart, cultural certificate; vase of assorted Spencer sweet peas from Thos. Ryan, vote of thanks; vases of 12 varieties Spencer sweet peas from Robt. Grunnert, very highly commended; vase of Killarney roses from Wm. Whittin, cultural certificate; calceolaria exhibit of P. W. Popp, cultural certificate.

Joseph Manda, South Orange, N. J., and Mr. Walkins, representing Burnett Bros., seedsmen, New York, were visitors and each in turn complimented the members of the society for the splendid showing made. The next meeting is scheduled for July 9.

CONVENTION AND SOCIAL EVENTS HELP.

Local florists are pleased the way business has been booming since Memorial day, which is generally followed by a lull. Two large conventions during the past week have aided materially as many flowers were used by the visitors for corsages and decorations for the dances which were held. Many weddings and other social occasions with a great amount of funeral work has kept things moving in a lively manner. The market is in good condition to take care of this demand. Peonies are on the market in great quantities with prices very reasonable. Carnations are still of fair quality, while roses of all kinds are in fine shape. Candytuft, sweet peas, daisies, gladioli and other seasonable stock give the retailer a splendid choice.

FLORISTS DISCUSS BOILER LEGISLATION.

The June meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club, held at the flower shop of S. N. Peck on Superior street, was very well attended and was one of the most spirited and interesting as well as instructive meetings that this organization has held in a long time. The special subject under discussion the greater part of the evening was the recent trouble florists and other growers had when the local firemen's union tried to enforce the state ruling that where a boiler developed over thirty horse power it must be operated by a licensed man. It was decided at the meeting to co-operate in every way possible with the Boiler Manufacturers' Association, which has expressed its willingness to work with the florists. One beneficent result of all these troubles has been that the absolute necessity of organization was forced home upon many florists who had previously been very lukewarm. Another very gratifying feature was the manner in which the large growers co-operated with the small ones. One of the largest growers here even went so far as to make a special trip to the state capitol at his own expense to fight this legislation.

The picnic was also discussed at this meeting and final plans for this annual event will be made at the next meeting, which will be held at Krueger Bros.

NOTES.

Tom Magee, the genial manager of the Scottwood Greenhouse, is able to be about again, having almost entirely recovered from the accident in which he strained the tendons in his leg. Tom says business with him has been flourishing and that he has no kick coming.

HEAVY RECEIPTS BUT DEMAND GOOD.

Weddings and graduations for the past week have kept the florists busy. The weather being so warm made it a little hard to deliver bouquets much before the time they were to be used. American Beauties and Richmond were the leaders as most schools required red for color. Stock came on the market exceptionally heavy, but the trade demanded it, and it was quickly disposed of. Gladioli are coming in very much better, with lilies crowding the market, and the wholesale houses are getting some extra fine Mrs. Russell roses with fine large buds and long stems. The greenhouses are still doing a good business in bedding plants and porch boxes.

NOTES.

The local florists' club held its meeting June 7 at the Kellogg Flower & Plant Co.'s store. The attendance was very good, making it a very interesting meeting. Regular business was attended to, after which the annual picnic was brought before the club, which will be held at Holsinger Bros.' grove.

Arthur Newell reports business good with a run on corsages and bouquets for commencements. American Beauties were the leader. Mr. Newell's daughter, Miss Marian Newell, after whom the chrysanthemum, Marian Newell, was named, was a graduate from Westport high school. Walter Newell, a son of Mr. Newell, is home from the Missouri University for the summer. He is one of the star athletes at the school.

W. J. Barnes had a very good week, being busy with wedding decorations. The different schools keep him busy making commencement and corsage bouquets. Funeral work has been very good. Mr. Barnes has some exceptionally good blue hydranges which are selling fast.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a good business, especially in good American Beauties and Richmond roses which were taken up by the trade as fast as they were received. Pink and White Killarney sold well. They have been receiving some good gladioli.

The Rosery had a very busy week, especially in corsage bouquets for different occasions. This shop had its share of the commencement trade; also plenty of funeral and decorative work. Mr. Ellsworth has his chrysanthemums planted.

W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a good business, especially in funeral and commencement work. They have a very pretty window representing the old mill and stream, with plenty of good decorative plants to carry out the effect.

A. Mohr is completing his new greenhouses on Broadway. The one house being finished is 21 by 100 feet and is being planted in chrysanthemums. His work shed is 20x50, with a concrete cellar 20x50x7 feet high.

Henry Kusick & Co. reports stock coming in better, both in quantity and quality. They have received their first shipment of new ferns. The shipping trade was better than usual, with the city trade exceptionally good.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower and Plant Co. was kept busy handling their stock from the greenhouses at Pleasant Hill. They had a good out of town business as well as city trade.

Peterson Floral Co. says business is holding its own for this time of the year. They did not go into the bedding and porch box business this year.

Samuel Murray was very busy the past week, having a good run on funeral and commencement bouquets.

Stevens and Larkin are sending in some exceptionally good carnations.

WHAT THE USERS SAY

Cast Iron Boilers Crack

Our large cast iron sectional boiler cracked one section and the header last Sunday. It seemed to turn cold about the same time that the break occured. By Monday night it was 14° below zero. However, by putting up coal stoves, oil stoves, lamps and pushing up the small furnace, we have managed to keep most of our stock in pretty good shape, and our total loss, furnace and all, will be between $500 and $600. Just luck that it was not all gone.

New Kroeschell boiler ordered by telegraph on Sunday, shipped Monday, reached here on Friday, hauled to greenhouse on Saturday and started a fire Sunday; just seven days and ten hours after the accident. When dealing with people who will deliver a boiler as quick as that you cannot give up.

Yours very truly,

TRADE SURPRISINGLY GOOD.

Business during the last of May and first part of June has been surprisingly good. The weather has featured largely in both the growing and selling end, as it has lengthened the bedding season weeks longer, and the cool temperature has also kept up the quality of the cut flowers and created a larger demand on account of the scarcity of out-of-door stock. Memorial day brought forth a splendid holiday trade for the florists with no drawback except the shortage of stock. The weather was cool and clear on Sunday and Monday, and the business was spread out over three days, so that the rush did not come all at once. The majority of florists report business better this year than Memorial day, 1914. Prices were good. The market at present is very brisk on account of the number of weddings, graduations and a goodly amount of funeral work. Some fine America gladioli, peonies and Spanish iris are on the market. Sweet peas of the new crops are fine and yellow daisies are good. The greenhouses are still busy with bedding stock. Window and porch boxes are very popular this year.

NOTES.

A handsome luncheon decoration was carried out by the Flick Floral Co. in French hats made of white hair-braid filled with yellow daisies, violets and Sunburst rosebuds. These were the individual favors for fourteen. The centerpiece was a larger hat with the crown filled with yellow iris and lavender Butterfly sweet peas. These were for Mrs. J. W. Eggeman, wife of Judge Eggeman, on June 4th.

Fort Wayne flower-buyers were badly swindled around Memorial day by a bogus firm known as the Chicago Cut Flower Exchange, who rented a good stand on Calhoun street for about a week, taking orders for Monday's delivery (Memorial day), and then skipping town with the money, leaving the orders unfilled. Police investigations have failed to locate the swindlers.

The "bride," with her attractive bouquet, has been attracting considerable attention to the window of the Bradley Flower Shop the past week.

Crowds Laud Splendid Show.

The great sweet pea exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, held in the Palace of Horticulture, Panama-Pacific exposition, San Francisco, June 11-13, will long be remembered as one of the finest exhibitions of cut flowers ever held in the west. The attendance was remarkable, in fact it was difficult to make one's way around at all. It seemed that nearly every visitor to the exposition on the days mentioned visited the show. Nothing but words of the highest praise was heard on all sides for the way in which the show was managed and conducted. For several days previous to the exhibition a very judicious use of the daily papers was made by President Morse. A large space was used daily with very telling effect. The whole eastern vestibule of the Palace of Horticulture was devoted to the show, and owing to the very large entry list, it proved none too large. In fact, the management was considerably worried the day before the show in regard to space, but the exposition authorities assured them that all the needed space would be forthcoming.

It is remarkable the hold this popular annual has on the public since the advent of the Spencer type. The great majority of the visitors seemed to be familiar with all the leading varieties. The show was officially opened by Lester L. Morse, president of the American Sweet Pea Society, who told the vast throng the aims and ambitions of the society. Mr. Morse's speech was listened to with the greatest attention and at the close Charles Vogelsang responded on behalf of the exposition commissioners. He welcomed the growers and gardeners in a very fitting address and assured them that the exposition would do all in its power to encourage the other shows to be held in the Jewel City, as the exposition is known.

As was expected, the largest display in the hall was made by C. C. Morse & Co., of San Francisco, Calif. The display of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., was also a very large and complete one. These two firms' exhibits of sweet peas would be hard, or I might add impossible to duplicate. They showed the very cream of the best the world affords in this flower and they spared no expense to make their exhibits long to be remembered. The Morse exhibit occupied the western side of the vestibule and contained all types of sweet peas. They made their exhibit very educational by showing the original type of sweet peas in vogue from 1699 to 1837. Then a display of the improvements in this flower from 1837 to 1901. And from 1901 to 1915, the Spencer was shown in all its great beauty. The chief attraction of the Morse group was their new sweet pea, Scintillator. This is a vastly improved Jessie Cuthbertson and came in for great praise. The exhibit of this variety was given the award of merit by the judges. C. C. Morse & Co.'s entire exhibit was awarded the gold medal of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain and the medal of honor by the Panama-Pacific exposition. Chief among the newer varieties on display by this firm were Mrs. E. Cowdy, Florence Spencer, Colisora Scintillator, Duchess of Portland, St. George, Mrs. B. Gilbert, Edrom Beauty, Olive Kuffel, Veiled Bride, Edith Taylor, Illuminator and New Merian Beaver. The exhibit was staged in a very artistic manner and every variety labeled plainly.

The great exhibit of W. Atlee Burpee and Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., the only eastern firm represented at the show, was staged at the north end of the vestibule. This exhibit consisted of one of the best Spencer sweet peas in cultivation, including their two novelties not yet disseminated, Cherub and Phantom Blue. Their magnificent new sweet pea, Fiery Cross, proved to be the sensation of the whole exhibition. Of this grand variety a large number of boxes were staged in the center of the exhibit and built up against a white background. It is without doubt one of the most remarkable sweet peas ever introduced and received the award of merit from the exposition. The Burpee exhibit was also awarded the gold medal from the Panama-Pacific International exposition and the silver medal of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain. They showed nearly one hundred varieties of Spencers, and great praise was heard for this firm for their very splendid efforts in exhibiting so far from home.

The L. D. Waller Seed Co., of Guadaloupe, Calif., made a very fine exhibit of Spencers and were awarded a silver gilt medal. Waldo Rohnert, the well known seed grower of Gilroy, Calif., showed a splendid lot, but these were not for competition. His exhibit of Queen Mary was especially fine and elicited great praise.

Ant. C. Zvolanek, of Lompoc, Calif., made a great display of his winter flowering Spencers. These flowers were very fine and of the largest size. He also showed a large number of novelties in the class. These were all grown on the fair grounds by W. A. Leslie.

In the amateur class the entries were very numerous and the competition very close. The president's silver cup, offered by Lester L. Morse for the most original floral design, brought out a large number of entries. First prize was awarded to the Francis Floral Co. for a large umbrella. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. put up a large liberty bell, which was very beautiful. F. E. Clark entered a Tower of Jewels, and Mrs. R. E. Darbee exhibited a large horn of plenty. All of these designs were made entirely of sweet peas and were exceedingly beautiful. John Smith of Berkeley, made a fine show of Spencers, as did R. Donley, D. W. Slade. J. Paneika, D. Bassett, E. Ralston, Ed. Richards, Mrs. R. B. Reed, Evelyn McLean, Annie Jennings, and E. F. Delger. The prize donated by Geo. A. Dennison, chief of horticulture of the exposition for the best display of Spencers on tabling three by six feet, was awarded to the Lynch Nursery Company of Menlo Park, Calif., for an exhibit of Spencers chiefly used in commercial work. The judges were J. M. McLaren, E. Smyth, and H. Howard and their decisions were well received. It would be impossible to give too much credit to the management of the show, Lester L. Morse and Secretary Frank G. Cuthbertson. They were on the job all the time, day and night, and it is due to their efforts that the snow was the grand success that it proved to be. All of the sweet peas shown by C. C. Morse & Co. were grown on their own seed farms at Hollister, Calif., and the Burpee exhibit was grown by the Lynch Nursery Company of Menlo Park.

Nearly all the prominent seed growers and dealers on the coast were interested visitors, studying the various varieties and novelties not yet in commerce. It is doubtful if anywhere else in this country could a more comprehensive display of sweet peas be had than the exhibition that has just closed. This city is only a couple of hours' ride from the vast seed growing districts of the state and we have no doubt but that the fields will still be in grand condition when the members of the American Seed Trade Association convene June 22-24.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY'S SHOW, BOSTON, MASS., JUNE 19-20.

Thirteenth Annual Meeting, Boston, Mass., June 19-20.

The Exhibition.

The American Peony Society and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society held a joint exhibition at Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., Saturday and Sunday, June 19-20, which proved to be one of the finest of its kind ever staged in that city. The main hall and also the lecture hall were filled to their capacity, many exhibits of herbaceous flowers making the show more interesting. R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, Mass., had the largest exhibit, which showed a remarkable collection of peonies. Two large vases of Peony Walter Faxon and one of their seedling, No. 252, were especially fine and attracted much attention. Prof. A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., had a very fine collection of promising seedlings, as well as standard varieties.

T. C. Thurlow's Sons, Inc., West Newbury, Mass., exhibited about 2,000 blooms and were among the largest prize winners. Their new seedling, Cherry Hill, made a good showing. Mrs. M. Flood, of Oakland, Woburn, Mass., won an easy first with her vase of fifty Festiva maxima. She also had a collection of other varieties, not for competition, which were very creditable.

The roses were exhibited in the lecture hall. Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., had a splendid exhibit of roses and sweet peas. Other exhibitions of roses included those of Albert Geiger, Jr., Brookline, Mass.; Wm. Clemonson, Taunton, Mass.; Mrs. Frederick Ayers, Newton Highlands, Mass.; Mrs. Timothy McDermott, Milton, Mass.; T. N. Cook, Watertown, Mass., and Edwin Lewis, Taunton, Mass. Canterbury bells and orchids were exhibited from the Dane estate, Brookline, Mass. The exhibit of vegetables by the Market Gardeners Association also attracted their share of attention.

W. N. Craig of Faulkner Farm, Brookline, Mass., showed five plants of Verbena Miss Wilmott, which brought forth many comments on their excellent culture.

The Business Meeting.

The American Peony Society held its annual meeting in Horticultural hall, Boston, June 19. President Bertrand H. Farr gave an address in which he gave his ideas for the advancement of the society. He explained the movement now under way for the distribution of printed matter containing information as to the culture of peonies, and as to the printing of bulletins at intervals, explaining what is being done in the improving of this flower. He also expressed his idea that great benefit could be derived from the encouragement of amateurs. The new trial grounds at Washington were spoken of as a great stride in the advancement of the peony industry. Secretary A. P. Saunders gave his report, which showed a membership of 145, including 17 new members, mostly from the western states. He recommended that a committee be appointed to stop the sale of old varieties of peonies under new names, which has been going on for some time. He also recommended that the many new varieties that are coming before the trade be withheld until they prove their superiority over the varieties already on the market.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Bertrand H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa., president; Arthur Fewkes, Newton, Mass., vice-president; A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., secretary; J. H. Humphreys, Germantown, Pa., treasurer. Director for three years, R. C. Brown. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $1,577.78. The next meeting will be held at New York in connection with the meeting of the New York Horticultural Society.

After a discussion as to which color chart should be used, the official chart of the Chrysanthemum Society of France was decided upon. Arrangements were also made for a larger list of prizes to be awarded at the next show. The judges for the society for the coming year are: J. McKessock, J. H. Humphreys and J. Dauphin.

PLANT NOTES.

Pot Grown Roses.

The hybrid perpetual or rambler roses after blooming if desired to force another year, in order to bloom them early should be grown in pots during the summer. They can be pruned back after blooming and lifted, or if in pots should be repotted. This will require a good, strong soil, composed of two-thirds loam and one-third manure. When potting be sure to give good drainage and pot firmly, ramming the soil down hard. It is impossible to grow roses successfully in a loose soil. The plants should be plunged to rim of the pot outside where they can be freely watered. Avoid, if possible, placing them against the greenhouse or other building or against a fence, but plant them where they will have a free circulation of air and can be sprayed from either side. If planted against a building or in close quarters, they frequently become infected with red spider during the hot weather and it is nearly impossible to get rid of them.

Asparagus Plumosus and Sprengeri.

It is a good time now to plant, reset or renew the soil of asparagus beds, either plumosus or Sprengeri. If the beds are to be set out with young stock preparation should be started at once. Asparagus plumosus does better in solid beds, well drained, with a good rich compost about two feet deep. The plants should be set 12 to 15 inches apart and the shoots be given strings upon which to climb as soon as they begin to grow. But little cutting should be done the first year as it is necessary that the plants become well established. The old beds should be given a good mulch of half-decayed manure, and if possible, without injury to the roots, removing the top soil. Asparagus Sprengeri can be successfully grown in the bench, but also requires a good rich soil. The young stock the first year should be planted 10 to 12 inches apart, and will produce many stems that can be cut. The beds that have produced this year will require a renewal of the soil. It is better to replant than to try to renew the soil in the bench. The plants are great feeders and the bench is generally full of roots after a year's growth and it will be found difficult to keep the bench watered during the spring of the second year. If the plants are too close together they can be given more space in resetting. Good large plants will do better if set about 15 inches apart. If a mulch is attempted, care should be taken to use no fresh manure, but manure that is well rotted. The ammonia that arises from fresh manure will affect the plants, turning the foliage light, and in severe cases the foliage will become nearly white, making it worthless.

Mignonette.

To be able to cut fine spikes of mignonette in early winter will require an early start, and although it demands care and attention to germinate small seeds during hot weather, yet it will be necessary to sow seed early in July in order to have a cut in by the holiday season. A north propagating house is one of the best locations for the sowing of seeds in summer. Mignonette does not transplant from the seed flats successfully, so it is better to sow it in 2½-inch pots, five or six seeds to a pot, which can be thinned out to one or two plants as soon as they are large enough to select the strongest. Some growers prefer to sow the seed in hills in the bench, but to grow the large spikes of this flower requires a soil very heavily manured, and the constant watering often sours the soil before the plants have pushed out roots enough to absorb the water. As soon as the plants have attained a height of two or more inches the tip should be pinched or rubbed out, that the plant will branch, and again later these branches will have to be pinched off, until there are six or eight good, strong shoots. The plants will grow in most any kind of good soil, but to get the best the compost should be about one-half partly decayed manure well mixed in the soil and this will produce splendid spikes of bloom. After the plants begin to form their leaves a careful watch must be kept for the cabbage worm; these worms are very fond of mignonette and are voracious eaters, and soon denude the plant. They are a little difficult to find, being of the same color as the leaf, but are generally found along the midrib of the leaf or on the stem. Growers who cultivate large quantities of this crop screen their ventilation with mosquito netting to keep out the moth which lays the eggs. The plants should be set about one foot apart in the bench and staked or tied in some suitable manner to keep the stems straight and erect.

Compost Pile.

The extra help that is so often employed during the spring trade can be utilized for a few days before they are let go, in getting together a good compost pile, and there is no better time of the year than the present to do this. The sod can be taken off now after the mowing with no great amount of grass upon it, and if stacked at this time the warm summer days will soon rot the sod and make the pile fine and mellow. So many growers will spend their money for coal and labor and skimp on that most necessary thing for good product, the soil upon which the plant depends for its culture, and again put the matter off until the fall when the days are cold, the soil too often full of moisture, and the hauling poor, which makes the work more expensive and in the end not having as good an article for the succeeding year. It is not necessary to stack the manure with the pile at this time, but if ground bone is to be used it is better to sprinkle it into the pile now. Bone dissolves slowly and the earlier it is incorporated in the soil the better, and it also helps the rotting of the sod. Take advantage of the slack time with both the men and teams and get the compost pile up at once.

Cyclamens.

The plants of cyclamen should now be growing rapidly, especially those which were grown from seed sown last fall. These plants should now be in four or five-inch pots and the foliage growing full and strong. If the plants are plunged in a frame, they should be lifted out of the soil occasionally to see that the drainage is not stopped up. There is nothing that will ruin a young growing cyclamen any quicker than to have the drainage get closed and have the soil become sodden with water. Angle worms will often cause this and if they are detected should be removed. It is very easy to find whether they are in the pots. If the soil on the top of the pot is rolled into small lumps it is a sure sign that there are worms in the soil. If there are but a few the plants can be knocked out of the pots and the worms removed; if there are many a watering of lime water will soon rid the soil of the worms. The plants that are in small pots should be potted up as fast as they require it that they may be as large as possible for the holiday season, but do not go to the other extreme and pot in too large pots. As soon as the roots get around the side of the pot shift them into the next size larger. If the plants are in the greenhouse a close watch for thrips must be kept during the summer. If the foliage is twisted when the leaf begins to unfold it is sure to be caused by insects and the plants should be sprayed with a nicotine solution. To have good plants for the holidays in full bloom they must be constantly watched and well grown.

National Flower Show, Philadelphia.

During the past six months much important work has been done by the national flower show committee of the S. A. F. and O. H. in connection with the fourth national flower show, to be held in Convention hall, Philadelphia, Pa., March 25 to April 2, 1916, and arrangements are rapidly assuming definite form. Chairman George Asmus, of Chicago, has been in attendance at several of the meetings of the local executive committee in an advisory capacity, and the committee has had the full benefit of his past experience with such exhibitions. The local executive committee is well organized, and in no other city have the different horticultural interests been so well represented on an exhibition board as in this instance in Philadelphia. This committee will hold regular meetings from the present time until the close of the show.

The various sub-committees, too, are well organized, and are working on the various details of preparatory work harmoniously and with a zeal which leaves no doubt as to the successful outcome of the undertaking. These committees, with their chairmen, are as follows:

Committee on press, publicity and advertising—W. F. Therkildson.

Committee on securing exhibits—William Kleinheinz.

Committee on special premiums—Wm. P. Craig.

Committee on special features—Chas. Grakelow.

Committee on music—Leo Niessen.

Committee on printing—S. S. Pennock.

Committee on concessions—Henry F. Michell.

Bureau of Information—Frederick Cowperthwaite.

Secretary and treasurer—A. A. Niessen.

Committee-at-large—George Burton, Louis Burk, Robert Craig.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society has been invited to assist in the work of the exhibition and, through Hartman Kuhn, its president, the ladies of the different garden clubs in the vicinity of Philadelphia have been invited to take part in the exhibition, and are already at work on plans to have a tea garden, or something similar, on lines followed by the ladies of the Red Cross at the recent New York show. Sufficient space will be allotted them by the management for the purpose.

An unusual feature and attraction will be exhibits by different societies devoted to aquarium fish and aquarium plants. This section of the show is being taken care of by Franklin Barrett, whose personal exhibits alone will cost almost $600 to stage.

The trade exhibition in connection with the show will be most extensive and comprehensive, and applications for space are coming in rapidly. The H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., have booked up for Block No. 30, and Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Riverton, N. J., and Philadelphia, for Block No. 1, each containing 1,026 square feet. A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., is among other large exhibitors in this section. Floor plans have been distributed, and extra copies may be had upon application to the superintendent of the trade exhibition.

The guarantors' list will soon reach $10,000, the amount authorized to be raised by the national flower show committee.

The Tacoma Rose Show.

The most extensive, and without doubt the most beautiful exhibition of roses ever held in the Pacific northwest, closed at midnight, Saturday June 12, and the thousands who attended were made happier by such a wonderful display of beautiful flowers, artistically arranged, which completely filled the floor space of the Glide rink, 100x240 feet in extent.

Beautiful beyond description, and arranged on 50-foot tables were splendid roses, so grouped that there was no clash in harmony of colors, but blending one shade into another, beneath two miles of evergreen wreathing that was arranged overhead, covering the whole space, and seeming to arise from a green surrounding, interwoven with many thousands of blooms of rare beauty and quality. All who attended were enthusiastic in their praise. Nature is so kind in favors that make rose growing easy and Tacoma so located in the best section of the United States, that it is no task for anyone who cares to try, and the concerted aim is always to give a fuller measure of pleasure to all who attend this great yearly exhibition. "Come and see our beautiful roses and the great Mt. Tacoma" is always a standing invitation.

Praise and congratulations are heard on every side for the splendid work of the officers of the Tacoma Rose Society, and the efficient public parks workers, Messrs. Hill and Milton, who labored long and enthusiastically in the city beautiful campaign, as evidenced by a wonderful display of plants and cut blooms. Over 350 varieties of roses were represented and in the neighborhood of 150 varieties of perennials. Not far from 25,000 roses were staged for competition and several times that number were used in decorations.

Many late new roses were shown and one especially beautiful crimson red, a Tacoma production grown from seed of a cross of Gen. Jack and Betty, attracted much attention and praise.

Only two of the local florist firms made any attempt to exhibit, both of these, however, had splendid displays, that brought forth favorable comment. The Hayden-Watson Co. arranged a beautiful booth with bouquets and cut flower arrangements with suitable suggestions, a beautifully decorated table in pink Mme. Chatenay roses. The Smith Floral Co. had an attractive table decoration, arranged with red roses, that was noteworthy.

As to the financial returns from this year's rose show, no great amount of money will be carried over for next year's exhibition, but enough will no doubt be set aside to make the sixth annual exhibition in 1916 greater than ever before.

Awards, cups donated by local firms, organizations and individuals were given in 38 classes, and among the successful contestants were the following: T. H. Dobson, six cups; S. S. Anderson, James A. Hays and J. W. Misener, three cups each; Mrs. R. G. Walker, Herbert Howard, J. D. Heinrich, and H. R. Lea, two cups each; Mesdames R. W. Dawson, R. P. Christofferson, Morton Gregory, Wm. Larkin, R. A. McCormick, M. E. Hubbard, C. A. Snowdin, L. E. Paskill, L. E. Bailey, Fred Clark, E. A. Bluker, Sidney F. Anderson and Messers. A. A. C. Gainer, M. E. Honningfort and Herbert Hunt, one cup each.

BUSINESS IS DRAGGING.

Business is not very brisk of late. There does not seem to be anything doing out of the normal, and business is just dragging along. The closing of the schools last week helped things considerably. The supply of roses is more than sufficient for the demand and the quality is nothing extra. Red roses were in rather short supply last week. Lily of the valley is very scarce at present and cattleyas are beginning to shorten up considerably and are in pretty good demand. Carnations are quite poor; the warm weather is having a bad effect on them as well as roses. There are quite a few lilies to be had, but the offerings are taken shyly. Sweet peas are now in their glory and there is a good demand and also good prices for good stock. Spencers bring double the amount of the grandifloras. There is a very large cut of outdoor gladioli coming along. Dahlias are beginning to make their appearance and as they are somewhat of a novelty as yet, are moving fairly well. Since memorial day the shipping business has dropped away and little can be expected in this line until next fall, and as a consequence all the flowers grown in the vicinity of this city will have to be absorbed here. The decorations that many of the florists are keeping up at the exposition grounds for various state buildings and private exhibitors uses a great quantity of cut flowers that otherwise would be thrown on this market. Plants of all kinds are moving slowly.

NOTES.

The Menlo Park Horticultural Society held a very enjoyable smoker June 11. Quite a number of the trade from down the peninsula availed themselves of the opportunity of visiting this society and an agreeable evening was held. This society was well represented among the prize-winners at the sweet pea show at the exposition last week. David Bassett, Joe Paneika, David N. Slade and others aquitted themselves in a very creditable manner.

Howard Earl, general manager of W. Atlee, Burpee & Co., of Philadelphia, was an interested visitor at the sweet pea show at the exposition. The Burpee firm had a very large exhibit and Mr. Earl was well pleased with the awards. He will remain here for the American Seed Trade convention, and will visit the Floradale farms at Lompoc before his return.

Secretary Hoffinghoff, of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, has mailed the fall schedule to all intending exhibitors. H. Ploth is busily engaged in arranging the program and advertising. He is well pleased with the way in which the trade has responded so far, and expects to finish his task in a day or so.

A great number of seed growers were in this city during the week, chief among which were Ant. C. Zvolanek, of Lompoc; Waldo Rohnert, of Gilroy; L. L. Waller of Guadaloupe and representative of the Braslan Seed Growers' Co. of San Jose. They were interested principally in the sweet pea exhibition.

The MacRorie, McLaren Co. have a grand lot of cyclamens, which they are growing at their nurseries at San Mateo. They expect to have them in bloom much earlier than usual. They have about completed the planting of their last importation of shrubs and plants.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. had a large share of the floral orders let by the police force on account of the re-appointment of Chief White as chief of police. Some of the designs were very large and expensive. All were executed in the usual splendid style of this firm.

C. Kooyman says that business in his new store shows a steady increase. Mr. Kooyman carries a full supply of florists' supplies, as well as cut flowers, and says he is well pleased with his new venture.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, was a visitor during the week, having made the trip to see the sweet pea exposition at the fair. He reports a very good memorial day trade. G. N.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

Ira H. Landis of Paradise read the following paper on "Field Culture of Carnations" at the June meeting of the club.

As soon as the soil can be gotten into shape early in April we like to commence planting into the field. Assuming that the soil has been well manured and properly prepared with three men and a few boys, the planting proceeds nicely. We always use two lines and draw a rake along each row to make the soil mellow and the planting easy.

Where a great many thousands are grown I believe it advisable to plant in beds of about five rows each, 15 inches apart and 10 inches between the plants and cultivate by hand. We plant in rows 30 inches apart and 10 inches in the row and cultivate with a horse. This method of cultivation I prefer to the hand cultivator where space is not limited, as the deep cultivation helps the soil to retain moisture for a greater period. Care must be taken not to cultivate too close to the plants so as to injure the roots. Cultivate about every two weeks and as soon as possible after a rain with a fine toothed harrow in order to leave the soil nice and mellow.

As soon as the plants have become thoroughly established and their flowering shoots begin to push up, the pinching back or topping must be attended to and the stock gone over about every two weeks. About August 1, this topping must be discontinued if you want early blooms, and if you have good healthy stock to start in the spring the greater part of it should be ready to plant into the house early in August.

In the discussion that followed it was generally conceded by the 15 or more carnation growers present that the cultivation by horse was an advantage on account of the greater depth the horse harrow had over the hand cultivation. It was also brought out very strongly that early planting was an advantage and that some of the best results were obtained where the planting had been done so early that the plants had a pretty hard freeze after being planted out. B. F. Barr cited an instance where the thermometer went below 28 for several nights after planting out, and Frank Kohr an instance where the plants were snowed under a few days after they had been planted with beneficial results to the plants in both cases. W. B. Girvin said he planted about 22,000 to the acre, cultivating by horse power and was looking for a motor power cultivator to take the place of the horse; he believed in planting as early as the soil could be gotten into shape, which differs in some localities. He also said that he had both Akehurst and Ward planted into the houses now for next winter's crop and that they were looking fine.

The committee on the dahlia show reported having secured some very fair premiums from the Lancaster County Fair Association for the amateur classes. The space allowed us for this show not having been decided upon, further action would not be had until the August meeting, when all details would be reported upon and every member of the club given something to do.

The committee on picnic, consisting of Elmer Weaver, Harry Rohrer, Frank Kohr and Willis Girvin reported as having arranged for a picnic at Rocky Springs park to take the place of the July meeting, the given date to be announced later.

B. F. Barr announced that the August meeting would be held at his nursery and farm, where we had such a delightful meeting last August and that the inspection of the nursery and farm would start at 1 p. m. sharp and be followed by a variety of outdoor sports until 6 p. m., when a light lunch would be served and the meeting called to order. Mr. Barr has arranged for some visiting nurserymen to talk to us on this occasion. The programme committee had arranged for an aster symposium for this August meeting, which will have to be deferred until another year.

Mr. Keohane, of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., gave us some interesting information on the general condition of business, all of an optimistic nature. Alphonse Peters exhibited a number of climbing roses and surprised us all with an exhibit of Dahlias Gorgeous, Twentieth Century, Jack, Yellow Century and Ami Bertillion.

WEEK OF WEDDINGS AND COMMENCEMENTS

The past week has been one of weddings and closing exercises of schools. Every florist appeared to be busy and everything was in large supply, fancy stock being in good demand. Sweet peas have been slow sellers. Some good Minnetonka and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses had fairly good sales.

NOTES.

The wholesale houses closed at noon, June 19, and remained closed until Monday morning. There was quite a stir among some of the retailers, while others favored entire Sunday closing. The growers held a meeting and a special committee of three was appointed; W. A. Rowe, B. Edwards and Hugo Gross, to meet the wholesalers and endeavor to extend the hour of closing on Saturdays until 5 p. m. This committee met at C. A, Kuehn's, June 21. The Florists' Retail Association will also discuss general Sunday closing at their next meeting. It is understood Alderman Koenig favors the measure.

The board of trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden has awarded the contract for the erection of a new $75,000 greenhouse. The new structure will contain more than 45,000 square feet of glass, concave in form. It will not be as large as one recently completed in which tropical plants and ferns are kept.

Alphonse Artemann and Hazel Boeckman were married June 22. Alphonse is head designer at Mullanphy's Grand avenue store.

The wholesalers report increased sales, Saturday, June 19, proving that the growers benefited by the extended closing.

Frank Gorly is very busy managing all departments of the business in his brother's absence.

Waldman, the Florist, has been giving the public special benefit sales during the glut period.

Alex. Waldbart & Sons report trade as having been very good, but is slackening up now.

O'Leary, the Florist, has been very busy with graduating exercises and weddings.

The Mullanphy Florists had the bouquets for the McKinley High School.

Herman Flower Shop, Page and Taylor streets, is building up a nice trade. W. F.

OBITUARY.

Gust A. Taepke.

Gust. A. Taepke, one of the most popular florists of Detroit, Mich., died Friday, June 18, after a protracted illness that had its beginning about two years ago. He was born in Lowenburg, Germany, June 13, 1854, and came to America about 40 years ago, settling in Detroit, and engaged in the florist business at 450 Elmwood avenue, where he also resided until his death. He is survived by his mother, a brother, Albert, his widow, three daughters, Laura C., Mrs. Omar Rudkwicz, Mrs. Bert Haberkorn, and one son, Walter C. Taepke, the latter being associated with his father in business and having charge of their store at 95 Gratiot avenue.

Mr. Taepke had a wide circle of friends who held him in the highest esteem. He was a member of the Harmonie and Concordia societies, Society of American Florists, American Carnation Society and the Detroit Florist Club.

The funeral was held June 21 from his late residence and interment was in Elmwood cemetery. A profusion of flowers were sent by his many friends, among them being a design sent by the Detroit Florist Club, many members of which organization were present at the funeral.

At the regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, Monday, June 21, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, by Divine Providence, Gust. H. Taepke, one of our members, was removed from our midst, therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of Mr. Taepke, the Detroit Florists' Club has lost one of its oldest and most valued members, and one in whom was reposed the greatest measure of confidence, in his able counsel and generous contribution to the work of the club, and

Resolved, That his untimely demise has caused the greatest sorrow among the florists of the city, all of whom valued his friendship and counsel, and the generous spirit with which he at all times dispensed the same, and

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the records of the club, and a copy of the same be engrossed and sent to the bereaved family of the deceased, with whom we heartily sympathize in this, their hour of deep affliction.

August Gaedeke.

August Gaedeke, well known florist of Nashua, N. H., and founder of the firm of August Gaedeke & Co., of that city, died of pneumonia, June 15, after an illness of only three days. He was born in Stettin, Germany, in 1866, and came to this country at the age of 20, and was employed in Charles Hoitt's greenhouses until 1900, when he bought out the Hoitt interests and embarked in business for himself. He recently disposed of his business to Fred D. Sperry, preparatory to retiring from business, after a successful career. He was well known in the trade, and highly esteemed in his home city. A widow, two brothers and three sisters survive him.

Albert C. Rott.

Albert C. Rott, well-known florist of Joliet, Ill., passed away June 17 at St. Mary's hospital in that city. He was 48 years old. Mr. Rott took to his bed on Sunday previous to his demise, suffering from an internal complication which necessitated his removal to the hospital, where hopes for his recovery were entertained up to a short time before his death. He leaves a host of friends who will miss his cheery disposition and kindly thought for all. His funeral took place at Bloomington, Ind., Sunday, June 20, with full Masonic honors. The number of floral tributes were a strong testimony of the esteem in which the deceased was deservedly held by friends far and near, hundreds of whom will miss him no less for his beautiful work than his straightforward dealings. We shall miss Albert Rott in Joliet.

Mrs. Rott will continue the business and her personality is such as to command whole-hearted support of the trade and former customers.

BUSINESS AT A STANDSTILL

With business at a standstill, the supply is plentiful, except in extra good stock. Carnations can be had at $5 per 1,000 and are going begging at that price, while roses are almost as bad. The only flowers that seem to hold up in price are gladioli, which bring from $5 to $12 per 100. Local lily of the valley and orchids are a drug in the market.

NOTES.

Miss Alice V. Cramer and J. Harper Hetherington, manager and formerly cashier for the Washington Florist Co., were married at the residence of the bride's parents, June 23. The home was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and pink rambler roses, the bride carrying a shower bouquet of lily of the valley and orchids. The maid of honor carried a large bunch of pink roses, as did also the bridesmaids. Mr. Hetherington's brother of Philadelphia, Pa., and a few friends from that city were the only attendants, outside of the bride's family. We wish them the very best of luck, which is from the local trade in general. Emmett C. Palmore, with Z. D. Blackistone, has also taken the "fatal move" and we will also wish him "our best." Everybody in the employ of Blackistone was at his nice little flat to welcome him home and from all accounts it was the "wee small" hours of the morning before the guests left for home, providing some of them had time to go home.

The weekly meeting of the bowlers will take place June 30 at the New Royal alleys and we hope to see all the local bowlers there.

Los Angeles.

The regular meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society will be held July 6, in the hall, 237 Franklin street. The feature of this meeting will be an address on Rose Culture, by Frank Lewin.

THE price of glazing points and all zinc materials has been advanced.

LEAD has again declined in price but probably not sufficiently to affect the advance on tinfoil.

American Gladiolus Society.

Early notification should be made by all who intend to make trade exhibits at the Newport, R. I., show, August 18-19. Those so intending should communicate at once with Henry Youell, chairman of exhibition committee, whose address is 538 Cedar street, Syracuse, N. Y., instead of Rochester, as previously reported.

Chicago Fall Show.

At a meeting of the executive committee representing the Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club, held June 21, arrangements were materially advanced for the big fall flower show, to be held at the Coliseum, Chicago, November 9-14, inclusive. A large part of the $10,000 guarantee fund has already been subscribed. The premium list is in preparation and copies may be had on application to the secretary, N. P. Miller, 179-183 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

"Seeds That Grow."

ORIGIN OF BURPEE'S SLOGAN.

W. Atlee Burpee and his business is featured in the opening article of Printers' Ink, June 17, with portrait and reproductions of advertisments. Among other things the writer, Roy W. Johnson, says:

"Nearly 25 years ago—December 24, 1890, to be exact—W. Atlee Burpee offered, through Printers' Ink, a prize of $50 for the 'best advertisement' calculated to bring business to the seed house of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. 'Should there be a second advertisement also of special merit,' he announced, 'we will gladly pay an additional prize of $25.'

"Now the ad which won the first prize in that contest has long ago been forgotten. As a specimen of the weird typography in vogue in those days, it stood high, indeed, and probably was worth all it cost. But the second prize—for there was a second prize, and several additional awards into the bargain—went to an advertisement which was quite modestly set around the luminous phrase, 'Burpee's Seeds Grow.' 'That piece of copy,' says Mr. Burpee, 'was submitted by Wiley B. Jones, then of Burlington, Vt. Had I known how immensely valuable his phrase was to become to the business, he certainly should have received the first prize at the very least.'

"There you have the 'origin' of one of the most successful slogans in existence. But in the humble opinion of the present writer, Mr. Burpee should have awarded an extra-special-first-prize to himself as the man who first recognized the value of the phrase. The ordinary individual would have passed over it as merely a commonplace statement of fact. 'What does Mr. Burpee expect his seeds to do; sing and dance?' asked H. C. Brown, then editor of a publication called Art in Advertising. And a certain competitor with a fine sense of sarcasm (though as much can hardly be said of his advertising sense) devoted some half-dozen lines of perfectly good advertising space to the headline, 'Weed Seeds Grow.' Sometimes the make-up man would rise to the occasion by placing the 'Weed Seed' copy directly beneath one of Mr. Burpee's ads—which did not worry the latter gentleman in the least.

"There were a few years during which Mr. Burpee worded the slogan thus: 'Burpee's Seeds Grow, and Are the Best that Grow.' 'You will notice,' he said, 'that that expression is free from the vulgarity of claiming that Burpee's seeds are the best seeds. It only states that they are the best that can be grown.' But for many years now the slogan has been used in its simple, unequivocal form. After all, there is nothing further that one wants to know about seeds.

"And when all is said and done, that plain, unostentatious, and apparently commonplace slogan is quite typical of the Burpee business, and of the man who is its active head. There is very little of the spectacular, and absolutely not a trace of the sensational, to be found in the selling methods of the concern. One who is used to the high-pressure system of running a business so as to make the market yield every last order it is possible to obtain, would doubtless feel that a good many opportunities were being overlooked. He probably would want to 'key-up' the organization the first thing, and he probably would succeed in creating the atmosphere of feverish activity. But whether or not it would result in more actual business is another question.

"For be it known that Mr. Burpee is one mail-order man who does not believe in follow-up. For years he has advertised that his customers will not be troubled with follow-up literature, and it is literally true.

"'In this business', says Mr. Burpee, 'forced sales are like forced plants—you can raise them, but the natural growth is better. It is easy to overpersuade a man to buy a few packets of seeds, but it isn't the seeds he really wants—it's the product of the seeds. The price of the seeds is infinitesimal compared with the value of the expected crop. But suppose the crop doesn't materialize as he expects. Suppose he plants the seeds too deep (as most inexperienced gardeners do), or that he puts them under an eavespout, or on the south side of a brick garage where they are never watered. Will he justly charge the crop failure to his own carlessness? No, he will blame the seedsman who overpersuaded him to buy. Naturally enough, too, you must admit.

"'But, on the other hand, if he received only a straight-forward statement of what may reasonably be expected, from a house in which he has confidence, he is more apt to conclude that the trouble was at his end of the line. In other words, if he has been sold partly against his will, he will be resentful, while if he has sold himself, so to speak, we are likely to hear from him again.'

"In the present writer's opinion, you have there the whole selling philosophy of the Burpee business. It certainly doesn't harmonize with many of the most modern ideas; it would spell stark ruin for the manufacturer of washing machines and typewriters; it wouldn't do for a dealer proposition. But Mr. Burpee has made a conspicuous success with it, and if the resulting good will of thousands of consumers was slow in the building, it is just that much harder for competitors to tear it down.

"So it practically comes down to this, as Mr. Burpee put it: 'The catalogue must sell the goods.' The catalogue is a mighty important item in any mail-order business, but it is particularly important here because it has borne practically the whole burden of making sales. So important is 'The Silent Salesman,' as the Burpee catalogue is called, that Mr. Burpee has always written the text himself, and the descriptions of the 6,000 odd varieties contained therein are exclusively his own."

Window Box Litigation.

A writ of mandamus was filed in the superior court, June 11, by L. L. Reid to compel Gustave Freiwald, owner of an apartment building at 4159 Drexel avenue Chicago to allow him to put a flower box on his front porch. Reid recites he has obtained the box had it filled by a florist and employed a carpenter to insert hooks to hang it on, but Freiwald objects. He can find nothing in his lease, he says, prohibiting gardens.

TRADE RATHER QUIET.

Business has been rather quiet the past week, but the season as a whole has been very satisfactory and none of the wholesalers are complaining. Stock of all kinds is very plentiful but of good quality, especially carnations, which are unusually fine for this season of the year. Peonies are plentiful and very choice home grown stock is being offered. Sweet peas are arriving in good supply and some fancy snapdragons are among the offerings. Roses are especially fine and some choice Mrs. Chas. Russell, Ophelia, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Sunburst and Richmond are to be had. A few Hoosier Beauty are now included in the rose shipments and will make a reputation for itself in the market as the roses Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia did last season. Graduations and weddings have called for a good supply of stock, but trade in general is rather quiet.

NOTES.

Holton & Hunkel Co. is cutting a few Hoosier Beauty roses and it looks like H. V. Hunkel has again picked out a winner, for the stock is all that one can desire and he is confident that this variety will soon become as popular as Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia. They are growing 20,000 Mrs. Chas. Russell, 8,000 Ophelia and quite a number Hoosier Beauty in addition to the old standard varieties, and now have a fine variety for the purchaser to select from. Business has been very good all season in the cut flower department and the same holds good in the plant line. The demand for Boston ferns has been exceptionally heavy this year and they are entirely sold out in this line, which is the first time this has happened so early in the season for a number of years. A large importation of palms has been received and the stock came through in better shape than ever before. Fred Holton made a trip to Racine, June 19, returning the same evening.

Miss Gladys Ennis, daughter of Mrs. Ennis, of the Wisconsin Floral Co., will be married to Dr. Thomas Howe, of Darlington, Wis., at St. John's cathedral, Wednesday, June 30. A reception will be held at the Wisconsin Hotel immediately after the ceremony and then the young couple will leave for the east where they will spend their honeymoon. Mrs. Ennis had the misfortune of slipping on the sidewalk in front of the Blatz hotel and injuring her hip, and while she has suffered considerable pain and was confined to her home for several days, no serious results are expected, and it is very likely she will be able to be about again in a few days. M. H. Moore is in charge at the store and is ably assisted by Henry Ischem, formerly with the L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, Mich.

C. C. Pollworth Co. says that the bedding plant trade this year was a hummer and everything in this line sold well at good prices. Mr. Pollworth reports a brisk demand for Boston ferns and a grand clean-up in all the salable sizes. A large importation of palms has been received and the stock arrived in the best possible condition and much better than ever before. This firm is cutting some very choice orchids and one spray carrying eight large cattleyas attracted much favorable attention at one of the leading retail stores, where is was on exhibition last week. C. J. Gutbrod, one of the popular young employes of this firm, and Miss Adella Patzke, were married recently, which accounts for his being so unusually good natured of late.

Nic Zweifel is having a glorious time with his new Cadillac "Eight" since he sold out his greenhouse establishment, consisting of 70,000 square feet of glass at North Milwaukee, Wis. He has been in business here since 1893 and his many friends are pleased to hear that he will continue to be a member of the Florists' Club, for they do not wish to part company with him just yet, for he is a pretty agreeable chap, and, to our knowledge, has not a single enemy in the whole trade. Gruenwaldt Bros., the new proprietors, are now in possession of his place and will consign their stock to Holton & Hunkel Co., as Mr. Zweifel did while he was conducting the place.

Gust Rusch & Co. are showing a large supply of fine roses in all the leading varieties, including Mrs. Chas. Russell. Business has been as good as can be expected, is the report at this house and the proprietors have no cause whatever to complain. Frank Deventhal is building a new summer cottage at the lakes, where he and his family will spend the summer. Mr. Rusch regrets to lose the services of his able saleslady, Miss Voelzke, who resigned her position to go into the retail business for herself, but wishes her all the success that Dame Fortune may bestow upon her.

Currie Bros. Co. are now comfortably located in their new store at 384 East Water street and report business as very good, especially in the seed department, which has shown a large increase since they have moved. The cut flower department is also very busy and no great change has been noticeable in the receipts, and, taken all in all, it appears as if the change will be very beneficial, for the location is an ideal one and the entire business is now concentrated under one roof. Roy Currie is getting ready to spend his spare hours at the lakes, as is his custom each year.

Miss Ella Voelzke, formerly with Gust Rusch & Co., has opened a new retail store at 3802 Lisbon avenue, and has the best wishes of her many friends in the trade for every success in her new undertaking. Her first order consisted of a handsome casket cover booked the opening day, Saturday, June 19.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. is well pleased with the business that it has enjoyed since they moved from Grand avenue to their present location on Mason street. Mrs. Baumgarten is ably assisted at the store by her son, H. Baumgarten, who takes to the florist business like a duck does to water.

J. M. Fox & Son are very busy with graduations and weddings this week and business is as good as can be expected. This firm always carries a nice supply of stock, serves a high-class trade and has as neatly a kept store as one can find anywhere.

Louis Manos, with Nohos & Co., reports that his wife is slowly recovering from her recent illness, but is still quite sick. She has been ailing for the past three months and for a time fears were entertained for her recovery.

Dan Lubliner says that trade has been quite good at his Grand avenue store, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather conditions which have prevailed here the past week.

Walter Kennicott, of Chicago, was here on a business trip this week. He denies the report that he is going to plant several hundred acres to peonies in this vicinity.

Miss Volmer, of the Loveland Floral Co., says that there has been a good call for flowers for graduations and weddings the past week.

N. J. Rupp, of the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, and daughters, Elsie and Clara, are spending a few days here this week.

Gustave Pohl is still cutting a good supply of choice sweet peas.

Minneapolis, Minn.

MARKET HOLDS UP WELL.

The market the past week has been very good, with stock not quite up to standard, owing to dark and cloudy weather. Peonies are very plentiful, selling at all prices from 50 cents per 100 upward. Festiva maxima, fancy stock, brings $5 to $8 per 100, but most of the stock shows effects of the frost. Roses are holding up well, except Richmond, which either come in too wide open, or with close, dark buds which do not open. Sweet peas are getting very poor and the end is in sight with most growers. Carnations are still very good and bring $1.50 to $3 per 100. Shasta daisies, bachelor buttons and pansies are coming in fine.

NOTES.

The local florists' club called a special meeting, June 15, and appointed the following committee to meet the St. Paul florists and arrange for a picnic the latter part of July: W. D. Desmond, chairman; Arthur S. Rice, Gust. Malmquist, C. G. Anderson, Oscar Carlson and C. N. Ruedlinger. The St. Paul florists held a special meeting June 18 and appointed their committee, who will meet at Rice Bros. June 22 to arrange date, etc.

The florists' baseball team had a fast game Sunday, June 20, with the Wayzata team; score, 14 to 8 in favor of the florists. The main feature of the game was the base running of John Rovick, who made four runs. Miller pitched a fine game and Tom Rogers was umpire. The boys expect to be in good shape for the game with the St. Paul team at the picnic.

Wm. Desmond has moved the floral department in L. S. Donaldson & Co.'s store back to the old location on Nicollet avenue. They have enlarged the space for ice boxes, work room and coolers down stairs, which is a great improvement.

W. H. Bofferding is busy with his plant and seed business; tomato plants are again in demand, as they have had to be replanted three times owing to frost.

Wm. Holmes has severed his connection with Dayton's department store and devotes his time to his Seventh street place.

Hugh Will and R. A. Latham have been on a fishing trip the past week, and fishing must be good, as they have not returned.

C. N. Ruedlinger has a large force of men and teams at work grading the grounds of the Pro-Cathedral.

W. D. Desmond has purchased a bungalow at Anoka and expects to grow perennials in quantity.

Carl Christiansen, Chicago, accepted a position as rose grower with the Minneapolis Floral Co.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is sending in some fine Easter lilies, which find a ready market.

Max Hosacker, of the Hiawatha Gardens, of this city, is sending in some fine roses.

Rice Brothers are getting in some very good fancy ferns of the new crop.

Hans Rosacker has about completed planting his new range with roses.

H. B. Whitted has had several wedding decorations in the past week.

Eldredge Floral Co. is putting out a lot of peonies at special prices.

Samuel Cargill has some fine Teddy Roosevelt, Jr., ferns.

STOCK OF ALL KINDS PLENTIFUL.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful and is being sold in large lots at greatly reduced prices. Trade was fairly good June 19 and June 20, but outside of these two days there was practically nothing doing, except in the shipping line. American Beauty roses of good quality are to be had at very reasonable prices and are seen featured in the window displays of nearly all the downtown retail stores. The supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses is very large, but is cleaning up well each day considering the general market condition and the unusually large number offered. A few Hoosier Beauty roses are being offered and are certainly fine, which accounts for them selling so quickly. Ophelia is in good supply, but cleans up well each day. Some fine My Maryland roses are being offered and are in good demand. Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Richmond, Milady, Double White Killarney, Rhea Reid, Prince de Bulgaria, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney Queen, Hadley, Sunburst, Lady Hillingdon and Mrs. George Shawyer are also plentiful and a good supply of the little roses Cecile Brunner and George Elgar are seen. Lilies are plentiful and that same holds good for gladioli, orchids and lily of the valley. Gardenias are in large supply and there are still plenty of peonies being offered. Carnations are seen at all the stores in large quantities and it is surprising how well the quality is keeping up at this season of the year. Sweet peas are still arriving in good supply, but have seen their best days. The department stores have been conducting special sales on roses and carnations the past week at ridiculously low prices, but the quality of the stock they handle is not to be compared with the stock that is generally offered by retail florists.

THE FALL SHOW.

At a meeting of the executive committee representing the Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club, held June 21, arrangements were materially advanced for the big fall flower show, to be held at the Coliseum, Chicago, November 9-14, inclusive. A large part of the $10,000 guarantee fund has already been subscribed. The premium list is in preparation and copies may be had on application to the secretary, N. P. Miller, 179-183 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

NOTES.

The Atlas Floral Co., 32 East Randolph street; Mangel, the Palmer House Florist and Simpson's, 3656 Ogden avenue, had very prettily decorated automobiles in the pageant of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, held on the evening of June 21, when several thousand members participated. Never has this city seen a more brilliant street demonstration. Magnificent and costly illuminated floats made the lights of Michigan avenue look pale and above them all stood the watchword of the organization—"Truth."

T. D. Long, Denver, Colo., with W. N. Rudd and J. C. Vaughan, left on a Michigan fishing trip June 21.

E. A. Kanst, superintendent of Lincoln park, has been spending the week in Minneapolis, Minn.

John Poehlmann and E. F. Winterson celebrated another birthday anniversary June 21.

Wm. Lubliner spent Sunday, June 20, at Milwaukee, Wis.

George Anderson, who has been acting as cashier at the store, and Miss Pauline Anderson, who has been employed in the office at Morton Grove, will leave soon for Minneapolis, Minn., to join their father, who is manager of the greenhouses of the Minneapolis Floral Co.

SOCIAL FUNCTIONS STIMULATE TRADE.

This city is experiencing another rainy period which is very apt to mean a flood in this vicinity. The rains were unusually heavy and the wind has been very strong, but thus far no greenhouses have been reported damaged. Business in general has been very good with all the florists, both in funerals and decorating. Stock is coming in extra good and is plentiful, especially in roses, carnations and gladioli. There have been many parties and weddings which have kept some of the florists busy and taken some of the very best stock in the city to complete the orders.

NOTES.

H. Kusick & Co. say business is better than expected, stock coming in very fine, and is selling out readily. The roses are coming in better and gladioli are extra good, both in quantity and quality; also plenty of lilies and carnations. Supplies are selling fast. Ray Blessing has gone to Chicago on business.

Chas. Biedermann & Son report bedding stock sold well—the best spring trade the firm ever had. Their chrysanthemums are all planted; also the field outside, and they have finished potting the ferns. They have been busy with funerals and decorations, especially the latter.

W. J. Barnes had a very good week, especially in funeral work, which kept the help busy getting it out on time. Decorating was very good, he having a number of nice orders, which took a large number of plants. Pot plants sold well.

Miss J. E. Murray reports a very fine business, especially on Sundays, and is kept occupied at the store all day. She has been very busy with weddings and stage parties. Funeral work has been very good.

Geo. M. Kellogg Flower and Plant Co. reports business about the same as usual. Funeral work has been good. Geo. Brackenbery has gone to Pleasant Hill for the summer.

Alpha Floral Co. had a good week on funeral work and reports a good city business; the shipping trade was about as usual, and always keeps the force busy.

Costello, Moore Floral Co. reports business as good, especially in funeral work. This company is getting a number of hotel orders.

A. F. Barbee has planted three houses to chrysanthemums and is making preparations for the carnations.

T. J. Noll & Co. had a good week in shipping trade, and city business was good. Stock is very plentiful.

Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a good week's business, unusually heavy in funerals and decorating.

Ed. N. Humfeld says he is still on the corner and thinks he is getting his share of the work.

Arthur Newell has been having good funeral orders, and reports business about as usual.

Patrick Larkin reports business about the same, with quite a run on funeral work.

Miss Lou E. Boggess says business is good, especially in funerals and decorations.

Visitors: Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; M. Dysinger, of Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich.; E. C. Pruner, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago.

BUSINESS CONTINUES ACTIVE.

Although really warm summer weather is at last prevailing, the flower business continues to be quite active and more satisfactory than ever before at this particular time of the year. There has been a fairly good scattering of June weddings, many of which have called for extensive floral decorations, and funeral work has been more in demand than is usual for this part of the country. There has been some quite disastrous results owing to flooded conditions in the bottom lands, caused by the abnormal condition of the Canadian river, but fortunately none of our florists are located in districts which were affected by this unusual rise of the river. Rainfall has been abundant and the land is surcharged with an excess of moisture, which is looked upon generally as a very fortunate circumstance, considering that it is almost at the end of June. Carnations in the field are making a magnificent growth, far better than is usual with outdoor stock.

NOTES.

Mrs. Ora Hornaday, Lawton, in speaking of her Memorial day trade said that the Comanche Indians are her very best customers (she is located near an Indian reservation); they come in their wagons in the early hours of the morning and take away every available thing in plants and flowers that can be used in a cemetery, and they pay cash. Contrary to the general opinion, it must be noted that the Indians are all of them quite wealthy.

The boys in the stores are asking how they can join the Chicago delegation in journeying to San Francisco to attend the S. A. F. convention, and want particulars as to reservations, etc. Will the committee publish such information, please?

[Details of this trip, with the official special train schedule, round trip fares and sleeping car rates were given in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of June 5, pages 1026-1027.—ED.]

Some of the members of the trade expect to attend the Texas florists' meeting in Fort Worth, which takes place the first week in July.

There was a very slim attendance at the June meeting of the Oklahoma State Florists' Association.

Furrow & Co. are repainting their store and workroom; everything is going to be in white.

The Stiles Co. has just completed their chrysanthemum planting into the benches.

Mrs. Eager, of Furrow & Co., is away on a visit to Tulsa.

C. J. Bickes left on his vacation this week.

Much regret was expressed in floral circles at the announcement the past week of the death of W. F. Josolyne, a well known florist and landscape gardener of this city. Mr. Josolyne was a native of Scotland, but had lived for many years in this city, where he was well thought of. He was a fine landscape gardener and was employed for many years at the Centennial park, which owes much of its present beauty to his ability and planning. He also was employed by private citizens of wealth and had a fine reputation as a landscape gardener. He was past seventy years of age and left no relatives, his wife having died some years ago.

Flowers have been plentiful and trade fair. School commencements, the two decoration days and the June brides have served to keep up a good trade. Lilies are abundant and roses were never better. Trade in bedding plants has been very good.

STOCK IN GREAT OVERSUPPLY.

Conditions are bad—there is a great quantity of all kinds of flowers and not nearly enough work to use them up. The quality is very good for the season, although some of the hot days of the past week passed them along too fast. The only scarce article is the red rose, which is scarce, the extra demand on account of school commencements using them up completely. For some reason the market has been flooded with Easter lilies. A great quantity was thrown on the market with the peonies and prices fell away to almost nothing. Peonies, with the exception of cold storage stock, are done. Carnations are showing the effects of the heat. They appear to be in great oversupply and are sold to the hucksters by the wagon load, so they can peddle them out two dozen for a dime. There appears to be an overstock of some kinds of plants in some lines. Crotons, splendid four-inch stock, were sold at Lit Brothers department store last week for 19c each, while hydrangeas that wholesale usually at 50 cents each went like hot cakes at 29 cents.

NOTES.

Friday, June 18, was opening day at Commodore Westcott's clubhouse at Barnegat Bay. John Burton, with five of the party, motored down, while Dr. Lane had Robert Craig, Wm. J. Gude and Geo. W. Hess of Washington in his auto. Others of the party were S. S. Pennock, George Anderson, G. C. Wilson, W. B. Westcott, W. J. Stewart, J. Burton; James Dean, of Long Island; D. T. Connor, Hugh Elbe, George Craig and Robert Kift. The Commodore's place is in fine shape and all hands enjoyed themselves hugely and came away sunburnt and satisfied.

H. H. Battles had a busy week. The Duke-Biddle wedding June 16, an outdoor affair, at which large quantities of peonies, Easter lilies, gladioli and the like were used, was one of the largest decorations of the season. Saturday last was also a busy day with Battles, he having seven weddings along with the other work.

H. C. Geiger, of the Florex Gardens, will leave Monday, June 28, for a three-months' tour of the Rockies and the coast. He will take in the exposition and visit other California points. This has been the banner year of the company; of late they have been cutting as high as 30,000 roses a day.

Coming out teas are now getting to be all-round-the-season affairs, there being several such presentations to society the past week, at which there there were quantities of flowers.

Arthur Niessen fell down stairs and broke his arm the past week, a very painful accident. He is getting along nicely, making the good one do double duty.

The M. Rice Co. has added to their force of basket workers and are getting up a wonderful stock of baskets for the fall trade.

Gladioli and outdoor sweet peas are the headliners of the Berger Brothers. Choice lily of the valley is also a feature.

BUYERS' PRICES PREVAIL.

Last week's market, taken as a whole, was a rather poor one. There was more than enough stock to go around. The demand was fairly steady, but not strong enough. Prices were and are very low, and it takes very many sales to run into money. The cut of roses coming into the market is as large as it was at the last writing, if not larger, for the first of the outdoor cuts are coming into the wholesale houses. Prices are almost strictly buyers' prices. American Beauty offerings are very fine. The first outdoor gladioli have made their appearance. These, with the greenhouse blooms, give us a very adequate supply in this line. Lily receipts are very large. They are good, but have a slow market. The first hardy hydrangeas came in during the past fortnight. Offerings in lily of the valley, orchids and sweet peas are excellent. The supply of greens is ample for all present needs.

NOTES.

The marriage of Miss Edna Ganzmiller and Frank Kyrk was solemnized Tuesday evening, June 22, at the Poplar Street Presbyterian church. L. H. Kyrk and Miss Edith F. Kyrk decorated the church with plants and lilies.

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth M. Reemelin to Roger Peterson has been announced. The date of the wedding will be announced later.

PUSH CARTS ONLY OUTLET FOR SURPLUS.

Some of the fathers and elder statesmen of the florist business in this city, who have consistently labored to keep it on a high plane, were somewhat shocked, in the past week, to see their idol fall off and land among the push cart merchants. We have no further comment except to state the facts in this matter, which were that the market was overloaded with stock, and it seemed that the only outlet for the surplus was with the street venders. Thousands of roses and carnations were disposed of in that way. They were bought wholesale for 25 cents to 50 cents per 100 and retailed at one cent each, or less for a quantity. While the situation could not promote cheerfulness among growers, wholesalers or regular retailers, it had humorous features, for the push cart men took themselves and the business very seriously. They could not have worked harder if they had been filling a "war order." We may add that it is hoped that such a situation may not again be confronted. After what is written above it is unnecessary to give minute details. Of other stocks there was also a surplus. Orchids of the best quality went down to 15 cents and 20 cents per flower; lilies to one cent per flower, though, for that matter, they have been near that figure for two weeks. Sweet peas are now arriving from the fields, but there are so many better ones from the greenhouses that the field stock is almost unsalable. The latest arrivals are great clusters of rambler roses, which are being utilized by a number of retailers in window decorations, and they can be worked in that way to advantage. Saturday, June 19, was the best day of that week. While there were no prices worthy of note, there was more activity and something nearer a clean up. While peonies are yet arriving, it is in smaller lots and their finish seems near at hand. A feature of the market is good stock of moss roses, but they have to take chances in the general surplus.

June 21.—The outlook in the wholesale district is more encouraging. While there is no increase in prices, the supply of stock is falling off. Arrivals of peonies are light. There are plenty of carnations, but the supply is diminishing. There is a scarcity of the special grade of tea roses, but the pansies and extras seem to nearly fill the bill. There is an abundance of sweet peas, but the quality is poor, being as a rule soft and mushy. American Beauties, special, range from $15 to $20 per 100; much of the inferior stock and lower grades goes cheap.

NOTES.

Victor Warendorff, of the Ansonia Flower Store, has returned from a two weeks' visit to the Panama-Pacific exposition, San Francisco, and was well pleased with what he saw. On the way out he stopped at Kansas City, Albuquerque, N. M., Phoenix, Ariz., and the Grand Canyon. He also visited Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara and other California points. Returning, he stopped at Salt Lake, Denver and Colorado Springs.

At the range of the Knight & Struck Co., Flushing, "The Home of Heather," the stock is in a flourishing condition. There is not only a great stock of heathers, both large and small, planted out, but also a great variety of other stock, including many hardy herbaceous plants.

At the store of David Clarke's Sons we have noted very fine and tasteful window decorations of pink and blue hydrangeas, water lilies and daisies on a background of cibotium and Boston ferns. There are fine opportunities for window display at this store, and they have been well improved.

Robert Berry, a well-known florist and landscape gardener and member of the New York Florists' Club, was in the wholesale district on June 19. He is now employed on a large private estate at Tarrytown, N. Y., and is doing well.

Siebrecht & Son, Rose Hill Nursery, New Rochelle, have incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are Henry A. and Emma S. Siebrecht and Isabel S. Munroe, all of New Rochelle, N. Y.

Otto Muller, who has a range at Woodside, has bought land and is erecting three houses, each 25x100 feet, at Flushing, near the range of the Knight & Struck Co. The houses will be devoted to fern growing.

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold a show at Bronx park June 26-27.

QUANTITIES OF STOCK GO BEGGING.

Business during the past week has been very quiet. The sales on all lines have fallen off and quantities of first-class stock find no sale whatever. Carnations move slowly, prices averaging about $1 per 100. Roses were practically the only flower for which there was any call, as they seem to be the most popular for June weddings and graduations. Prices on these averaged from $2 per 100 to $2 per dozen for the best long stemmed varieties. Peonies are becoming plentiful and many are sold as low as 25 cents per dozen. Good Festiva maxima and dark pink varieties brought 50 cents and 75 cents per dozen. Outdoor sweet peas were coming from a few growers, but prices are poor as there is still a large supply of indoor stock. Yellow marguerites continue to sell fairly well, considering how the quality has decreased. The prices on these run from 50 cents to $2 per 100. All told, market conditions are not as they should be, but with the coming graduations, commencements and weddings, a brighter aspect is hoped for.

NOTES.

The death of August Gaedeke, of Nashua, N. H., which is recorded in our obituary columns, this issue, was a shock to his many friends in the Boston trade. For many years Mr. Gaedeke was the leading florist of Nashua and was held in high esteem by all with whom he had occasion to transact business, as well as his host of friends.

Mrs. M. Flood, Woburn, Mass., is marketing some very fine peonies in addition to a good crop of Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus. Her Festiva maxima are remarkable for their size and created quite a sensation at the peony exhibition.

Mrs. E. M. Gill, Medford, Mass., received many congratulations upon her display of peonies at the show, June 19-20. Mrs. Gill has passed her eighty-fifth birthday and has been a competitor at exhibitions for the past half century.

Maun Bros., Randolph, Mass., are marketing a large crop of outdoor Spanish iris and bachelor buttons. About 1,000 irises a day are being shipped to the Flower Exchange.

Walter Holden and Louis Small returned from their fishing trip in Maine well tanned and smiling, with reports of a great trip—90 salmon and 50 trout caught by them.

George Barr, son of John Barr, South Nateck, Mass., is being congratulated on the arrival of an eight and one-half pound boy into his family.

Rhode Island Horticultural Society.

The largest June flower exhibition ever held by the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was staged in the Narragansett hotel ballroom June 16 and remained on view until 10 p. m. that evening. The large hotel ballroom was turned into a bower of flowers with a large bank of palms in the center of the room. The sweet peas, roses and peonies shown were in splendid condition, while an unusual display of orchids, shown by Edgar Nock, were to be seen. Almost every conceivable flower in bloom at this time of the year was on display.

Among the masses of bloom, room was found for many varieties of vegetables and fruit, including strawberries of extra large size.

The judges this year were Edward Brooke, of T. J. Johnson & Co. and John Marshall, of the Fruit Hill Greenhouses. An unusual feature was a demonstration of basket and bouquet making, by Mr. Rogers, of Penn the Florist's staff, Boston. The committee in charge consisted of Eugene A. Appleton, Joshua Vose, of Pontiac; Arthur Sellew, Cornelius Hartstra, and Dr. H. W. Heaton. The officers of the society are Dr. H. H. York, president; Harold Madison, treasurer, and Ernest K. Thomas, secretary.

The exhibits were many and varied, and came from all parts of the state. Outdoor roses were shown in large numbers by amateurs and the varieties were many. Basket arrangements, both by the professionals and amateurs, were on view and made a good showing. The individual displays were all extra fine and the show was a great success. H. A. T.

READING, PA.—The Rosedale Floral Co. has taken over the business of E. H. Beers & Co. Harrison B. Beers will remain with the firm as general manager.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—The horticultural exhibit of the state of Oregon has been awarded the gold medal of the Panama-Pacific exposition in close competition.

SPRINGFIELD, O. — Some of the big plant firms here are reported several weeks behind in filling their orders, business being unusually heavy in May and June.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—The flower department of the Gus Blass dry goods store has been refitted with new counters, cabinets and refrigerator and is again ready for business.

ENORMOUS DEMAND BUT SUPPLY COLOSSAL.

The orders for commencements the past week created the usual good demand for flowers, and coupled with weddings and funeral work, the amount of flowers used, was enormous; nevertheless, it could not keep up with the supply, which was colossal. There is a heavy glut at present of nearly all cut flowers, both indoor and outdoor stock. Of the former, roses, carnations and Easter lilies are the most plentiful, with also a heavy supply of nearly every other kind, the only exception being in lily of the valley, and this stock was about equal to the demand. Sweet peas, snapdragons, calendulas, gladioli, daisies and irises fill the tables of local wholesalers. The outdoor stock is just about as plentiful and as varied; colored water lilies, phlox, lakespurs, peonies, Shasta daisies and coreopsis are only a part of it, and we must not forget the cold storage stock, especially peonies, of which there are quite a few. New fancy ferns are now on the market with other greens also plentiful. Orchids are plentiful, and stock is exceptionally fine.

NOTES.

H. P. Knoble, F. A. Brown and H. Kohankie of Painesville, Ohio, were judges of the Garden Club show, June 17. This is a private show, and different from the Plain Dealer garden contest. Only millionaire private gardeners exhibited and stock was the best he had ever seen reports Mr. Brown.

The J. M. Gasser Co.'s wholesale store will move to their new quarters on Huron road, between Second and Fourth streets, as soon as completed. The building is being remodeled to suit the flower business, and will be modern in every way.

We regret to announce the death of Henry L. Sontag, aged 74 years, one of the oldest florists in Cleveland. He died at his residence, 2515 East 83rd street, on June 17. His body was cremated Saturday afternoon, June 19.

Twenty flower girls will strew roses in the path of the bride and groom at the united market square carnival wedding, June 24 at the West Side carnival. H. P. Knoble is chairman of the carnival association.

Mrs. Rigo, of 2701 Lorain avenue, has moved her store two doors north on Lorain avenue, a much better store.

Abe Wax, better known as "Boston," has two lady clerks who assist him in selling flowers on the avenue.

The Ladies' Florist Club gave a banquet at the Hollenden on Monday evening, June 21. C. F. B.

SALISBURY, MD.—George H. Benedict is erecting a house, 60x150 feet, which, when completed, will be devoted to chrysanthemums exclusively. He has four other houses in operation devoted to roses, carnations, sweet peas, violets and ferns.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The Goodloe Seed Company has incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000; with liability limited to $50,000.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. F. Therkildson, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., attending the advertisers' convention.

NEW YORK.—The Stumpp & Walter Co. says their sales have increased 20 per cent over those of last year, both in cash and charge sales, over the counter and through the mails.

ONION SET conditions about Chicago indicate that the poor stand in some places is more to be attributed to poor germination than any other cause. On the whole, the wet weather has done the crop good. A few crops are troubled with lice. Most growers who in former seasons harvested six to one are expecting approximately the same this year.

American Seed Trade Association.

The thirty-third annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, scheduled to be held at San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, started off a day earlier, many of the members arriving the Saturday and Sunday previous, so that there was a good representation on hand for the autobus ride about the city tendered visitors by the local members, Monday, June 21. During the evening of the same day the visiting members were entertained at a reception given in their honor by President Morse and wife at their home, which was handsomely decorated with flowers and plants for the occasion. The attendance was quite large and music and refreshments detained the visitors to a late hour.

President Morse opened the business of the convention within the exposition grounds on Tuesday morning. Chief Dennison, of the department of horticulture, welcomed the visitors tendering them all the courtesies of the exposition and assuring them that the exposition officers fully appreciated the gathering in their midst of such an important body of men, many of them traveling great distances to attend. Vice-President Lupton responded for the association to the cordial and generous welcome, a genuine California greeting. The president's address and reports of officers and committees were then presented and were followed by Prof. H. E. Van Norman, Dean of California State Farm School, Davis, Calif., in his address on "The Value of Technical Training to Seedsmen." President Morse announced the appointment of committees as follows: auditing, Earl Pieper, W. H. Barrett; president's address, Charles N. Page, C. C. Massie, Kirby B. White; obituary, E. L. Page, R. W. Pommer, N. B. Keeney. Commissioner Colvin B. Brown, of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, here presented bronze memorial medal commemorative of American Seed Trade Association day, which was accepted by President Morse with response by Vice-President Lupton. At Wednesday morning's session the following were elected to membership: C. E. Depuy Co., Pontiac, Mich.; Pacific Seed Co., Caldwell, Ida.; Valley Seed Co., Sacramento, Calif.; Vogeler Seed & Produce Co., Salt Lake City, Utah; Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy, Calif.

The programme for the following days includes addresses as follows: "Horticulture in the Hawaiian Islands," by Prof. John N. Gilmore, Agricultural College, University of California, Berkeley; "Seed Growing in the Northwest," by E. C. Johnson, Portland, Ore.; "Flower Seeds in California," by L. C. Routzahn, Arroyo Grande, Calif. The banquet is scheduled for Wednesday evening at the Commercial club with Watson S. Woodruff as toastmaster and F. W. Bolgiano, C. C. Massie, H. T. McCullough and Albert L. Hart, banquet committee. Friday and Saturday will be devoted to visiting the seed farms with dinner at the Hotel Vendome Friday evening and luncheon at the Country club Saturday.

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.
President American Seed Trade Association.

President Morse's Address.

President Morse said in part:

"The year of my administration has been uneventful so far as affairs affecting the American seedsman is concerned. The trade has had a normal season with no great shortages except on certain kinds of beans and no great overproduction of any particular line.

"When the war broke out, a feeling of fear and distrust filled us with grave doubt as to whether or not seeds from the belligerent countries would be delivered, and as to whether or not seeds grown here for delivery abroad could be shipped. Except in a few isolated cases, I understand that practically all contracts were delivered either in full or pro rata when short, and most of the growers on this side were able to fill their contracts. So the season proved to be one of fair averages all round. If there was some reason for doubt as to deliveries last autumn, there is greater cause for fear this year. Any sort of prediction will be idle and all we can do at this time is to hope.

"In spite of the fact that large areas of such crops as are usually secured from Europe are being grown in America, there are many things that will be very greatly affected if they are not secured from Europe, since even with a good crop in this country, there will still be a serious shortage of many varieties. I understand there is a large acreage of turnip and cabbage in the northwest, while here in California there is a liberal acreage of radish and carrot and some table beet. Most of the sugar factories, I understand, have protected themselves with an acreage of beets for seed. The California flower seed growers have planted a good acreage of standard varieties which will take care of some lines, but there are many varieties of flowers and vegetables which are only used in limited quantity and which a seedsman needs badly for catalogue and store trade. These items will keep the retail dealer in a dilemma for a good part of the coming months or until he finally learns whether he can or cannot get them. Stocks of all kinds, I understand, are pretty well cleaned up and the trade, generally, is ready for a good harvest.

"It is the custom of our association to hold one meeting of the executive committee usually in January and although I had called a meeting and fully expected to meet with the members in Chicago in January, a majority of the members of the executive committee wrote me stating it seemed to them needless expense in time and money for the reason that all convention arrangements would naturally be left to me and the California seed trade. For this reason no executive committee meeting was held this year and I sincerely hope that no feature of our programme or entertainment has suffered.

"The principle matters of interest to the association during the past year have been those affecting legislation. The legislatures of most of the states were in session last winter and in a number of states some attempt was made to pass legislation affecting the seed trade. The details of these matters will be duly considered in the report of our attorney, Curtis Nye Smith, which report will be read later. Mr. Smith has done some very effective work in advising members of the seed trade in those states where legislation is proposed. He has kept me advised promptly throughout the year, sending me not only personal letters but carbon copies of all his correspondence with members of the seed trade in all parts of the country. I have received from him one hundred and seventy-nine individual letters represented either by personal letters or carbon copies. On the whole, the proposed legislation was less unjust and unwise than it has been in the past and there is a cheerful evidence of a better understanding between the public, law makers and the seed trade.

"There is still much to do in the matter of education, and for some time at any rate, we shall need to retain our attorney and we shall need to constantly carry on a campaign of education.

"The grower and dealer in vegetable seeds must insist on the protection of the disclaimer, and we must contest all efforts to nullify it. The market gardener and large planter must know as we do that there is a certain element of risk in planting seeds for a marketable crop. We who know that all varieties of cabbage, turnip, cauliflower, rape, mustard and kindred types of brassica are similar if not identical in appearance; that the seed of 30 colors, types and varieties of onion seed all looks alike, that the seed of mangels, beets and chard in all their multitude of variety are identical in appearance, know that mistakes are going to occur, this too in spite of intelligence and system in handling seed.

"If guaranteed seed means surety for the resulting crop or in other words if $10 worth of celery seed means the responsibility for a thousand dollars worth of crop with no share in the ultimate anticipated profit then we are in a hazardous business and too hazardous to warrant credit. The banks would soon put us all in the war risk clause, if they believed we were in such a business. The terrible results in loss of business in event of error is sufficient punishment to compel the utmost care and vigilence on the part of the seedsman.

"I believe that the market gardener and large planter realizes that there is some risk in attempting to grow a crop and many of them are doing what has long been a practice among the modern seed growers, and that is, he carries a stock over one year and tests a sample so that before he plants for crop he has proven stock.

"A seed dealer will have difficulty in getting his supplies if the value of the disclaimer should be nullified. The grower is both planter and dealer and you will find the majority of seed growers emphasizing his non-warranty terms.

"The public of course demands that the seedsman supplies seeds that grow; unadulterated seeds that produce an unmixed product of plants; seeds that produce the variety under which they are sold. This sounds simple and some of our law makers seem to think that they can compel merchants to sell only such seeds by threatening dire punishment if he does not. I believe that the seed grower and dealer are both trying to produce and sell just such seed and I believe that threatened punishment will have but little effect, especially so as the greatest reward to the man who has a reputation for handling such seeds is in the advanced prices which large planters are willing to pay him for his goods.

"I realize more emphatically than I have before that our association is made up of two distinct classes, viz: Grass seed men and vegetable and flower seedsmen. At times I have noted some conflict in the aims of each but these differences are generally suppressed. Except where dealers combine the two classes in their business, they little understand each other.

"Most all of the proposed legislation is aimed at the grass seed dealer and I believe it is in the interests of the association as a whole to strive to confine seed laws to the classes of merchandise which are handled by the grass seed people. As a matter of fact they will have to be, since there can be no legislation that can control vegetable or flower seeds in any sane manner. Except on matters of legislation, the American Seed Trade Association is a harmonious body of men and is a very effective organization.

"I recommend that we make some definite effort to enlarge our membership. Though not in the spirit of criticism, I want to suggest that I think we are too exclusive. So far as I know, we not only do not seek new members, but rather discourage the admission of new firms. One of the interesting modern developments of the seed business has been the growth of the number of new seed houses. One finds one or more seed houses in practically every city which has a population of 10,000 or more. It would seem that a larger membership would be more effective, and during convention week there could be an hour set aside for group meeting of the growers, commission men, catalogue men, grass seed men, etc.

C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Sec'y-Treas. American Seed Trade Association.

"Our association has been invited by the American Vegetable Growers Association to join with them in an attempt to regulate nomenclature. While our association has had a committee on nomenclature at various times, it has never been able to accomplish any definite results. It is well, however, that our association appoint a committee and a good strong one to work with the vegetable growers. Their suggested rules for registration of garden vegetables are excellent, and while I doubt that any rule can be rigidly enforced, it will certainly be well to make some attempt to control the naming of varieties.

"I recommend the re-appointment of the seed correspondents for the ensuing year and I certainly recommend the re-appointment of Mr. Smith as attorney.

"It is with profound sorrow that I report the death of four of our members during the past year. These are: Jno. M. Griffith, Baltimore, Md.; Jesse E. Northrup, Minneapolis, Minn.; L. B. Schulte, Houston, Texas; Wm. H. Grenell, Pierrepont Manor, N. Y. Both Mr. Northrup and Mr. Grenell have been presidents of the association and were frequent attendants at our various conventions. Probably they were as well known, if not better, than the majority of our members, and they will be greatly missed in all our future gatherings.

"It will probably be many years before the seed trade holds another convention on the Pacific coast, which gives peculiar prominence to this meeting. As is natural, the older men are passing away and the second generation and sometimes even the third generation is beginning to succeed the older members. Our convention must be so instructive and interesting that these younger men will find it not only a pleasure but a matter of profit to meet together and get acquainted.

"The seed business is of rather limited dimensions as an industry but world-wide in it's scope and on the whole is a wonderfully interesting business. Every season brings its full share of trials and anxieties but there is usually enough of success mixed up with failure to keep us fairly happy."

YARRAWA

The Sweet Pea par-excellence for Winter Flowering under glass.

WE were awarded Certificate of Merit for this superb novelty at the International Flower Show in New York, March, 1914, at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915.

YARRAWA is absolutely fixed—true to color and type

YARRAWA has the heavy foliage and rank strong growth of the summer-flowering type and is a true winter blooming Spencer. From seed sown early in October at Fordhook Farms, the plants came into bloom December 20th and flowered profusely until May. The flowers are exquisitely waved and when well grown will average two and one-half inches in diameter, many of them being duplex, or double flowered, thus adding greatly to the general effect of the bunch. They are borne usually in fours on extra long, strong stems. The color is a most pleasing shade of bright rose pink, with light wings. As the supply of seed will be limited we advise ordering early.

Floradale-grown seed exclusively—¼ oz., $1.00; per oz., $3.50; ¼ lb., $12.50.

President Chase's Address.

Ladies and gentlemen: The greatest lesson I have learned this past year, a year that we will all remember, is that there is nothing to be gained by worry. When the war started, we in the south were perhaps affected more than other sections of the country; cotton was unsalable, business dead, merchants and bankers scared, farmers panicky, and the man who had placed his order for trees wanted to cancel it; the man who had not yet placed his order forgot that he ever wanted to, and the nurserymen, unless men of unusual nerve and poise, were greatly worried. I will admit that I was one of the worried ones. Looking back, I now feel how unnecessary and foolish it was to lose sleep and appetite over what might happen. Some one has said, "I am an old man and have had many troubles, but the most of them never happened." The most of our troubles do not happen, and blessed is that man who has found this out.

E. C. Simmons, the hardware king of St. Louis, Mo., recently mailed a letter to all his salesmen reading:

"Don't worry. War or no war, freight rates or no freight rates, tariff or no tariff, baseball or no baseball, grape juice or champagne—The farmer is still on the job. Do not forget him."

There is comfort and encouragement in this for every one of us—the farmer is still on the job, and he is today the best farmer this country has ever known; he is producing bigger crops, selling them for more money, and consequently spending more money than ever before, and he will buy our trees, and will have the coin to pay for them. See to it that he gets full one hundred cents in value for every dollar he spends with us. Don't worry! Forget your worries in work. Go right along with your business affairs with a cheerful and hopeful spirit; plan conservatively, but work enthusiastically. Remember that no man nor no business can build securely in a hurry. It is the persistent, plugging away which delivers success, and that man's results are measured entirely by the will and courage and earnestness with which he pursues the object of his efforts. Work, my friends, is the greatest blessing we have. Listen!

Work!
Thank God for the price of it,
For the beautiful conquering tide of it,
Sweeping the life in its furious flood,
Thrilling the arteries, cleansing the blood,
Mastering stupor and dull despair,
Moving the dreamer to do and dare.
Oh, what is so good as the urge of it,
And what is so glad as the surge of it?
And what is so strong as it's summons deep,
Rousing the torpid soul from sleep?

Work!
Thank God for the swing of it,
For the clamoring, hammering ring of it;
Passion of labor daily hurled,
On the mighty anvils of the world.

Naturally a feeling of unrest is in the air, a feeling of uncertainty as to what the future will bring to us because of this horrible war in Europe, but my friends, we have a calm, cool, level-headed man in charge at Washington, and if it be possible for mortal man to steer this great nation clear of foreign entanglements, clear of war, that man will do so. And he should have behind him the solid, heartfelt sympathy and support of every citizen of this land.

Here we are in this beautiful city of Detroit, with our troubles which loomed so large to lots of us back in October and November, behind us. We have not perhaps cleaned up much profit this past year, possibly none at all. We may be weary of the manufactured, newspaper-made sort of prosperity that we have enjoyed (?) the past twelve months, but remember that it is this "cheer up" talk with which our papers and magazines have been filled that has given us all hope and faith in the future. Until the real thing is with us, let's continue to read and write and preach—Prosperity.

Let's imbibe all of Walt Mason's "gloom-chasers" we can, and let's firmly believe that real prosperity is awaiting us just around the corner. We are all feeling pretty good, prospects are a whole lot brighter and getting better every day—why should we worry or be downcast? Surely, gentlemen, apple trees, Kieffer pear and apple seedlings have all struck bottom; it was with a dull, sickening thud to be sure, and it jarred us powerfully, but we are recovering and let's forget it.

With last season's troubles behind us let us now cheerfully and buoyantly face the problems of the coming season and of the coming years. What are they? There is just one problem that I shall dwell on, only one, and that that is this—can this association by any change in its methods or organization make of itself a more efficient organization? An organization that will really help to control production, and to eliminate price cutting? An organization that can keep closer watch on legislative and transportation matters than is possible under our present system of working through committees? Can it be done? How shall we go about it?

Mr. Mayhew, of Texas, in his paper "A Better Association," will, I hope, point the way for us. To my mind it is a great big problem—as big as that laid out for himself by an old darkey preacher in Alabama, when he told his flock at a Wednesday evening prayer meeting, "I'm takin' no tex dis evenin', but I'se gwine to do three things; I'se gwine to explain de onexplainable, I'se gwine to do de ondoable, and I'se gwine to onscrew de onscrutable." This problem is big because of the lack of one thing—money. With a lot of money we can do a lot of good, and gentlemen, with the little money that this association has had to operate on all these years it has done a lot of good. Let us look back a little, realize what this association has had to work with and what it has accomplished:

This association, now 40 years old, was founded by a few representative nurserymen with the idea of bringing together in an annual convention the reputable nurserymen of the United States, to get acquainted with each other, relax from business, mix and mingle together, to exchange views and ideas, discuss methods of propagation, cultivation and all questions of common interest, and incidentally, or possibly primarily, to exchange, buy and sell nursery stock; the founders of this association had in mind the bringing into its membership all reputable nurserymen of this country—a national association of American nurserymen. They had in mind the greatest good to the greatest number. The dues were nominal, expenses small, their problems far less complicated than those we face today. Up to 1905 the dues were $2 per year; they were then raised to $3 and in 1906 to $5; so going back 10 years we find we have had an income of $5 per year for nine years and $3 for one year, from a membership as follows:

		Members
1905	West Baden	472
1906	Dallas	541
1907	Detroit	371
1908	Milwaukee	376
1909	Rochester	384
1910	Denver	356
1911	St. Louis	382
1912	Boston	363
1913	Portland	463
1914	Cleveland	410

We now have about $7,500 in our treasury, and since February, 1900, we have expended $10,504 in tariff, legislation and transportation matters alone. In addition to this we have expended about $1,700 from the special horticultural fund started in Portland two years ago. That this money has been well and wisely expended is beyond question of doubt. The work has been handled by committeemen who are all busy nurserymen, and who have given freely of their time, inconvenienced themselves time and time again to carry on this work, and without one cent of remuneration for their services. All honor to every one of these true-blue wheelhorses; they have always responded when called on, and they have accomplished great and lasting good for the nurserymen of this country. Remember that their work has benefited all American nurserymen, whether members of this association or not.

Note that our largest membership the past ten years was 541, and that for six years of the ten the membership has been under 400. Now to get the money necessary to do the work we ought to do we must either more than double our membership, or more than quadruple our dues. I have heard it stated at our conventions many times that we ought to have a membership of at least 1,000. I doubt if we can ever get such a membership, even though we have a secretary whose whole time is devoted to the work of the association. Certainly we have failed by the various methods employed in the past years to build up our membership to the desired point. I am greatly pleased to see that in spite of this hard year just past, we have not only retained the membership of a year ago, but increased it about 30 members. This is evidence of the good work done by our membership committee and our secretary this season. If we advance our dues from $5 to $25 or $30, $40 or $50 per year, how many members will we lose? Would the few who made up such an association constitute a National association of American nurserymen? If, instead of four hundred to five hundred odd members now attending our annual meetings, our conventions consisted of say a hundred or a hundred and fifty members (and I honestly believe there are not to exceed 100 to 125 who will pay $30 to $50 annual dues) would such a convention be a representative gathering of the American nurserymen? Can this association afford to consider any plan that will reduce its membership from 400 or 500 to 100 or 125? All these and dozens of other questions have occurred to me in thinking this matter over.

With the consent of the programme committee, I wish to call for Mr. Mayhew's paper tomorrow morning, that we may have ample time to consider it, and I bespeak for him your careful and close attention. Following his paper, I want a full and free discussion of this question, and let's see if we can get at any practical working plan, and then try it out.

TRADE TERMS.

Another matter on which I hope to see definite action by this convention, is trade terms, and Mr. Schuette as chairman of a committe appointed in Kansas City last December by the Western Association of Nurserymen will report to this convention a schedule covering terms of payment in the nursery trade, which, if it meets your approval, I hope to see adopted as the official terms, to be printed on the invoices of every member and put into universal use in the nursery trade of the United States.

territory (east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio rivers), applying to car load lots only, raising the classification from fifth to fourth, which means an advance of 20 to 25 per cent in freight charges on car lots. This advance is over and above the general advance of 5 per cent of last spring. This matter will be covered fully by the report of C. M. Sizemore, chairman of our transportation committee. The work of this committee is important. It requires the services of a man familiar with railroad matters; is it right for us to continue to ask gratuitous service for this work?

LEGISLATION.

The work of this committee is the most important and the most ardous of all handled by this association. Think for a moment of the many cases of adverse legislation investigated and fought by this association, in the states of Maine, Wisconsin, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado; the many trips by this committee to Washington because of the federal inspection bill; to Atlanta and Philadelphia on uniform legislation matters! My friends, in the very nature of things it is utterly impossible for these busy men who make up this committee to keep the close watch on legislative matters, both national and state, that we should have, and it is an imposition to place the vast amount of detail work of investigation, the vast amount of correspondence involved, on their shoulders, and should not we now at least relieve them of this detail work which can be handled by a paid expert?

SECRETARYSHIP.

Our good friend, Secretary Hall, is again serving us this year in spite of the fact that he tendered his resignation last year at Cleveland, which was accepted with the understanding that he would serve until our executive committee could arrange with Mr. Hall to continue his services, adding sufficiently to the salary to enable him to employ clerical help to relieve him of a vast amount of detail work incident to the publishing of the badge book, report of proceedings, etc. Mr. Hall seems to be happy and well content under this new arrangement, and I am pleased to have him at my right hand. He is earning his salary all right.

I now want the ear of every member from the south and southwest. I want to call your attention to the fact that through your agents on the road you have a fine opportunity to preach to the farmers of the south the importance of diversifying their crops. If the south can get away from the one-crop idea, if we will not depend on cotton for everything, but rather bend our energies toward producing our own meat and bread for man and beast, and let our cotton buy our automobiles and pianos instead of our necessities, we will then turn the catastrophe of last fall into a blessing. One way to diversify is to plant orchards, and this point should not be lost sight of in your selling campaign this season. Preach this eternally through your agents, and practice it yourselves.

Now my friends, let us for a moment turn our thoughts in loving sympathy to our fellow craftsmen beyond the seas, the nurserymen of France, Belgium, England and Germany. Think of what they are going through; multiply your own harrassing worries ten thousand times and then add an inexpressible weight of anxiety for loved ones fighting in the trenches, an inexpressible weight of sorrow for loved ones killed in battle, and you will not overdraw the picture. Listen to my lamented friend, Elbert Hubbard, who said:

"When we think of the 'Army of Bleeding Feet'—that army of homeless women and tired, hungry children, of the aged, stricken with grief too great for tears, and the woes that are beyond words, will we complain of a social slight, a toothache, or a loss in trade? The high cost of living becomes trivial when we think of bloody wounds and crushed bones and starving widows and outcast orphans.

"Out of the waste and woe of war across the seas, comes to us a grain of gain, and I do not have most in mind the gain in trade—that is assured. It will be for us largely to feed and clothe a starving Europe; many of the things we have depended upon Europe for we will make ourselves, and in the making we will evolve men and women, and therein will lie our chief gain, for as a boy grows when thrown upon his own resources, so does a nation. 'Made in America' is a slogan that is swelling into a chorus, and will pass into the current coin of commerce.

"Another great gain from this war is in the heroic attitude of mind, which forgets to complain, declines to whimper. Out upon the faultfinder! Our every hour is jeweled with a joy, and blessings are at our doors beyond that of any people in the whole wide world."

Secretary Hall's Report.

In order that a full expression of the wishes of members might be secured as to the time favored for holding the annual meeting of the association, your secretary was instructed at the Cleveland convention to submit the question to a postal card vote. Over 260 replies were received, representing a substantial majority of the membership, favoring a permanent meeting date between June 20 and June 30. Accordingly the fourth Wednesday in June and two following days were announced as the time of holding the fortieth anniversary.

Your secretary is pleased to report a more prompt response from members to the exhortation contained in the announcement of this convention, and to state further that the registration in the badge book for 1915 is the largest ever published with the exception of the years 1906 and 1913; also, the amount of cash turned over to the treasurer is the largest during the same period with the exception of 1913. Four hundred and twenty-six names appear in the badge book for this year, and a leaf insert containing others received too late for publication, has been printed for use of members, thus bringing the total membership on June 15 to 435; $3,130.90 was sent to the treasurer up to June 3.

In 1906, when the membership fee was $3, the unusual registration was due to the enthusiasm of the Texas nurserymen in rallying local residents to join the association when the annual meeting was held in Dallas. It was at this meeting that the dues were raised from $3 to $5. The increased registration in 1913 was due to the campaign carried on by Mr. Hutchison. This year between 60 and 70 new members have been enrolled, much of which is due to the work of the membership committee under the leadership of Will B. Munson.

But there have been between 60 and 70 failures to renew, and some of you will at once wonder how, in view of this, we reconcile the statement of a larger badge book registration this year. This loss, however, is largely made up by the new members. The explanation for the larger list of names published in the annual proceedings of last year is that the local nurserymen at Cleveland brought in eleven new members, and nine others also registered. Then, when your secretary got home, a further active canvass of delinquent members was commenced and nineteen of these responded favorably, two new members being secured by correspondence, bringing the registration to 477.

1907...	2,867.80	1912...	2,747.70
1908...	2,883.60	1913...	3,314.15
1909...	2,786.30	1914...	3,077.15

Hawthorns.

Hawthorns (crataegus) have been in flower in the Arboretum during the last two or three weeks, and others will flower in succession until nearly the first of July; on some of the species the fruit ripens in August and on others as late as November; and in a collection of these trees and shrubs there is much beauty of flower and fruit to be seen during more than half the year. The genus is more largely represented in species and in the number of individuals in eastern North America than in other parts of the world; a few species are found in the Rocky Mountain region and in the Pacific states; there is a single species in Japan, and less than twenty in all continental Asia. There are, however, several species in southwestern, southern and central Europe and two species in western Europe. Before 1900, when the study of American hawthorns was begun seriously at the Arboretum, little was known about the American species which had been singularly neglected by American botanists and American gardeners. Several species, however, had reached Europe at the time when European plant collectors were sent to America, and a few American species had been described by European botanists from plants cultivated in European gardens. Twenty years ago plants raised from seeds collected principally in Missouri and Arkansas in 1880 began to flower in the Arboretum and could not be referred to any of the species which had been previously described. This led to a systematic study of the wild plants in many parts of the country, and to the bringing together here of a large amount of material. During the last fifteen years many species have been described at the Arboretum by authors working independently, and Mr. Dawson has sown the seeds of 3306 hawthorns gathered in the United States from wild plants. It cannot be said, however, that this investigation has been more than commenced and there are still great regions in the United States where hawthorns are known to exist which have not yet been worked critically with reference to this genus. Some of the plants which these seeds sown at the Arboretum have produced have been arranged on the eastern slope of Peter's Hill and others have been widely distributed in this country and Europe. There is a large collection also of hawthorns mainly obtained at the Arboretum in the parks of Rochester, N. Y., and there is one large Arboretum collection in England and another in France. In a few years, therefore, there will be a good opportunity for a comparative study of these plants from a botanical and horticultural standpoint, for last year some three hundred and fifty different species flowered on Peter's Hill and probably this year a still larger number will produce flowers and fruits there. Of the species which have grown to a large size in the Arboretum and have proved themselves desirable garden plants may be mentioned Crataegus Arnoldiana, C. mollis, C. arkansana, and C. submollis. These belong to the Molles group, in which the species are trees with wide heads, large early flowers and large, usually brilliant scarlet fruits. A large plant of C. coccinioides in the old crataegus collection, between the shrub collection and the Parkway and near the Forest Hills entrance, has itself shown this year the decorative value of an American hawthorn. It is a round-headed tree from the neighborhood of St. Louis with large flowers in very compact, nearly globose clusters and large round fruit ripening in the early autumn. In this old collection are other plants which are now large enough to show their value for the decoration of parks and gardens; from among them attention is called to C. Crus-galli, the cockspur thorn, which has perhaps been more generally cultivated than any other American species and is the type of one of the most distinct of the groups into which the genus is divided; C. nitida, a flat-topped tree with widespreading branches and narrow lustrous leaves. Although the flowers and fruits are comparatively small, their abundance, the lustre of the leaves, and the habit of the tree make it one of the handsomest of the thorns which can be successfully cultivated in this climate. C. pruinosa, C. aprica and C. succulenta are well represented here and are good examples of three large and distinct groups. C. pruinosa is a small tree with smooth bluish green leaves, large flowers made conspicuous by the large rose-colored anthers of the twenty stamens, and globose fruits, bright green and covered with a glaucous bloom when fully grown, and turning scarlet late in the season. In all eastern North America there are few handsomer thorns. C. aprica is interesting as one of the few hardy representatives of the Flavae group which is entirely confined to the southeastern states with a few representatives ascending into the valleys of the southern Appalachian mountains. It is not one of the handsomest species of the group, for the flowers are not so large as those of many others, and the anthers of the ten stamens are yellow. C. succulenta is a showy representative of the tomentosae group, which is one of the largest of the northern groups and is specially beautiful in autumn when the branches are covered with large clusters of drooping scarlet translucent fruits. Two black-fruited species are interesting in the old collection, C. Douglasii from Washington and Oregon, and C. rivularis from the region between the Rocky Mountains and the Sierra Nevada. Many species in the new collection on Peter's Hill are already large enough to show their character and value, especially those in the intricate group. Nearly all the species in this group are small shrubs of the northern and middle states with large flowers, yellow or rose-colored anthers, and large, showy, late-ripening fruits. Long entirely overlooked by American botanists, this group contains some of the most beautiful garden plants to be found among North American shrubs. Among foreign species the earliest to flower in the Arboretum is Crataegus nigra, a tree from eastern Europe, with large flowers and early-ripening black fruit. There is a large specimen in the old collection near the southern end of the willow collection. The two species of western Europe, C. oxycantha and C. monogyna, and many varieties are, of course, established in the Arboretum, where C. orientalis from southeastern Europe, with deeply divided silvery leaves, large flowers and orange and red fruit is a plant which deserves the attention of all lovers of hardy trees and shrubs. The most beautiful, however, of all the foreign thorns here is C. pinnatifida from eastern Siberia and northern China. The large, deeply divided and lustrous leaves make this one of the handsomest plants of the whole genus; the flowers are large and abundant, and the crimson fruits are produced in profusion. A form of this plant (var. major) with larger leaves and much larger fruit, is cultivated in orchards as a fruit tree in the neighborhood of Peking. With the exception of a few varieties of the species of western Europe with red, rose-colored or pink flowers, all hawthorns have white flowers; they are therefore less showy when in bloom than many of the crabapples, on most of which the flowers are more or less tinged with pink. The flowering period, however, is much longer and the fruit is far more beautiful than that of any of the Asiatic crabapples. As flowering plants the hawthorns are certainly less beautiful than some of the Japanese cherries, but cherry blossoms last only a few days and the fruits of the Japanese species have no ornamental value. Like many other trees and shrubs of the rose family, Crataegus suffers from the attacks of the San Jose scale, and the leaves of some species are badly disfigured by a leaf miner.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—The extensive exhibit of gladioli made by Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, is beginning to bloom at the exposition and makes one of the most attractive features on the grounds at this time.

SALEM, O.—J. E. McNeelan, receiver of the Garfield avenue greenhouse property of W. A. Cowgill, June 15, sold the property, valued at $8,000, to J. E. Bonsall, former owner, for $5,600. At the same time an injunction was granted at Youngstown by Referee in Bankruptcy Paul J. Jones, receiver in bankruptcy recently named by the federal court, against Mr. McNeelan to prevent the sale or transferral of the property.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—A tablet has been erected in memory of Robert Morris, financier of the revolution, outside the store of H. A. Dreer, Inc., 714-716 Chestnut street. The site is chosen because it was on this ground Morris planned to erect a residence calculated to surpass in magnificence any building in the land. He laid the foundations, which still are to be seen in the basement of the Dreer and other properties in the row, just before he met financial misfortune, which resulted in his being thrown in the debtors' jail.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, June 22.—Mushrooms, home grown, No. 1, 50 cents per pound; lettuce, 7½ cents per box; radishes, 75 cents to $1.00 per dozen bunches; asparagus, 50 cents per dozen bunches; celery, 12 stalks, 25 cents; cucumbers, 30 cents to 40 cents per dozen.

New York, June 22.—Cauliflower, per barrel, $1.25 to $1.50; cucumbers, 40 cents to 50 cents per dozen; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.75 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 20 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.00; lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to 35 cents; rhubarb, per dozen bunches, 25 cents to 40 cents.

Strawberries as a Market Garden Crop.

While strawberries are strictly not a market garden crop, belonging to the professional fruit-grower, no line can be drawn as a limit. The fruit growers and grain farmers only too often seriously interfere with the market gardeners by producing and marketing heavy crops of vegetables; hence it is excusable if the gardener in turn encroaches upon the fruit business. The all important point is the selling campaign, and we wish to say that in the month of June it is easier to sell nice red strawberries than green bunched onions, with the cost of producing in favor of the strawberries. Right now we are marketing fine strawberries at 15 cents per quart as fast as we can get hold of them, while radishes bring 10 cents per dozen bunches, onions the same; beets, 15 cents; spinach, 25 cents per bushel and lettuce 2 cents per lb., with slow sales. The moral is obvious. We have had a cool, dry month of May, which favored a tremendous set of fruit and now we have copious showers, too many, which help to swell the fruit and develop the last berry. We do not remember ever having seen a heavier crop. As regards varieties, we grow Bubach, Senator Dunlap, Warfield, Sample and Haverland. We have for years esteemed Warfield highly and with Senator Dunlap as a mate, there is not much more to be desired. These two look alike in the box, and as one is a perfect blossom and the other imperfect and both fine croppers they head the list. The showers we are having are an object lesson of what could be done in a dry season by mechanical watering. While we were prepared to irrigate, we will not need to now.

The one big point we wish to impress upon the prospective strawberry grower is that each year we lay the foundation for next year's crop by good culture. Our fine crop this year is the result, to a great extent, of last year's efforts. We have just closed the most successful pansy season we ever had and are now able to immediately claim the attention by offering fine strawberries; in turn we hope to offer greenhouse tomatoes the moment the strawberries are gone, etc.

MARKETMAN.

Madison, N. J.

The rose show held June 17, under the auspices of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was a great success, both in excellence and number of the exhibits and in point of attendance. There were no cash prizes, but exhibitors responded freely however. There were many fine exhibits and competition was close. A feature of the show was an illustrated lecture in the evening by Arthur Herrington, his subject being, "The Rose," and it was greatly appreciated by the audience.

In addition to the rose entries, excellent displays of sweet peas, peonies, fuchsias, delphiniums, cattleyas, etc., were made. Splendid exhibits of fruits and vegetables were also a feature. Prominent among the exhibitors who received awards were the following: Wm. Duckham, David Francis, Mrs. C. H. Stout, Robert Tyson, Emil Gruber, Chas. Barbour, Robert Francis, Mrs. Elwood Brant, John Barker and Ernest Wild.

BUSINESS CONTINUES GOOD.

Business held up during the past week. Orders for graduations continue, and June weddings are greatly helping the florist business. The so-called business depression seemingly has no effect upon Cupid, who seems to be just as busy as in former years. Roses are in fine shape and are moving well. The cuts are large, but owing to the rapid sales, are not accumulating to any extent. Carnations are also in large supply, but are not being used as fast as the roses. Peonies are still with us, and are of good quality. Sweet peas are still in good supply and finding ready sale. Lilies are becoming a drug on the market, although they are fine stock. The retailers have been busy with decorations for churches and residences and all find plenty to do.

Matthew Macnair is now building the water scene that embellishes his windows in his Broad street store during the summer months. The scene will be larger and better than ever before.

Walter A. Kelton has withdrawn from the Quality Flower Store, of Pawtucket. The business is now being conducted by J. W. Seamans alone.

Newark, N. J.

Kimmerle & Minder, 488 South Orange avenue, have now a fine three-story business building on the front of their property, and are preparing to open the corner store, which is finely situated for business, as a first-class retail store. In the growing end of the business they have seasonable stock in a fine lot of large hydrangeas in tubs that have just flowered.

May's Flower Shop, 265 South Orange avenue, seems prosperous. This store is conducted by a lady who seems to have the artistic temperament.

McLaughlin & Murphy, 181 Clinton avenue, were found busy with funeral work, and had no complaint about business.

The Broad street retailers, who are progressive men, are keeping up their business to the usual high standard.

Considering the fact that there is complaint, from various localities, of dullness in the business the florists of Newark seem to be reasonably prosperous.

BIG WEDDING DEMAND.

Trade the past week was very lively. June weddings were numerous, and there was a large amount of funeral work in demand. The high school commencement dance called for a number of corsages and hand bouquets, and the commencement exercises of several acedemies kept the florists hustling. The quality of the cut stock is very good. The weather is exceedingly cool, with a great deal of sunshine, which is very favorable for improving the quality of the flowers. Carnations are still of good size and are to be reckoned with, as they bring good returns. Roses are still in good shape and Easter lilies, as well as callas are coming in in good quantities. Peonies are past their best on account of the heavy rains recently. Orchids and lily of the valley are in good demand for weddings. Some good snapdragons are still on the market.

NOTES.

S. Hudson, orchid expert with W. J. and M. S. Vesey, is expecting the arrival of a large shipment of dendrobiums soon. He is cutting some splendid cattleyas. The other stock at the Vesey greenhouses is in good shape. A number of rose houses are being planted at present with Ophelia, Sunburst, Shawyer and Russell roses.

At the Bushing-Busch wedding, June 16, beautiful house decorations were executed by the Flick Floral Co. Quantities of huckleberry foliage were used, and standards of Easter lilies and snapdragon and hampers of golden iris combined to make a very artistic decoration.

The Frank Knecht Co. is devoting several houses to Shawyer roses this year. In several of the houses the rose stock will be carried over. They are cutting some good Easter lilies, and their carnations are still holding their own.

The Doswell Floral Co. has been busy with commencement orders the past week. At the greenhouses the force is busy planting the rose houses.

The Bradley Flower Store reports a rushing week between the June weddings, commencements and a large amount of funeral work. H. K.

DETROIT, MICH.—The Caughey-Jassman Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000. It will do a wholesale and retail seed business.

Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,
L. Buckendorf,
Norfolk, Neb.

Pansies And Their Culture.

Pansy Improvements.

There are few plants that grow that are more popular than pansies; they are favorites with all and every year there is an increased demand for the plants. The only thing against them is, that owing to our very hot and dry summers, their season of beauty is so short, but even this short season can be extended considerably by care and cultivation. The specialists are devoting a lot of time to the improvement of the various types and strains, and when we consider the many fine sorts that we now have, it would seem that so far as beautiful colorings and blends are concerned, the acme of perfection has nearly been attained. The flowers are being steadily improved in size, so that nearly all of the beautiful colors are to be found among the giant types, and the care that is being taken in the selection of the self colors, makes it reasonably sure that when the choicest seed is obtained a large percentage of the plants will come true to color. The beautiful colors among the orchid flowered and the light pink or mauve shades are increasing in numbers each year and the same can be said about the curled or ruffled varieties. The season of flowering is also being extended, giving us the new early flowering strains for greenhouse culture and the improved giant flowering types that are considerably later than the others.

Types and Strains.

There are so many beautiful types that a lover of these flowers has a hard task to select a preference, but most customers seem to select the giant flowers of the Trimardeau type, Adonis, Comet, Lord Beaconsfield, Peacock and King of the Blacks, being among the favorites.

The Cassier superb strain of five blotched are also great favorites, especially the beautiful colorings of red and brown.

The Bugnot strains are also a favorite with us, as are the curled or ruffled varieties.

As a selection of varieties we would choose the following:

Care of Seed Beds.

The seed beds must be shaded in some way, and the handiest method we have found is to make light wooden frames the size of the ordinary hot-bed sash and cover with fine muslin; these can be raised easily to give air as the seed germinates and can be removed without trouble when it becomes necessary to water the beds. The seed beds should be kept damp, but not over wet, neither should they be allowed to become dust dry.

As soon as the seed germinates and the young plants begin to appear the shading should be gradually dispensed with, excepting during the middle of very hot days, when a lath shade should take the place of the cloth, being careful that there is not any cause for close, humid conditions inside the frames.

As quickly as the young plants attain size enough to safely handle, the work of transplanting should be pushed forward without delay. It is very important that the plants get well established in their winter quarters before the cold weather commences. Well established plants will carry over winter without any trouble, but there is danger of the plants being worked up by frost if they are very small and not well rooted in the beds.

There should not be any coddling with pansies; the cold frames, with sash for covering, is all that is necessary for their winter quarters. It is best to let the frames remain open long enough for the beds to get frozen before putting on the sash. They will then remain in a firm condition all winter, but standing water in the frames from heavy rains must be guarded against. When the beds have not been well frozen up before the snow covers up the frames, the field mice give us a great deal of trouble by rooting through the beds and working up the plants. As soon as the very cold weather lets up early in the spring and the frost gets out of the beds the surface should be loosened up and all the weeds removed and every encouragement given the plants to make growth under the most natural conditions.

Summer Treatment.

Unfortunately pansies are not good hot weather plants, and if not watched carefully, quickly play out, but if the flowers are removed before they have a chance to seed, and the plants are given plenty of space, reasonable success can be obtained. Partial shade is necessary, but they will not do at all under dense shade. Pansies are also a little particular as to soil. The very best bed of summer pansies it has been my pleasure to see, was a bed where road sweepings and a liberal amount of well-rotted leaves had been used in the compost, thus insuring a moist condition at the roots all the time. This bed, with careful attention looked well until the fall.

General Culture.

The demand for cut flowers and plants of pansies makes it necessary that the up-to-date grower follow three different methods of culture. First, the summer sown stock for early spring planting; second, the winter culture for cut flowers or pans of plants in bloom; third, winter sown plants for late flowering and summer culture.

August 15-20 is the best time for sowing the seed for the early spring plants and those for winter flowering. Make up the seed beds in the outdoor frames, first loosening up and pulverizing the soil and adding a liberal amount of well-rotted manure and fresh, clean, sharp sand to well lighten it up; then be sure the bed is made even, with a slight slope to the front of the frame, so that there will not be any danger of one part of the seed bed getting wetter than the other. Before sowing the seed press the surface of the bed firmly with a flat tamper, after which it will be ready to sow the seed.

One of the most important points to bear in mind when undertaking this work is not to sow the seed too thick because of the danger of the plants damping off before they are large enough to transplant. It is much better to use an extra frame if necessary than it is to sow thickly. Scatter the seed thinly over the bed, then cover lightly with fine, sifted soil, pressing it down firmly; afterwards watering it in carefully through a fine sprinkler so as not to disturb the seed or the fine soil covering.

Spring and Summer Flowers.

The seed for this purpose should be sown in flats early in January and placed on a shelf near the light, and as the seed germinates and the plants become large enough for transplanting, this part of the work should be attended to, transplanting in shallow flats, setting the flats on shelves near the light, and as quickly as the weather conditions will permit (the latter part of March or early in April) the plants should be planted about four inches apart in a cold frame, using a live, light soil with a liberal amount of well-rotted manure mixed through it. With the usual attention to the care of watering and airing, these plants will be in fine bloom by the middle of May and make the best stock for summer flowering.

Culture for Winter Bloom.

The necessary requirements for a good supply of pansy flowers during the winter months are a light house, where a low temperature can be maintained and other conditions similar to that which is necessary for the culture of violets. Select the best of the fall transplanted plants, planting them into the benches during October or November six by six inches apart and treat the same as violets, giving particular attention to maintaining a low, even temperature and keeping the plants free of insects. For flowering plants in pans or pots, it is best to carry some plants in flats, so that they can be placed on shelves, and as the buds and flowers appear, potted up ready for sale. Pansy plants for winter culture require a live soil, but overfeeding will cause the plants to make heavy foliage at the expense of fine flowers.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Washington's Retail Stores.

The national capital is indeed a beautiful city. The magnificent public buildings, the elegant private residences of its men of wealth, its wide streets and avenues, lined on both sides with handsome trees, the many monuments to national heroes, commemorative of deeds of valor, Arlington's great city of the dead, Rock Creek park, and a thousand and one other attractions, help to make Washington in many respects the first city in the land. The inhabitants living in such surroundings demand something in keeping with their cultivated tastes. Flowers appeal to them, their refining influence being essential to the every day life of the greater part of the people there.

To meet this demand, there are a number of first class cut flower stores, some of them quite pretentious, with their show windows filled with a wealth of bloom showing considerable art in their arrangement. That of the Messrs. Gude Brothers on F street is perhaps the largest, with a floor space 28x198 feet. There are two large show windows, which at the time of our visit—June 2—were nicely decorated, the color scheme in one being yellow, with yellow roses and coreopsis in gilt baskets and vases; the other side pink, with large and small baskets arranged principally with roses. Along the walls in the store were palms and ferns and many vases of peonies, then in their prime. The large flower case across the store, about seventy-five feet from the front, contained quantities of cut flowers; a number of vases were filled with Radiance roses, which are popular here. In front of the case is a large table or counter, in which are placed vases of roses from the case for inspection and for putting up boxes of cut flowers. A customers' card case and desk occupies the front end. In the rear of the flower case is the work room, where most of the making up is done; it is very commodious. Still farther back is a large greenhouse, underneath which there is space for motor cars, of which the firm has a battery of seven. They can be loaded here safe from the weather. The clerical force for this business numbers 30 persons, which includes the staff of their wholesale business of considerable volume, all of which is conducted under the same roof. Wm. F. Gude is superintendent of the store, while his brother Adolph manages over three hundred thousand feet of glass, and considering the quantity grown, turns out a splendid grade of stock.

In J. H. Small & Sons' handsome store, a feature was the windows decorated with silvered southern smilax. This had been prepared and used for a silver wedding anniversary, an idea that could be profitably employed by many of the trade.

Quite expensive corner stores are occupied by a number of the trade.

Blackistone's at 14th and H streets, is all show windows on both streets, and keeps them well and artistically filled with choice salable flowers. A decorative feature was a large gilt eagle made of separate leaves of the leucothoe spray for the neck, breast and small wing feathers, while the large pinions were of small cycas leaves. The head was carved from plaster of Paris. It stands with outspread wings about three feet across, is very well proportioned, and makes an attractive feature to the store. A half-story balcony affords storage and a place for display of baskets, the railing being lined with them; also choice made up magnolia wreaths.

Another conspicuous corner store is that of George Shaffer, at 15th and I streets. Like Blackistone's his front on both streets is deep show windows kept well filled with the choice of the market. A feature was two large pieces of Fungii rosettes about one foot in diameter, which appeared to be growing from cork bark. A decorated balcony was also a feature here.

Marche & Co.'s store, 14th and H streets, is also all windows, which presented a very showy appearance. Some splendid peonies were headliners here.

The Washington Floral Co. have a commodious store at 14th and G streets, and appear well satisfied with the business. Roy Harper, a "Philadelphia boy," is manager here.

George H. Cooke's fine store on Connecticut avenue is up-to-date in every respect, and caters to the first class trade that reside in the magnificent residences of that section of the city.

In the always busy store of Fred Cramer on F street, there was a great show of stocks; bedding plants were featured, a large assortment being carried in the large greenhouse in the rear and an enticing display made on the pavement in front of the store. A low priced business is the feature of this store, the motto being many sales and small profiits. A large stock of made up magnolia wreaths is always on hand, those for cemetery decoration being made up with artificial waxed roses, carnations and sweet peas. Mr. Cramer is a great believer in printer's ink, and in some of his special sales has turned a wonderful lot of stock.

O. A. C. Oehmler, a graduate of the Gude establishment, has a nice shop on 14th street. A half-story balcony furnishes additional room, and on the railing is a good display space for baskets and made-up wreaths, etc. Turtles in a water pool in one window had prominent politicians' names on their backs, and attracted considerable attention.

There is the large J. R. Freeman store; also Mayberry's, and a number of other stores which do quite a business, as well as the market stands, where a large trade is done. The heavy rain handicaped traveling, so that the ground was not fully covered, but enough was seen to show that the business is in the hands of live men, who are up-to-date and compare well with their brothers in other large cities. Racine Floral Co.'s New Store.

The Racine Floral Co.'s new store at Racine, Wis., is one of the prettiest and most conveniently arranged retail establishments in the state. The new building was completed last December at a cost of $13,000. It is three stories high and the main floor is devoted to the store proper with the basement equipped for a work and store room and the remaining two floors are used for business offices. The entire structure was built along modern lines and to give one a little idea how well the scheme was carried out, all the waste is thrown into a little chute directly back of the counter and drops into a fireplace at the bottom of the chimney and not into the boiler proper. Each story has a separate fireplace in the chimney and this is one of the cleverest ideas that any one ever had the pleasure to find in a retail store. The Kerner Incinerator Co., Milwaukee, Wis., have applied for a patent on the new equipment and any one intending to build a new place would do well to investigate it. The color scheme of the entire store is carried out in the old iron gray effect and taken all in all the proprietors have every reason to feel proud of their new establishment and the conservatory that adjoins it. R. E. Miller and wife, the proprietors, have been engaged in business here for the past six years and have been very successful, which is due chiefly to the fact that they have both attended strictly to business at all times.

Funeral Designs by H. G. Eyres.

The accompanying illustration shows six floral pieces designed by H. G. Eyres, 13 North Pearl street, Albany, N. Y., for the funeral of Patrick J. McArdle, a prominent citizen and business man of that city, who died May 9, 1915.

The large cross in the center of the group is seven feet high, and is of lily of the valley and cattleyas, with American Beauty roses adorning the base. The standing heart is of Milady roses, the standing wreath of carnations and the other wreath of Killarney roses.

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Seasonable Requirements.

At this season the stock should be growing on nicely, the spring potting being completed and the houses cleaned up in most establishments by the middle of June, the exception being found in those that do a late shipping business, which sometimes prevents the annual clean-up from being accomplished before July 1. So cool a spring as that we are just completing naturally means that some artificial heat has been needed to keep the stock in condition and to dry up unnecessary moisture at night, for a drop in temperature of 25 to 30 degrees at night, such as has not been infrequent this season, requires a little fire heat to counteract it.

Syringing and watering are best attended to before noon, so long as the weather stays cool, thus giving the foliage a chance to dry off, but during the hot and dry periods that usually come with July, syringing may well be done later in the day, and at whatever time this work may be done the operation should be thorough, throwing the spray both under and over the foliage, for it is not unusual to find red spiders on the upper surface of palm leaves when the syringing has been carelessly done. Red spider, as every grower knows, will succumb to water properly and forcibly applied, but thrips are not easy to overcome with that treatment alone, and usually require nicotine in some form to dislodge them.

The various scale insects have to be treated with soap solutions, and it is owing to this fact that various soaps that contain more or less nicotine are found useful to the palm grower, being applied either as a dip or a spray, such preparations having more or less effect against the numerous insects that are likely to appear from time to time. It is sometimes hard to tell where an attack of insects originated, but it is within the experience of many palm growers to see scale appear on the stem and first leaf of a seedling palm, the source of infection having been insect-infested seed, and the young insects having fastened themselves upon the first growth from the seed. Such cases may not be common, but nevertheless, are not easy to combat, for the insects get a good start before they are noticed, and some of them are readily overlooked that are located near the surface of the soil.

Shading is one of the essentials in palm growing at this season, but is frequently overdone, successive coats of the shading material being applied until a sort of twilight gloom is seen in the houses. This practice produces a long-stemmed and soft growth that does not stand up very well when the plants are sent out, and therefore cannot be recommended. Give a sufficient shade to prevent burning by means of defective glass, and to keep the temperature within reasonable bounds, but allow sufficient light to keep the plants in good, serviceable condition.

Of the many shading materials that may be used upon the glass, whitewash is the cheapest in first cost, but is also one of the most injurious to the paint and putty, and for this reason the majority of growers use preparations of white lead and naphtha, or else whiting and kerosene with enough linseed oil to make it hold to the glass until the autumn, an old but satisfactory formula for the latter being as follows: Six pounds of whiting, one gill of linseed oil and two gallons of kerosene, this mixture being thoroughly stirred up and kept stirred during the time of application. If a light shading is required the mixture may be applied with a spray pump or syringe, but if an even coat is desired it is better to put it on with a whitewash brush.

During the spring and summer months is the time that palm seeds are received from the importers, but owing to the war and the consequent irregularity of shipments from abroad it will no doubt be somewhat uncertain as to the arrival of such stock, and those who have been unable to prepare for such a condition beforehand may find themselves short of young stock for next season, the experience of last season with kentia seeds being very likely to be repeated, when the long delays in shipping were the cause of serious loss to the purchasers of such seeds.

RACINE FLORAL CO.'S NEW STORE, RACINE, WIS.

Under the most favorable conditions kentia seeds have a long voyage from the South Pacific to the American consumer, and unless they are carefully packed are quite liable to heat in the cases, and thus to lower the percentage of germination much below the normal and in addition to this the seeds are seldom selected as to their maturity at the time of picking, these various items being all to the disadvantage of the ultimate consumer. Seeds of Cocos Weddelliana being usually of South American origin, are not so long in transit, and properly packed by the shipper are more likely to arrive in good condition. The same conditions may be said to apply to Areca lutescens, such stock being sent from Brazil. The latter seed, however, is not a very good keeper, and when dried out too much in transit seldom germinates satisfactorily. A fairly satisfactory method of testing the quality of many palm seeds is to empty a given number of the seeds into a pail of water and then to count the seeds that float, the floaters being seldom of much value, being either immature or else too much dried out to germinate.

But under any circumstances, palm seeds should not be allowed to lie around after their arrival, but should be planted in rather light and open soil, kept moist and given heat enough to maintain 65 to 70 degrees at night.

In handling young palms in 3-inch pots and upward it is a frequent practice, and a very good one, to put enough coal ashes or sand on the bench to allow the pots to be plunged half their depth in that medium, thus allowing the plants to be syringed forcibly without danger of knocking them over, for to produce shapely and stocky plants it is necessary to space them out to some extent on the bench. The larger plants will also have been spaced out at the time of repotting, and if they are set over from time to time and turned around in order to keep the stems erect, the individual plants will not only be better, but the batch as a whole will prove more attractive to a prospective buyer.

American Sweet Pea Society.

In last week's issue we published a full account of this exposition by our San Francisco representative and now take pleasure in supplementing his report with notes by the manager of the show. President Morse, of the American Sweet Pea Society, commenting on the show, says: "We had a wonderful show which lasted three days. On Friday the exposition officials recognized the occasion and designated the day as 'Sweet Pea Day,' sending Commissioner Chas. Vogelsang, who, in a neat speech presented the president with a bronze plaque in commemoration of the event. They also furnished a brass band of 40 pieces and gave us every attention. Papers were read by F. G. Cuthbertson and Mrs. Scannavina, president of the State Floral Society. The show was extremely popular and thousands of people visited it, packing the aisles from morning until 10 o'clock at night on each of the three days. I doubt if a more successful show was ever held in California. Nothing but sweet peas were shown and Mr. Cuthbertson's notes report the classes and winners very accurately."

MANAGER CUTHBERTSON'S NOTES.

The flower show of the American Sweet Pea Society was successfully opened, June 11, in magnificent weather, at the Palace of Horticulture, Panama-Pacific exposition. The management had to change the date hurriedly twice on account of the weather and it says much for the enthusiasm of the California growers that such a show was attained. The vestibule of the Palace of Horticulture was filled to overflowing with magnificent sweet pea blossoms. Perhaps the greatest feature of the show was the floral designs, which reflected great credit on the local florists.

During the afternoon Commissioner Voglesang, representing the president of the exposition, presented L. L. Morse, president of the American Sweet Pea Society, with a bronze plaque. President Morse replied and expressed his pleasure at being able to hold such an exhibition at the Panama-Pacific exposition. During the afternoon the show was thronged with visitors and from all accounts, the California sweet pea show has come to stay.

The judges for the gardeners and amateur classes were: Fred H. Howard, of Howard & Smith, nurserymen, Los Angeles, Calif.; Emory E. Smith, of Emery & Smith, San Francisco, Calif.; John McLaren, superintendent of parks, San Francisco. The decorative classes were judged by G. A. Dennison, chief of horticulture, Panama-Pacific exposition. Following are the prizes awarded:

Championship of California—This was won by David Bassett, gardener for Louis Stern, Menlo Park, Calif., with well grown examples of Elfrida Pearson, Illuminator, Margaret Atlee, King Edward Spencer, New Margaret Madison, Nubian, King White and Mrs. Cuthbertson. The flowers showed high culture and were excellent in size and form. The second prize went to Mrs. R. Greig, Berkeley, Calif., whose blossoms were very nice examples, but not so well grown as the first prize lot. The third prize went to Mrs. R. P. Reed, San Francisco, Calif., who showed nice clean flowers. The competition in this class was very keen and the judges were given considerable work to arrive at their decision. This was the "star" class of the exhibition.

Class 2—The prize for this class was donated by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., for the finest 12 vases of Spencer sweet peas in 12 distinct varieties to include at least three of the following: Burpee's Florence Nightingale, King White, Orchid, Wedgwood, Illuminator, Mrs. Routzahn. Unfortunately there was only one entrant for this class, but the flowers were deserving of the first prize awarded. This went to Emile Ralston, San Jose, Calif.

Class 3—For six vases Spencer sweet peas, prizes donated by Peter Henderson & Co., New York. E. A. Richards, of Berkeley, Calif., carried off first prize, with nice, clean, well-grown Mrs. Cuthbertson, New Margaret Madison, King White, Nubian, Margaret Atlee and King Edward Spencer. This was one of the cleanest looking displays at the exhibition. The second prize was won by S. M. Spaulding, Menlo Park, Calif., with very fair examples. The third prize was awarded Joe Penicka, Stanford University, Calif., with good flowers, but stems rather short.

Class 4—For the best vase of lavender Spencer sweet peas, prizes donated by the American Sweet Pea Society. S. M. Spaulding carried off first prize, with good examples of Asta Ohn. The competition in this class was extremely keen. Roy L. Donley, Berkeley, Calif., was a close second, with fine flowers.

Class 5—For best vase of pink Spencer sweet peas, prizes donated by Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy, Calif. David Bassett won first prize with a splendid vase of Elfrida Pearson. Mrs. T. Sachau, San Leandro, Calif., was a close second with a delightful example of New Miriam Beaver.

Class 6—Open to all, prizes donated by Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy, Calif. Roy L. Donley carried off first prize with a good vase of King White, as the best vase of white Spencer. Emile Ralston was a close second, also with a vase of King White.

Class 10—For the best vase of any grandiflora sweet pea, mixed included. The competition was not at all keen in this class and was found to be the only grandiflora sweet pea exhibit in the show. The first prize was won by John Smith, of Berkeley, Calif. The second prize was awarded E. F. Delger, Menlo Park, Calif.

Class 12—For cup presented by the Braslan Seed Growers Co., San Jose, Calif. David Bassett was again winner with a magnificent setting. Rosabelle and Mrs. C. W. Breadmore were especially fine.

Class 13—For six vases Spencer sweet peas, for the silver medal of the American Sweet Pea Society. Roy L. Donley won first honors with well grown Margaret Madison, Elfrida Pearson, Sunproof Crimson, Illuminator, King White and Margaret Atlee. Mrs. Annie Jennings, Menlo Park, Calif., carried off the second prize with splendid examples, in which Stirling Stent was especially fine.

Class 14—For the best vase of bicolor sweet peas. The prize was carried off by John Smith with a good vase of Loyalty. Had the judges been strict, do not think this variety should have been considered a "bicolor," and in view of the strong competition Mr. Smith should be considered fortunate.

Class 15—For best vase of red Spencer sweet peas. The first prize was won by Mrs. T. Sachau with well grown King Edward Spencer.

Class 16—For best vase of pink Spencer sweet peas. This prize was won by John Smith with a splendid bunch of Mrs. Hugh Dickson.

Class 17—For best vase of cream Spencer sweet peas. The prize was awarded Mrs. T. Sachau with good examples of Margaret Atlee.

Class 18—For best vase of Spencer sweet peas in the exhibition. The prize was again awarded to John Smith.

Class 19—For the most gracefully arranged vase of sweet peas, mixed colors. The prize was won by Miss Evelyn McLean, San Francisco, Calif., with a very pleasing and dainty combination of New Margaret Madison and New Miriam Beaver. In this display no foliage was used outside of a few sprays of sweet peas. The competition in this class was very keen and the exhibits attracted a great deal of attention during the afternoon.

Class 20—For the best display of sweet peas arranged on tabling 3x6 feet, for prize donated by G. A. Dennison, chief of horticulture, brought forth a fine display. The honor was carried off by the Lynch Nursery Co., Menlo Park, Calif., who had a grand lot of flowers, all fine, fresh colors.

Class 23—The president's prize, a handsome silver cup. There were four entries for the president's cup and all were highly meritorious. The prize was awarded to the Francis Floral Co., San Francisco, Calif., for a jeweled bridal parasol design. The design stood 10 feet high and each section of the parasol was a different color of Spencer sweet peas. The design was certainly unique, attractive and skillfully carried out. The other designs were all deserving of high praise and were as follows:

Pelicano, Rossi & Co., San Francisco, Calif., exhibited a design representing "Liberty Bell," standing about 5 feet 6 inches high and worked in white Spencer, Helen Lewis, King Edward Spencer and Constance Oliver.

Frank R. Clark, of the Blossom Shop, showed a very handsome and original design representing the Tower of Jewels at the Panama-Pacific exposition. Mr. Clark deserves high commendation for his work and the judges had great difficulty in passing up his exhibit.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee, San Francisco, Calif., exhibited a piece covering about 50 square feet, representing the Horn of Plenty. This, too, was a very high-class piece of work and Mrs. Darbee is to be congratulated on her splendid effort.

Class 24—In the class open to seed growers and seedsmen, C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., put up a magnificent collection, covering 200 square feet and representing 200 varieties of Spencer sweet peas. The display was the best ever seen on the coast and perhaps the finest ever put up in America. New Miriam Beaver occupied the center of the exhibit and showed off to splendid advantage against the black velvet background. Countess Spencer and Margaret Atlee made the two corner posts for the display and both were finely shown. The new Morse variety, Scintillator, a cream ground Aurora, aroused great interest. The jury recommended that an award of merit be given to this variety.

To add interest to their exhibit Morse & Co. showed a small vase of the old original blue and purple sweet pea, then to represent a stage further advanced, a vase of grandifloras and a vase of Giant Spencers, cut from their exposition garden, having stems 25 inches long and large, beautiful blossoms. The exhibit was awarded the gold medal of the British National Sweet Pea Society and was recommended by the jury of awards for a medal of honor from the exposition.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., were awarded the silver medal, presented by the British National Sweet Pea Society, for their splendid display, covering 100 square feet. The varieties were all well grown and nicely set up by Mr. Ellings, of the Lynch Nursery Co., Menlo Park, Calif. The center portion of the exhibit was entirely given over to the Burpee magnificent novelty, Fiery Cross, and which attracted a tremendous amount of attention all day on account of its brilliant color. The jury of the Panama-Pacific exposition recommended that a gold medal be awarded W. Atlee Burpee & Co. for their exhibit. The collection included about fifty of their leading novelties and especially fine vases of Margaret Atlee, Thomas Stevenson, Helen Grosvenor, King Manuel, Stirling Stent and King Edward Spencer. Messrs. Burpee & Co. are to be congratulated on the spirit they showed in arranging for this exhibition at so great a distance from Philadelphia. An award of merit was voted for Fiery Cross.

The L. D. Waller Seed Co., Guadaloupe, Calif., put up a very fine exhibit. In spite of the long distance which the flowers had to travel, they arrived at the show in fine condition, thanks to excellent packing. Mr. Waller was present in person to set them up, and the flowers in arrangement did him every credit. The silver gilt medal awarded was well deserved.

Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy, Calif., exhibited a collection of 50 varieties, standard sorts, but the flowers were not as fresh as Mr. Waller's.

Ant. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Calif., showed a collection of early flowering Spencers and general Spencers, gathered from his exhibit in the gardens of the Panama-Pacific exposition. The varieties of early flowering Spencers were very attractive.

Cleveland Fall Show.

That the Cleveland Florists' Club works as a unit and believes in supporting financially things that the club decides to do, was thoroughly demonstrated last week when the committee in charge of the Cleveland flower show started to raise the guarantee fund necessary to back their show. June 15 was decided upon by the committee, as the day to put on their well thought out campaign. As a result of this day's work of five teams of five men a total of about $7,000 was reported that evening and additional amounts have come in during the past few days, increasing the total to $7,500, which is $1,500 more than was necessary to raise. The Ohio Horticultural Society subscribed one-half of the guarantee, making the total of $12,000.

The official floor plan of the flower show was mailed to prospective exhibitors a few days ago. The arrangement of trade displays is a very good one, as they are distributed along the four walls of the building. Because of the fact that there are no balconies in the Coliseum, all of the spaces are good ones. The committee in charge anticipate a good representation of principal manufacturers and dealers in supplies because of the large number of applications they have had during the first few days since the floor plan was sent out. That this show is going to be one of national importance, and that the attendance of growers from all portions of the country will be large, is an assured fact according to the general talk among those who know. The dates settled upon are November 10-14. GEORGE BATE,
Chairman Publicity Committee.

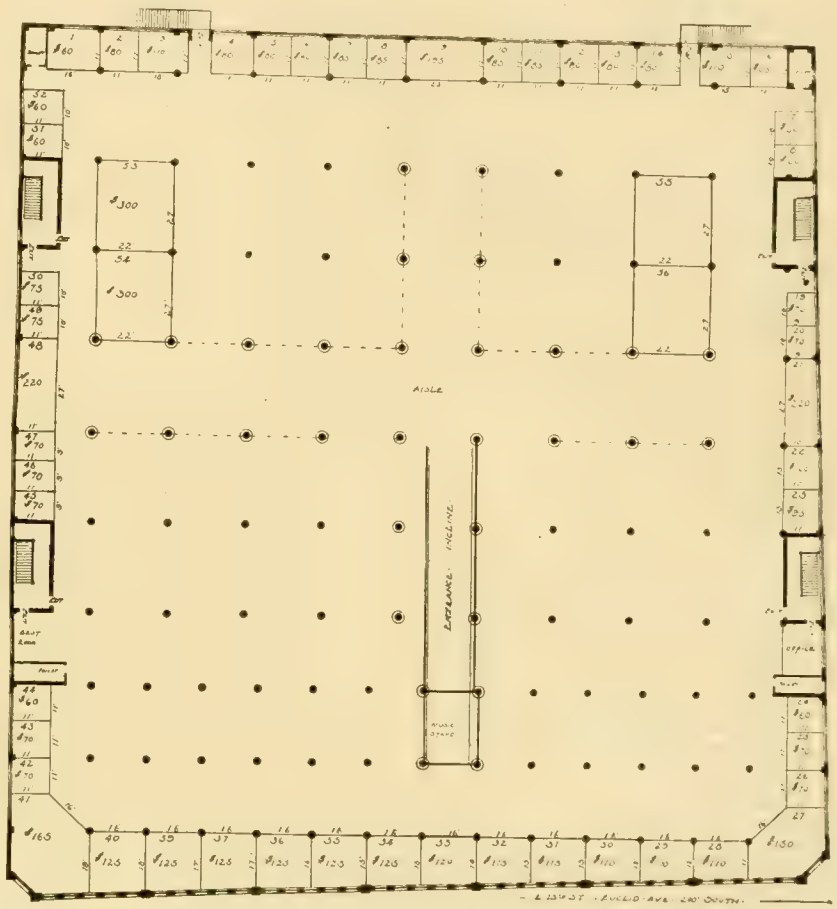
Rochester Flower Show.

Rochester, N. Y., is arranging for an elaborate flower show to be held August 30 to September 11. It is to be held under the auspices of the Rochester exposition, declared to be the biggest municipal exposition in the United States, which is now in its eighth year, and is attended annually by upward of 250,000 people. This is the first year of the flower show, and if it meets with the same success as have the other departments of the exposition, the Rochester flower show will soon be recognized as a national event.

The exposition includes many of the best features to be found at big state fairs and is attended by people from all over the country. Co-operating with the management of the exposition is a committee of five members of the Rochester Florists' Association, which has an enviable record for the artistic nature of its flower shows. The members of the committee are George B. Hart, chairman, who is the president of the local Florists' Association; Charles H. Vick, of James Vick's Sons; Harry E. Bates, of Lord & Burnham Co.; Fernando J. Keller, of J. B. Keller's Sons, and A. H. Salter, of Salter Brothers. Until last year, Mr. Vick was superintendent of the flower show at the New York state fair at Syracuse, and is well known to growers and florists everywhere. This year he is devoting his entire energy to the Rochester flower show.

It is the hope of the committee to make Rochester the meeting place for the grower and the florist, the seedsman and the importer. As an inducement for the big growers and seedsmen to exhibit their plants, flowers and other products at Rochester, the committee makes the very attractive proposition of free space for all exhibitors. There is to be absolutely no charge of any kind for space or entry fees.

One of the best buildings at Exposition park, which is owned by the municipality, has been assigned to the flower show. It contains upward of 20,000 square feet of unobstructed floor space, with high skylight roof, well equipped with water and sewer outlets; in fact, having been constructed specially for exhibition purposes, it is provided with every convenience, and those who go to Rochester will undoubtedly find it to be the most ideally adapted hall for a flower show that they have yet encountered.



CLEVELAND FLOWER SHOW OFFICIAL FLOOR PLAN.

Not only does the committee purpose to exert every effort to have the biggest growers in the country make exhibits, but they also intend to see that the retail florists and others interested in the trade go to Rochester. It is believed that the Rochester show will furnish a splendid opportunity for business, bringing the growers and retailers together to get acquainted.

The city of Rochester has a population of 250,000, with another three-quarters of a million within a radius of 50 miles. With this immense population and with the personal invitations to be sent out to the florists of all the eastern states, there will undoubtedly be a big attendance. Not only the interests which appeal to the growers directly, but also to their families, will be an extra inducement to visit the Rochester show. The exposition's motto is "entertaining, educational and inspirational." Its horse show is second to none in the country. The best known stables in the country exhibit their blue ribbon horses. The Art Loan exhibit brings together oil paintings and water colors by the famous artists of America. The display of fruits and vegetables is unrivaled in this country. The central location of the city, with its numerous railroads, affords excellent facilities for easy access; its excellent park system, its beautiful drives, its fine residential sections, with their lawns, shrubbery and planting, will attract growers both private and commercial, as well as the trade in general.

PRICES BELOW NORMAL IN ALL LINES.

Aside from the demand for roses, business in every line was far below normal during the past week. As a rule the public-school graduations and other June functions have created a demand for flowers, but since flowers have been forbidden at these graduations, the sale has greatly decreased. Harvard "class day," which was held June 22, also was rather a disappointment to growers. Dark red flowers usually brought good figures, but carnations brought only $1 to $1.50 per 100 and roses were not affected to any great degree over the prices of the whole week. The prices on roses ranged from $1.50 to $16 per 100, the demand being for the shorter stemmed grades. Hadley, Russell, Ophelia and Wards were the leaders. Carnations moved slowly at from 75 cents per 100 to $2 per 100 on extra fancy stock. Outdoor sweet peas have become more plentiful, 35 cents and 50 cents per 100 being realized for them. There is a large quantity of outdoor bachelor buttons being shipped to the markets and prices are very poor, 25 cents per 100 being about the best figure for the average stock. Quite an amount of herbaceous novelties are being marketed, but the demand seems to be very light.

June 28.—Business is exceptionally quiet. Prices on every line have droped and the growers who were able to completely dispose of their stocks considered themselves fortunate as the markets are unusually devoid of buyers.

NOTES.

Frank Dolansky, Lynn, Mass., is cutting some very fine Cattleya Dowiana as well as C. Gaskelliana and C. Mossiæ. His gardenias are also of very fine quality. His retail store at Lynn is still doing very well after a prosperous winter.

Maurice August, proprietor of the Dudley Street Flower Stand, married Miss T. Levy of Dorchester, Sunday, June 27. The couple have gone to New York for a short honeymoon.

John Barr, South Natick, Mass., purchased a new six cylinder Chalmers motor car. He is very much pleased with it and will spend his summer touring Massachusetts.

The Boston Flower Exchange and The Boston Co-operative Flower Market will close at 12 o'clock noon on Saturdays during July and August.

Joseph Sloan will leave Boston, July 5, for Roland Park, N. H., where he will spend his vacation after a very strenuous season's business.

W. C. Ward, East Milton, Mass., has retired from business and is offering his place for sale. F. L. W.

MARKET ABSOLUTELY FLAT.

The market may now be considered as being absolutely "flat" here in this city, and we may say that business has left us for good for the remainder of the summer. With all the June weddings and commencements now over, we have nothing in particular to look forward to until fall, excepting the usual amount of funeral work. The hot spell, which we experienced last April, advanced the state of carnation plants so much that for this reason, together with the hot sun, the blooms have become very small and dry, and a few more weeks will probably finish the season for them. Roses, too, are far below their usual standard, and the cool nights have caused quite an amount of mildew to settle on the foliage of the plants. In spite of this, roses are now bringing much better returns than they have for the past few months. American Beauties, with some growers, are off crop for the summer months. Outdoor sweet peas are seen quite often, and some of the stock is really excellent, and can hardly be improved upon. Gladioli are plentiful and good. Lilies and lily of the valley continue to be as scarce as ever. Outdoor stock, such as coreopsis, larkspur, delphinium and candytuft are in evidence, and find fair sales. Local ferns of good quality are being handled, and this brings the price down considerably on them. The supply of green goods is ample, and Southern plumosus is very good.

NOTES.

J. C. Sisley has left the employ of The McCallum Company after three years of service as a salesman, and is now preparing to enter the retail business, having purchased one-half interest in Spragg's Flower Shop, Washington, Pa., which has been operated for the past few years under the management of B. W. Spragg. Mr. Sisley is very enthusiastic over the new venture, and is very well acquainted in the new territory. He and Mr. Spragg will give their undivided attention to the store, and the trade anticipates and wishes a "burning success" for them.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. C. L. Adgate, of Niles, Ohio, which occurred June 24. A summons to her son, Ross, who was then in Oil City, brought him home just ten minutes after her death. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon in the Warren cemetery.

M. Kronis has returned from a business trip to Chicago. He reports his new stand in the Ft. Wayne depot as doing very satisfactorily.

George McCallum is spending the week-end, July 4-6, on the shores of Conneaut lake.

FLORISTS PREPARE FOR SUMMER REST.

Trade during the past month has been as good as in previous years when the times were supposed to have been better. The volume of business was larger, but the individual orders were in a great many instances smaller. School commencements, weddings and other functions kept nearly all busy. The supply of stock was equal to all demands and the quality good. Roses, such as Killarney, Maryland, Taft and Ward were fine, Milady and Francis Scott Key were exceptional, and the grade of American Beauties splendid. Some exceptionally elaborate funeral work has been called for lately, where orchids, lily of the valley and American Beauties were most in demand. Flowers for school commencements were mostly bunches or loose flowers sent to the graduates' homes, very few baskets being used. Business has about ended in the greenhouses, where the season has been good, but with some unfortunate features where the refilling was necessitated of many vases in the cemeteries which were frozen by the unusual and severe frost in May, many being compelled to buy new stock to duplicate their orders.

NOTES.

S. A. Anderson has repainted the exterior of his store, 440 Main street, pure white with green trimmings being the color now. Signs and all similar features are carried out the same. Pretty boxes of ferns are placed on each window ledge, which makes the place one of the most attractive on Main street. The fire kindled in the hearts of the young couple at Anderson's, and the warbling of the birdies about a wedding in June was true to the signs and Wednesday, June 23, Miss Edith Christy and Carl Butz were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony. The marriage took place at the home of the bride in North Tonawanda, where after their honeymoon, which they are spending in the vicinity of Portage, N. Y., and Letchworth Park, they will occupy their new home in North Tonawanda. Who says the U. S. is not neutral more particularly with the florists, when this wedding was a union of Germany and England. America does not recognize allies or any other people—just Americans. The best wishes are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Butz and may their surroundings through life be like a shoe store—nothing but little boots (Butz).

GLUT PASSES AND MARKET IMPROVES.

It seems as if the worst of the glut has passed. There are still plenty of flowers, however, of every variety and for all occasions. Carnations have dwindled in size until they are rather small compared to a few weeks ago, but they meet with a fair demand at prices much the same as previously reported. Roses are in fair supply and the call for Ophelia, Russell and Milady is good. American Beauties also are in good demand. Lily of the valley sold well and the supply was better than last week. Candidum lilies are on the market and meet with a good call. Larkspur, with three and four foot stems, in both light and dark blue shades, are popular. This stock is exceptionally good value. Phlox is also good stock. Easter lilies still arrive, both short and long stems. Storage peonies are in fair demand. Sweet peas are plentiful.

NOTES.

Thousands of people are visiting the rose gardens at Wade park. It is one of the most useful adjuncts to the efforts being made in this city to educate citizens along horticultural lines and to stimulate a love for choice flowers. There are about 3,000 plants and nearly fifty varieties, all labeled so that visitors may recognize each bloom.

The Ohio Floral Co. gave away, as souvenirs, about 5,000 carnations during "carnival week," on the west side. The crowds became so bold they even robbed the ice box of fancy stock and it was with difficulty that the place was saved from being wrecked, reports Mr. Hogan.

Interest in the flower show this fall is growing, and all florists are requested to attend the next meeting of the florists' club, Monday, July 12 (note the date), to hear reports of the various committees on the show and also the coming picnic.

Geo. W. Smith had his three boys, Don, Gene and Jack, at the Emergency hospital this week, to have tonsils and adenoids removed. All three showed pluck and nerve, both before and after the operation. All are doing nicely.

J. Rupp, of the J. C. Moninger Co., greenhouse manufacturers, Chicago, accompanied by his two daughters, spent several days in this city the past week. It was both a business and pleasure trip, and was a success both ways.

One west side retailer furnished about 4,000 carnations to the People's bank, the oldest bank on the west side, during "carnival week." The bank officials passed them out to visitors.

Knoble Bros. won second prize for the best decorated auto during the parade at the carnival. Peonies and American Beauties were used throughout the decoration.

The picnic of the local florists' club will take place next month at Willough Beach. Watch these columns for definite date and list of prizes.

Al Barber, of the Jones-Russell Co., has been "under the weather" the past week. He is much improved now and back on the job.

C. B. Wilhelmy, 3610 West 25th street, is rebuilding several of his greenhouses. C. F. B.

Columbus, O.

TRADE FINISHES SIX BUSY MONTHS.

The local florist trade enters the "dead" season with little to complain of on the first half of the year. Following a very slight depression after the holidays, every special period from St. Valentine's to the close of the June wedding activity has seen a volume of business equal to, if not exceeding, the corresponding dates last year. Bedding, particularly, surpassed all expectations. It was felt that the florist trade has made a marked advance in popular attention. Funeral work and incidental cut-flower building are about all that the average florist expects for the next two months or more. A few of the more fashionable concerns, however, are making effort by attractive window displays and otherwise, to stimulate demand for gladioli, asters, sweet williams and other hardy perennials. The public is showing a tendency to turn to this class of plants as a relief from what has been the familiar features of florists' stocks during recent months. Carnations are selling at 50 cents per dozen, with some week-end bargains at the rate of three dozen for $1. Ophelia, Killarney and Rhea Reid roses bring from $1 to $1.50 per dozen.

NOTES.

The Munk Floral Company is re-arranging and redecorating its retail department, at 19 South High street, When improvements are finished this enterprising company will have very handsome quarters. Betterments are also to be made at its plant at King and Queen avenues. One of the older and small greenhouses is to be replaced with a new one, for the growing of geraniums and similar stock. The dimensions will be 22x175 feet.

T. J. Ludwig will add a nursery department to his retail florist business. Premises are being acquired for heeling in evergreens and for propagating different kinds of perennials. A new service established by this store is that of taking care of lawns, in the way of cutting grass, trimming hedges and planting.

J. M. McKellar, manager of the retail store of the Fifth Avenue Floral Company, is able to be out again after a week's illness. C. C. J.

Cincinnati.

SUMMER LULL IS ON.

The market is decidedly quiet and has taken on an early summer appearance. The supply of stock is heavy and in excess of actual needs. The rose cut is very large. Killarneys do not amount to very much, but most of the other varieties are of a pretty good quality, when the season of the year is taken into consideration. Lilies are plentiful and good. Gladioli have a pretty fair market. The call for lily of the valley and orchids has slackened greatly. The outdoor sweet pea receipts are heavy and fine in quality. Shasta daisies are now in the market. The supply of greens is ample and can easily take care of present needs.

NOTES.

C. J. Ohmer, formerly of this city and now of West Palm Beach, Fla., Mrs. Ohmer and their son, Jim, motored into this city on Monday in their Overland. They are guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gillett.

The annual meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held at Max Rudolph's home, College Hill, July 12.

Chas. H. Hoffmeister spent the middle of this week in Louisville on business on behalf of some of his clients.

C. E. Critchell has been getting some very fine smilax from the Rosebank Co.

Geo. Klotter has been cutting some excellent cornflower asters. H.

CANTON, ILL.—Plans are being prepared for a greenhouse, 50 x 125 feet, for Sylvester Grimsley, which will be used for pot plants and cut flowers.

OBITUARY.

Thomas Foulds.

After two years of failing health, the veteran gardener, Thos. Foulds, passed away at his home in Amherst, Mass., Friday, June 18, at the age of 69. He was born in England and received his early gardening training in that country. He came to America about 1867 and for a time he lived in the west, but came to Philadelphia to be head gardener, first for Chas. H. Rogers and a few years later for the late William M. Singerly. About the year 1884 he started in the florists' business for himself at Gwynedd, Pa., and built up a very successful business. About eight or nine years ago he sold his business and came to Northampton, Mass., where for a time he had charge of the grounds of the Peoples Institute. Finally he assumed charge of the Leonard estate, Amherst, Mass., which position he held until his death.

He was a true gardener, always faithful to his employers, and with an intense love for his profession. He was the originator of the well known Major Bonnaffon chrysanthemum. The grounds under his care always reflected a master's hand, and the plants and flowers seemed to thrive with unusual vigor. Indeed, the flowers he loved so well seemed to have reflected their sweetness and beauty into his own nature and character; kindly, quiet and unassuming, with the dignified bearing of the perfect gentleman.

He was twice married, and leaves a widow, two daughters and three sons. The funeral was held in Grace Episcopal church, Amherst, and was largely attended by the townspeople of Amherst, the Oddfellows and Rebekahs, of which he was a member, and the florists and gardeners in this section of Massachusetts. His life and character was an inspiration to all who had the privilege of knowing him. E. J. C.

Lawrence A. Casper.

Lawrence A. Casper, for 45 years one of the best known citizens of Council Bluffs, Ia., and the founder of the greenhouses in that city that were later taken over by the late J. F. Wilcox, now known as J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Inc., and have grown to be one of the most important industries of the city, died June 19 from heart failure, at the age of 71 years.

Mr. Casper retired from active control of the greenhouse industry that he had been instrumental in establishing over 20 years ago, and had since devoted his attention to his private interests, as he owned a great deal of real estate. He had been ailing more or less for five years past, and this winter has been confined almost entirely to his home. He was confined to his bed for the past two weeks.

He located in Council Bluffs in 1870, and it was about 1872 that he started the first greenhouse in that section. The late J. F. Wilcox became associated with him about nine years later, and the greenhouse assumed a commercial importance that its founder had not anticipated. The two worked together in the growing industry for many years, but about 1892 Mr. Casper retired from active participation in the business, which was still further developed by Mr. Wilcox up to the time of his death, when it was taken in charge by his sons.

Mr. Casper was always known for his kindly disposition and had an unlimited number of friends. He had good words and a liberal heart for all he met and was known for his honesty and fair dealings in his business affairs.

IN a Norwich, England, newspaper of 1765 there are two advertisements of flower shows, very quaint reading.

ONE grower says the high express rates are responsible for the unprofitable condition of the bedding plant business.

H. PLATH, of the San Francisco S. A. F. convention garden committee, reports planting completed and the garden in fine growing condition.

Personal.

H. Bayersdorfer and wife writing from Yokohama, Japan, June 6, say they had a most enjoyable outward trip.

Hail at West Grove, Pa.

In a recent hail storm at West Grove, the Dingee & Conard Co. sustained a loss of 5,000 square feet and the losses of the Conard & Jones Co. and other greenhouse men were approximately heavy.

Newport Sweet Pea Show Postponed.

The Newport exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, scheduled for July 8-9, has been postponed to July 15-16 on account of the lateness of the season. The final premium list is ready for distribution and copies may be had on application to Secretary Harry A. Bunyard, 40 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

Holiday Mail.

Chicago post office officials advise that regular deliveries will be discontinued between Saturday afternoon, July 3, and Tuesday morning, July 6, and it is probable that similar conditions will prevail in other large cities. Therefore, to insure prompt attention during this non-delivery period cut flower orders should be mailed under special delivery stamp or telegraphed.

S. S. Butterfield, Attorney-at-Law.

S. S. Butterfield, formerly representative of THE AMERICAN FLORIST at New York, and now occupying a similar position on our publication in Oklahoma, graduated from the law school of LaSalle University, Chicago, about a month ago and was recently admitted to practice in Oklahoma upon passing the state bar examinations at the age of 56 years. Mr. Butterfield came to this country from England in 1885. He is best known in Oklahoma as the organizer and first secretary of the Oklahoma State Florists' Association and as an officer and speaker of the state civic association. Many speeches before the last named organization and articles in The Oklahoman under the title of "The Flower Garden" have stamped him as one of the city's most tireless workers for civic improvements.

CONVENTION ANNOUNCEMENT.

The attention of the members of the society, and of the trade at large, is now quite naturally diverted to the thirty-first annual convention, to be held in San Francisco, Calif., August 17-19 next. Reports received from the transportation committees of the various local organizations throughout the country indicate that the attendance at the convention will be considerably larger than was at first anticipated.

President Welch expects that the delegation from Boston and the east will be large enough to fill a car. The New York delegation as already booked numbers fifteen, and in all probability this booking will be at least doubled. These bookings are, of course, exclusive of the attendance of those whose duties will require them to be in San Francisco in advance of the convention dates. The glowing reports concerning the horticultural features of the great exposition in progress in San Francisco, as presented by Chas. H. Totty and others who have returned from the coast, will undoubtedly influence many in their decision to attend the convention, so that a good average general attendance is confidently expected.

Floor plans of the Memorial Auditorium, where the business sessions of the convention and the trade exhibition are to be held, have been sent to all members. These plans show the spaces allotted to exhibitors, and the great adaptability of the building for exhibition purposes. While exhibitors from the east, owing to distance and high transportation charges, will not occupy such generous display spaces as they have done at other exhibitions, the following have contracted for liberal areas and will make fine displays: H. Bayersdorfer & Co. and M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; The John A. Evans Co. and The Advance Co., Richmond, Ind.

The secretary will be in San Francisco considerably in advance of the convention, and will cheerfully care for and arrange exhibits sent by exhibitors who are unable to attend the exhibition personally. The only request he makes is that such exhibitors communicate with him at once. After July 15 all communications should be addressed to him in care of Daniel MacRorie, vice-president of the Society of American Florists, 430 Phelan building, San Francisco, Calif. Any commission entrusted to him will be executed to the best of his ability while in the convention city.

THE WELCH PRIZE.

Vice-President Daniel MacRorie is the only one to comply with the rules and regulations governing the President Welch prize offered for the member sending in the greatest number of applications for members before July 1. Mr. MacRorie has already sent in almost one hundred names, and reports that he will complete the hundred by July 1.

THE S. A. F. BADGE.

The S. A. F. annual badge button has been sent to all members who have remitted for the 1915 assessment. There are a few life members' buttons still available for those entitled to them, and will be sent upon receipt of 75 cents. It would be a convenience to the secretary if the members who have not already done so will send in their 1915 assessment at once. The receipts to date for dues compare favorably with those of other years.

The printed 1915 annual report has also been distributed, and a copy should be in the hands of every member in good standing.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Frank D. Pelicano, 119 Gutenberg street, San Francisco, Calif., submits for registration the following new violets:

Anne Evans—This is a double violet and is a sport from Swanley White, with flowers very much larger than the present variety. The color is porcelain blue, shaded with lavender, about the shade of a Czar Peter hyacinth. The plant is strong and healthy, making quantities of fine foliage.

Quaker Lady—This is a seedling from a cross between Single White and California violet. The flowers are single and about the same size as Giant violet. A fine strong healthy grower. The color is lavender, shaded with delft blue, a shade darker than the Palma violet.

Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed names is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

DEMAND UNUSUALLY GOOD.

It is a pleasure to be able to report that most of the florists report business during the past week as very good. It is rather unusual at this time of the year to hear this, but it is a fact, nevertheless. School graduations, weddings, etc., are using up their usual quota of flowers and the great number of national conventions of all kinds that are being held here this year are all having more or less decorations done. Of course, all this extra decorating helps to keep the market fairly well cleaned up on all kinds of stock. All good roses coming in are holding up very well in price, but offerings of the poorer grade do not move very rapidly. Carnations are very plentiful, but good stock is somewhat scarce. This is owing to the warm weather. Gladioli are becoming more plentiful every day, as are dahlias. The quality of the latter is not of the best as yet. Sweet peas of the grandiflora type are plentiful and very cheap, but good Spencers are in steady demand and at good prices. Out-door rambler roses are about over. Cattleyas are not so plentiful as they were a week ago, and whatever arrives is disposed of rapidly. There are plenty of outside annuals to be had, but this stock is chiefly used up on decorations. Owing to the large amount of decorative work, the stores are called upon to do, greens of all kinds are in good demand. The supply is ample for all requirements. Smilax is still hanging on and there are plenty of asparagus and adiantums. Pot plants of all kinds are moving slowly, and are being used principally in decorations.

NOTES.

The big event of the week was the arrival of the American Seed Trade Association which took place Monday, June 21. President Lester L. Morse is also chairman of the reception committee. He was assisted by the following prominent seed growers: Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy; E. C. Pieper, San Jose, and L. M. Kimberlain, Santa Clara. On the morning of June 21 the members were taken on a three-hour sightseeing tour and in the evening attended a reception at the home of President Morse on Green street. The first business session of the thirty-third annual meeting took place Tuesday, June 22, at the Inside Inn on the exposition grounds. Nearly all the delegates were present. The speakers included Professor H. E. Van Norman, dean of the California State Farm School, Davis, Calif.; Professor John W. Gilmore, agricultural commissioner, University of California; E. C. Johnson, Portland, Ore.; L. C. Routzhan, Arroyo Grande, Calif.; Mark L. Germain, Los Angeles. Among the subjects were: "Value of Technical Training to a Seedsman," "Horticulture in the Hawaiian Islands," "Seed Growing in the Northwest," and "Flower Seeds in California." The annual banquet was very elaborate and was held at the Commercial Club. Wednesday the members attended the ceremony of the presentation of the exposition bronze plaque to the association. The early part of the week will be spent here and during the latter part the members will make a tour of inspection of the large seed growing establishments in Santa Clara and San Benito counties.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen and the fifth annual meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen will be held in this city August 12-14. The executive committee has an interesting programme under preparation, and arranged to have the first half of the three days' session under the auspices of the Pacific Coast association, and the remaining time under the California association. All members in attendance will meet together and freely participate in the deliberations of both associations. Monday, August 16, is nurserymen's day, when special courtesies will be extended by the exposition management. August 17-19 is the annual meeting of the American Rose Society, and August 17-20 is the meeting date of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. On August 23-25 the American Pomological Society will meet at Berkeley. These meetings are sure to draw a large attendance on the part of those interested in their respective branches of horticulture from all over the United States, and their interests are mutual with those of nurserymen. President John Vallance of Oakland is a busy man these days perfecting arrangements for these nurserymen's conventions.

Chas. H. Chambers, Fresno, Calif.

The daily papers of this city have been contributing pretty generous space to the chrysanthemum show to be held this fall. We are very glad to see this, and as we all know we cannot get too much of it. Judicious advertising of flower shows is a splendid thing, as witness the attendance at the sweet pea show at the exposition. The writer has been told that it has been estimated that the attendance at the sweet pea exhibition was near the hundred thousand mark and from personal observation this is about correct.

W. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, exhibited the W. Atlee Burpee & Co.'s prize-winning collection of Spencer sweet peas at his store in that city, June 24. He used the daily papers in advertising the display and his store was thronged all day by a very enthusiastic crowd of sweet pea lovers. Every variety was correctly labeled and many of the novelties, not yet in commerce, were displayed. Mr. Ebel is to be congratulated upon his energetic move.

The Art Floral Co. was very busy this week with a very large decoration at the Columbia theater. The undertaking was so large that the entire force had to be put on under the supervision of Manager Vincent Matraia. Mr. Matraia motored down the peninsula last week making a call at all the leading growing establishments. He says trade is very good and is well satisfied with the outlook.

Howard Earl, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., who came to see the sweet pea show, has been visiting the seed growers in this vicinity. Mr. Earl is representing the Burpee interests at the seedsmen's convention. After the convention Mr. Earl will go south to Floradale Farms to inspect the sweet pea prospects at the famous California seed ranch.

Frank Pelicano is sending some grand gladioli in from his nursery. His dahlias are also in splendid shape and he will no doubt be heard from at the fall show at the exposition grounds. These two flowers are Mr. Pelicano's special favorites and there does not seem to be anyone in this locality that can grow them to the perfection that he does.

It is with the deepest regret that I have to announce the death of Mrs. B. M. Joseph, wife of the prominent Grant avenue florist. Mrs. Joseph had been ill about a month and her passing is a matter of sincere regret. Mr. Joseph has the sympathy of the entire trade in his bereavement.

The Misses Hannon, on Polk street, are making a specialty of the Countess Spencer sweet pea and always have a large display on hand. They report decorative work for the exposition buildings as very brisk.

Angelo J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has been honored by Mayor Rolph in being selected as one of the committee that will receive the famous Liberty bell upon its arrival in this city from Philadelphia.

Martin Elder, of the Lord & Burnham Co., who has been here for some weeks for his health, expects to leave in a few days for Pittsburg. His health has greatly improved during his stay in this city. G. N.

Pasadena, Calif.

CLUB OUTING.

The Pasadena Horticulture Society held its annual outing Sunday, June 20, at Eagle Rock park. The Los Angeles Horticultural Society was invited and attended about 100 strong. Lunch was served promptly at 12 o'clock noon. Everybody seemed to have enough to eat and drink, except a few who came late. The crowd was considerably larger than expected; otherwise, even the late ones would have had plenty. The old saying "a minute ahead is better than a second behind" should always be carried in mind when going to picnics. After lunch Messrs Shields, president of the Pasadena society; Braunton, Houghton, Richards, Dieterich and Felgate, gave short impromtu speaches which were all loudly applauded. The band composed of about 40 pieces, which came over with the Pasadena boys, played many of the leading pieces and held the audience in absolute silence. Victor Clemence, of Pasadena, favored with a vocal selection, "I Love You California." Sports entertained well both members and visitors—Racing, jumping, indoor and outside baseball. Los Angeles played Pasadena in a full game, the score being tied, called at the end of the ninth, on account of darkness.

NOTES.

Charles A. Chambers, noted in horticultural circles, who for the past twelve years was the secretary and treasurer of the Fresno Nursery Company, Fresno, has sold out his interest to Frank H. Wilson, president of the company. Mr. Chambers, who has been at the wheel since he was fourteen years old, is taking his first real vacation and is spending some time at the San Diego exposition. Before affiliating himself with the Fresno Nursery Company, he was with the Fancher Creek Nurseries of Fresno, for 11 years. Twenty-three years in two nurseries in the same town is a record to be proud of.

BIG FUNERAL AND WEDDING CALL.

The past week found the market well supplied with stock, especially in gladioli, which were excellent in quality, and lilies are becoming more plentiful and better stock. Roses are very good considering the season and are very low in price. Good sweet peas are also coming in now, but carnations are falling off in quality. The past week has been very good for funeral work, and it seems this city is full of brides, there are so many calls for wedding decorations. Nearly all of the growers are busy planting their houses with chrysanthemums, carnations, etc., and doing what repairing is needed.

NOTES.

Miss Mamie Klein of Arthur Newell's store force, is spending her summer vacation at the Panama-American exposition and also along the coast at different points. She will return about August 1. Mr. Newell says business has been very good for this time of the year, both in local and out of town orders. He had a bank opening out of town which took a good many American Beauties and other stock.

W. J. Barnes had a good week in funeral work, which used up a good supply of stock. He is still having plenty of wedding decorations. The chrysanthemums are all planted and he is making ready for the carnations. Mr. Barnes made the trip to Jefferson City June 24 with the delegation of Masons to lay the corner stone of the state capitol.

Wm. Foith is now the sole owner of his greenhouse, having bought out all other interests. He has all his chrysanthemums planted and is busy taking care of his carnations, of which he has 20,000 planted out in the field. He is making the repairs that are needed around the greenhouses.

Mr. Stevens, formerly of the firm of Stevens and Larkin, bought out all other interests in the greenhouses. He has finished planting his chrysanthemums, which are in excellent shape.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a good week, both in local and shipping trade. They are certainly receiving some gladioli, which are very fine. They still have plenty of roses.

Samuel Murray reports a very fine week, having had a good deal of funeral work and was kept very busy with decorations which are taking plenty of stock.

Patrick Larkin has closed his store for about two months to make repairs, and the help are taking their vacation while it is being done.

S. Bryson Ayres & Co. are cutting some very fine gladioli which are hard to equal. They are also cutting some extra good sweet peas.

E. J. B.

Milwaukee.

Otto Grunwaldt, Jr., says that Grunwaldt Bros., who have taken over Nic Zweifel's greenhouses at North Milwaukee, will continue the business under the firm name of the Greenwood Carnation Co. They expect to maintain the same high standard of quality as Mr. Zweifel did and to accomplish this they have retained Leon Thorpe, the efficient grower who had complete charge of the place while Mr. Zweifel was touring Europe. John Jacobs, who has been with Mr. Zweifel for some time, will also remain in the employ of this firm, so the trade will hardly notice any difference in the cut carnations and young stock grown on the place. They have some very fine young stock to start with and expect to bench some of it in a few days, providing weather conditions will permit. They will make a specialty of growing rooted cuttings, devoting a few thousand stock plants for this purpose. There are at present 16 varieties grown on the place, including a few of the newer varieties, such as Matchless, Champion, Alice, Good Cheer and a few others, so one may expect to hear more from this enterprising firm in the future.

John Kruchten and C. L. Scherer, of the John Kruchten Co., Chicago, visited the Holton & Hunkel Co. greenhouses June 24.

Harry Balsley, the Detroit, Mich., flower pot man, was a visitor this week.

DAVENPORT, IA.—The formal opening of the Forber & Bird's new flower store at 313 Brady street was held June 19. The store is very complete in its appointments and was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, and flowering plants. Floral souvenirs were given to all visitors.

BUSINESS QUITE GOOD.

Business was quite good this week, especially Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 24-25-26, when the market cleaned up pretty well, but at rather low prices. The cause of the clean-up was due principally to the large number of school closings which called for a large quantity of stock and the many weddings which took place. Trade the opening of this week was fair, but there is plenty of stock at this writing to go around in practically all lines. American Beauty roses of fine quality are among the offerings and the same holds good for Mrs. Chas. Russell, which continue to clean up well at good prices notwithstanding the large supply of stock in general that is being offered. Richmond roses are arriving in fine condition and the same holds good for My Maryland and Ophelia. A few Hoosier Beauty are being offered but clean up quickly at good prices. Sunburst are in good supply, as are roses in general, but they are cleaning up well at fairly good summer prices. Carnations are still seen in good supply and are keeping up well in quality. Peonies continue to be a factor in the market but the end of the supply is near, although a few of the local growers are still cutting a limited number. Sweet peas are seen in large quantities and the same may be said of orchids, lilies and lily of the valley. The first outdoor gladioli and asters made their appearance in the market this week and while the supply of asters is limited, gladioli are in large supply and are not selling any too well. Large shipments of gladioli from the south and the local out-door gladioli has affected the price of greenhouse grown stock, consequently fancy stock in this line is obtainable at very reasonable prices.

While business is not rushing it is holding up pretty well and everyone seems to be satisfied with the demand the past week. Nearly all the wholesale stores are closing at 5 p. m. and will continue to do so during July, August and September. The out-of-town florists who buy in this market would do well to remember that there will be no mail delivery from Saturday noon until Tuesday morning, July 6, so should either send any important mail special delivery, or telegraph rush orders during this period, otherwise they are likely to be disappointed in not receiving their stock.

NOTES.

Wm. Bufe, for some years employed by A. Lange, and at one time in business on his own account on Wentworth avenue, dropped dead on the street, June 24. Mr. Bufe had been in poor health for some considerable time. The body was taken to the Central Undertaking Rooms, where funeral services were conducted by Rev. George L. Scherger, with music by Mrs. R. J. Mohr, Sunday, June 27. The remains were interred at Mt. Greenwood cemetery, Mr. Lange and his employes taking charge of the funeral. A wife in such serious condition that she had to be taken to an asylum and six small children in very poor circumstances survive. The children have been placed in charge of the juvenile court. Fellow employes and many of the wholesale florists contributed a profusion of flowers.

Mrs. C. E. De Wever of Olivette, Mo., and two children are visiting friends in this city.

Jack Byers has accepted a position as salesman with W. H. Kidwell & Son.

George L. Stillman and wife of Westerly, R. I., passed through the city this week on their way to San Francisco, Calif., where they will take in the sights of the Panama-Pacific exposition. They were the guests of Dwight L. Harris of the Pulverized Manure Co., June 23, when they inspected the Union Stock Yards.

More than $6,000 was realized for the Frances Willard Hospital by the sale of flowers on the streets June 23, by over 100 girls, when the honor of making the greatest number of sales went to Miss Margaret Phelan, 238 North Latrobe avenue, and to Miss Emma Dowdall, 160 North Latrobe avenue.

The firm of Percy Jones will store at least eight million ferns in addition to what have already been sold on contract, and, judging from the many orders that have been booked, it seems to indicate that the western florists have long been waiting for some one to do this whom they could depend upon. H. Van Gelder, president of the firm, believes that the Michigan and Wisconsin ferns will store as well as eastern stock, for he tried it last year and stock taken out of storage on June 15 compared most favorably with the eastern picked ferns that were placed in the same storage room and at the same time. Every box of ferns will be inspected before it is placed in storage and carefully looked over when taken out, so as to give the customer the best value possible at all times throughout the season.

The Pulverized Manure Co., 32 Union Stock Yards, has had a wonderfully good season, according to Dwight L. Harris, notwithstanding the shortage of supply due to the government quarantine in the local yards. The city plant, St. Louis, Mo., and Kansas City, Mo., plants are now running in full blast, consequently the firm has a large supply of their products in stock. The quarantine in some sections of the local yards has been lifted and the remaining sections are gradually being cleaned, but it will be some time before the ban will be removed from the entire place.

Wietor Bros. report a brisk demand for chrysanthemum cuttings and plants and every mail brings in more orders. N. J. Wietor calls attention to the way carnations are keeping up in quality this summer, which is surprising compared to other years. N. J. Wietor is undecided just how and where he is going to spend his vacation but it is a ten-to-one-shot that he and John Sinner, Herbert Griffin and all the other members of the "Piker's Club" will hold a grand reunion in the wilds of Wisconsin in the near future.

Frank Johnson and Ed Galavan, of the A. L. Randall Co., and wives have returned from a most delightful 2,500 mile automobile trip to the coast where stops were made at all the principal cities. Frank McCabe left this week for Ft. Worth, where he will represent his firm at the second annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association.

Practically all the local wholesale houses are now closing every day at 5 p. m. and will continue to do so during the balance of July, August and September. From present indications it does not appear as if any of the stores will close on Sundays, as the proprietors feel that this would greatly interfere with their shipping trade.

L. R. Bohannon, of the Bohannon Floral Co., left for Fremont, Mich., in his automobile this week to spend the summer. Mrs. Stuart is in charge at the store and as soon as her business partner returns she and her husband, N. I. Stuart, who operates the Flower Market, 6 East Monroe street, will auto to Toronto, Can.

John Kruchten and C. L. Sherer, of the John Kruchten Co., have returned from a delightful visit at Milwaukee, Wis. They visited the Holton & Hunkel Co.'s greenhouses while they were in the Cream City and found everything in splendid condition, particularly the Mrs. Chas. Russell, Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty roses.

Erne & Klingel are showing some exceptionally fine Richmond roses at their store this week that are attracting much favorable attention. School closings last week called for a large supply of stock and everything was pretty well cleaned up the latter part of last week, is the report at this house.

A. T. Pyfer says that trade was very good last week at A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s store, with a grand clean-up in all lines, due principally to the many school closings. This firm is handling a nice supply of roses from the Pyfer & Olsem range at Wilmette, where Peter Olsem is in charge.

Paul Blome & Co. report a good season at their North Clark street retail store with a brisk demand for Mrs. Chas. Russell roses. The new rose Hoosier Beauty is making a hit with their customers and the proprietors predict a brilliant future for this variety.

Fred Dietsch and family will auto to Madison, Wis., this week to spend the Fourth. The rush of business at A. Dietsch Co.'s plant is keeping him busy, but he cannot resist the temptation to take his Oldsmobile out for a little exercise once in awhile.

At George Reinberg's store, where Robert Northam is in charge, one misses the American Beauty rose which was formerly grown in quantity at the Reinberg greenhouses, but discarded recently to make room for Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia.

Weiland & Risch are well pleased with the growth of their new pink rose, Champ Weiland, at the greenhouses, and will have something extraordinarily fine to offer in a new variety next season.

Mrs. Frank Potocki, who has been engaged in the florist business at 3039 Milwaukee avenue, moved this week to better quarters at 1140 West Chicago avenue.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association will be held at 176 North Michigan avenue, Tuesday, July 6, when everyone is urgently requested to be present.

Joseph Ziska, with Joseph Ziska & Sons, will spend his vacation in the east this year instead of the golden west, as nearly everyone else seems to be doing. There must be some pretty big attraction to induce him to go east when everybody else is talking about the wonderful sights at the Panama-Pacific exposition. 'Nuff sed.

Peter Reinberg is cutting heavily in My Maryland and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses which are meeting with good sale at the store according to Felix Reichling, who says that they are the two best sellers on the Reinberg list. This firm acknowledges a most pleasant visit from Mr. Sands, of Jackson, Tenn.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having a tremendous call for the new rose Hoosier Beauty, which promises to be a winner. The flowers they are cutting are carried on stems fully four feet long and the velvety finish to the petals seem to appeal to the better class of trade for they are willing to pay $1.50 to $2.00 per dozen, which is a good figure considering the general market conditions. Otto W. Frese thinks that the rose Mrs. Chas. Russell is the best in commerce today and boosts it every opportunity he gets. Tim Waters and his assistants have started to take stock in the supply department and are well along with the work. This firm's new catalog is nearly ready for mailing and will be sent free to anyone in the trade upon receipt of a postal. E. C. Pruner is representing the firm at the Texas State Florists' convention at Fort Worth, where they have a large exhibit.

C. P. Rogers, manager and one of the members of the firm of Johnson Bros. & Alexander, who operate a store at 108 South State street and another at 77 West Washington street, reports business as very satisfactory. One order last week called for 600 corsage bouquets of sweet peas, which were delivered to the Midway Gardens when the delegates to the International convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World were entertained at luncheon last week. Miss Anna Sigmund, formerly with the Madison Floral Co., is in charge at the Washington street store.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, and wife will leave this week for a visit with relatives in California. They celebrated another wedding anniversary this week with an informal dinner at the South Shore Country Club and everyone present held a most delightful time. Joe Einweck, who has charge of the American Beauty roses at the Bassett & Washburn store, leaves this week for San Francisco, Calif., to see the Panama-Pacific exposition.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society will be held at the Art Institute Friday, July 2, at 3 p. m., to discuss fall flower show matters, plans for which are making excellent progress. The show will be held at the Coliseum, November 9-14, inclusive. For copies of the preliminary premium list, which will soon be ready, address N. P. Miller, secretary, 179-183 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

John Poehlmann, Jr., who graduated with high honors from the Culver Military Academy, at Culver, Ind., in June, is traveling for this institution, and so far has enrolled a large number of new students for the next term. When he finishes this work he will assist his father in the cut flower department at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s store.

J. C. Craig has been in the retail business here since 1874, and his trade is flourishing, thanks to the ability of his sons, Joseph A., Arthur and Herbert, who are associated with him in business. Mr. Craig visits the market occasionally and when asked how he is feeling, he usually replies, "I am having a pleasant time on easy street."

Reinhart Scheel, florist of River Forest, and Mrs. Mathilda Klingenmaier, of Chicago, were married at Crown Point, Ind., June 28.

GOOD DEMAND REPORTED.

Business the past week has been very good, with plenty of funeral and weddings scattered very evenly with the trade. Roses are holding up well at from two to eight cents, with sales averaging from four to six cents. Carnation sales dropped off on account of the abundance of peonies in the market. Carnations sold from $6 to $25 per thousand, with the average at 2 cents each; peonies from $2.50 a thousand to $30 for fancy stock; sweet peas, 50 cents to $1.00 per hundred, with the end of the crop in sight owing to warm weather. Some fine larkspur has made its appearance and finds ready sale.

NOTES.

The Minneapolis base ball team played at Glencoe Sunday, June 27, and met defeat, 4 to 0. Batteries were: Minneapolis, Miller & Beck; Glencoe, Lambert & Donaghue; strike outs—Miller, 16; Lambert, 11. Hits—7 off Miller; 14 off Lambert. Errors—Minnneapolis, 2; Glencoe, 1.

At the last meeting of the florists of Twin Cities before adjournment for the summer, the Minneapolis boys extended thanks for courtesies shown us by Messrs. Holm, Hanson and others of St. Paul.

Mr. Metcalf, of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, spent a week in this city and reports he had a nice trade.

The Twin City florists will hold their picnic at Spring Grove, Lake Minnetonka, Tuesday, July 20, and invite all members of the craft to attend.

The committee appointed to arrange for the picnic held a meeting June 28 and A. C. Rice was elected treasurer of the finance committee.

Will Brothers have finished planting asters and carnations. Their sweet peas are coming fine. They expect them in about July 15.

Oscar Amundson gave away in front of his store Saturday, June 26, 2,000 peonies, which he would not sell at 15 or 20 cents a dozen.

Wm. D. Desmond, Chris. Eisele and Cal Rice left July 2 for a trip to the northwest, Winnipeg being the first stopping point.

The meeting of the executive committee in St. Paul, Wednesday, June 30, finishes all arrangements for the picnic.

C. G. Anderson has leased a flat on Lake street and expects to move his family from Morton Grove, Ill., next week.

Hugh Will and Ralph Latham have returned from their trip to the lakes.

W. C. Drake has sold his greenhouses at 3004 Fourth avenue South to Mr. Wast. T. C. R.

Providence, R. I.

HAIL STORM DOES MUCH DAMAGE.

Market conditions have been very good the past week, all stock cleaning up well. The peony season is now over, and gladioli are coming in better than ever and sell very well. Roses are shortening up at this writing, but are good. Carnations are going back very rapidly but some white varieties are still very good. The weather the past week has been cloudy and with a shower every day, and finally ending up with a violent thunder storm, June 26, that turned into a hail storm, and did considerable damage to the greenhouses in the eastern part of the state. The hail in some sections was as big as small hens' eggs and covered the ground as though it was snow.

NOTES.

The greenhouses of F. A. Ballow, of Barrington, R. I., were considerably damaged by the hail storm, June 26, doing much damage to his crop. As far as is now known the storm did little damage to any of the greenhouses in or near Providence.

Albert Holscher of Pocassett, has finished cutting his sweet peas and has planted the houses with chrysanthemums. H. A. T.

Charles W. Thompson has a considerable glass area and grows a variety of stock. His garden is also at this time prolific in hardy flowers. Being near a cemetery, he has a good local trade. Francis Milne, in the same locality, does a similar business, growing a variety of stock and attending to cemetery work.

At the sanitarium of Dr. Millspaugh there is a very fine hardy garden with a great variety of flowering stock. A feature of this garden, which is several acres in extent, is the hedge of honeysuckle, supported by wire, which surrounds it. There is also a small greenhouse. A. F. F.

BRISTOL, TENN.—P. S. Wise, of Fairmont Gardens, reports business as good as can be expected at this time of year.

MARKET FULL TO OVERFLOWING.

Conditions are much the same as a week ago; very much more stock coming in than there is any outlet for. Almost all lines are full to overflowing; even the absence of the peonies, which ruled the market the first two weeks in June, has been but little relief, as the demand declines more rapidly than the supply. Outdoor sweet peas have had a short life; at least this is true of the early ones, which were badly hammered by the heavy rains of last week. Those who planted Spencers are getting their reward, as they are coming from growers in very fine condition. A carte blanche order was given to the Habermehl's for the wedding of a granddaughter of John Wanamaker. It seemed as if everything of merit in all lines was bought for this decoration. The orders were well distributed, all the houses being remembered. One commission dealer furnished 5,000 Easter lilies and others fared almost as well with their specialties. This single function was a great help to the situation. There has been a good demand for good cut rambler roses. Much of the stock this season has been badly infected with mildew, which takes all the life out of the color of the flowers.

FLORISTS' CLUB OUTING.

The annual outing of the florists' club at Schuetzen park, Monday, June 21, was well attended and afforded great pleasure to the two hundred and more persons who attended. The committee very considerately left out the showers that have been so conspicuous heretofore. The baseball game between seedsmen and retailers, versus growers and wholesalers, was very well played. "Tyrus Cobb" Gaul, of the defeated team, was so busy looking the part that he could not see the ball, and his batting average was very low. The rest of the nine with no "star" reputations, lived up to theirs and—lost out. The score was 6 to 4.

In the games, everybody—boys, girls, men and women—had a chance to win a prize. That always strenuous affair, the tug-of-war, was won by Bobby Shocks' team for the first time. John Kuhn's team beat Dennis Connor's in the bowling. The ladies' wheelbarrow event was won by Miss A. C. Huebner; Mrs. W. Smith, second.

Other events were as follows:

Fifty-yard race—Miss Heacock, first; Miss A. Klein, second.

Ladies' potato race—Miss Geschick, first; Miss Adelberger, second.

Girls' race, 14 to 18 years—Miss Adelberger, first; Miss D. Adelberger, second.

Girls' race, under 14 years—Miss G. Wagner, first; Miss H. Theile, second.

Men's wheelbarrow race—A. Strohlein, first; E. Dornheim, second.

Boys' race, 14 to 18 years—S. D. Lawyer, first; C. Pennock, second.

Men's race—C. Pennock, first; J. Strohlein, second.

Men's sack race, 18 years and over—C. Pennock, first; J. Wenz, second.

Fat men's race—R. Shock, first; G. Hampton, second.

A splendid dinner was enjoyed afer the games, good music enlivening the occasion and dancing followed the presentation of the prizes, which were splendid souvenirs.

NOTES.

H. A. Dreer, Inc., have secured permission from the bureau of city real estate to improve one of the large plots in front of convention hall and now have a force of workmen preparing the ground and making attractive flower beds. These will be cared for during the summer and fall, and it is their intention to make a suitable display on this plot during the National Flower Show, which will be held in convention hall next March.

R. C. Hayden, of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., has sold out his interest to George Angele, who for several years has been manager of the concern. Mr. Hayden will devote his entire time to his Highland Rose Co., which has grown to such extent as to require his whole attention. He will sell his products through the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. as before.

An idea of the value of hydrangea stock thrown on the market through the medium of the department stores to sell at 29 cents each, is shown, when a grower bought a number of the plants, put them in larger pots and sold them to the stores for $1.00 each, the buyers being satisfied that they got good value for their money. Baltimore.

Sam'l Feast & Co. furnished the floral decoration for one of the prettiest June weddings of the season, that of Miss Sara Bell Williams to Gilbert L. Lucas in Old St. Paul's church. The chancel was banked with palms and Easter lilies, and tall standards of peonies and ferns were tied to the pews at the middle aisle. The bride's bouquet of orange blossoms and lilies of the valley was a work of art.

Edwin Seidewitz' force have been rushed to their full capacity this week. Their orders for weddings were exceptionally heavy. They supplied the elaborate decorations of palms, plants and cut flowers for the wedding of Miss Florence Hirschman to Isaac Davis. The greenhouses at Annapolis were damaged considerably by hail during the recent storm.

Edward Woodford's loss by the hail storm is quite noticeable and R. Kaiser reports that hail stones "large as a baseball" fell in his vicinity, doing much damage to his range.

TRADE SHOWS SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT.

There was an improvement in the condition of business during the past week, to the extent that there was not such a glut, and that stock moved more freely. There was also a slight stiffening in prices. American Beauties are somewhat off crop and good ones are scarce, specials going at the rate of $25 per 100; in fact, special stock of nearly every variety of rose has been in light supply. The best Cattleya orchids have been selling at $20 and $25 per 100. Lilies have done a little better, but that was poor, at $1.50 to $2 per 100. Good carnations got back to $1.50 and $2 per 100, and are likely to go higher while they last, as the finish of the carnations is near at hand. It was in their favor, that the weather of the past week was uniformly cool, night temperature going as low as 53 degrees. The closing of the schools, with their attendant functions, has added some life to the trade and there has been much funeral work.

June 28.—There is fair activity in the market. There is no surplus in any special roses, but enough of inferior grades. Though the cool weather has helped out the carnations, but few good ones are now seen. In fever-few and various similar stocks there is a surplus and an abundant supply of sweet peas. Lilies are doing a little better.

FLORISTS' CLUB NOMINATING COMMITTEE.

President Harry A. Bunyard of the Florists' Club has appointed the following nominating committee to select candidates for office, 1916: Joseph A. Manda, chairman; John Donaldson, Frank H. Traendly, Charles B. Weathered, Walter F. Sheridan, Charles H. Totty, Charles Weber.

NOTES.

Louis Dupuy's range at Whitestone is an interesting place to visit at any time of the year, and while at present the houses are not filled with a great stock of flowering plants, there is much that is interesting and a leading feature is a great stock of the heather, much of it being grown out in the open. It has been said that neat and well kept grounds and surroundings are good advertisements for a florist, and that is true of this place. Evergreens and flowering shrubs, rambler roses, beds and boxes of geraniums and other flowering plants are arranged about the residence with good effect. Ferns, dracænas, camellias, pelargoniums and many other plants are seen in quantity.

A table prepared by experts for the 10 months of the fiscal year ended in April, shows that a heavy decrease has taken place in imports of 21 industries, with an increase in only four. The falling off in fertilizers is noteworthy. For the 10 months noted, the value of importations fell from $20,000,000 to less than half that sum. The importation of fertilizers for April, 1915, compared with April, 1914, show a shortage of about 500 per cent. In addition to the shutting off of the German supply the increased price of Chilian nitrate has checked importations.

It is reported that Charles E. Applegate, a retail florist of Putnam avenue, Brooklyn, with a residence at 426 Grand avenue, recently lost $2,000 worth of his wife's jewelry by leaving it in the pockets of a suit which he had sent to a tailor to be pressed. The tailor denies that the jewelry reached his shop in the suit. It appears that Mr. Applegate had taken the jewelry with the intention of placing it in the safe at his store and forgot to do so.

At the range of the J. M. Keller Co., Whitestone, three new houses, each 27x125 feet, have recently been finished. They are of iron frame with concrete foundations and very substantial. They will be utilized for plant growing. Manager John Appel has been sending out very fine stock of the new white hydrangea. A fine stock of heather, Pandanus Veitchii and other plants were also noted.

Henry Ulrich, Woodside, formerly a carnation grower, has now taken up the growing of Asparagus plumosus nanus. All the boys are calling to see Henry's eagle. It is not "chained to a perch" like the eagle in the old rhyme, but perches on top of a tall iron pole in front of his house, with a weather vane beneath. It looks like a "golden eagle" but is very peaceable.

A. L. Young & Co., 54 West 28th street, have incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000 for the purpose of carrying on a business in floriculture, horticulture and agriculture. The incorporators are A. L. Young and Herman Scommodan of New York and Fred Lightfoot of Rutherford, N. J.

Clark James, a clever young man, formerly employed by C. C. Trepel, who went into the retail business for himself a few months ago, is making a success of it. As the "Mount Morris Florist," he has a store at 66 East 125th street, and another at Mt. Vernon.

A meeting of importers of this city was recently held and a committee appointed to call on Secretary Lansing in Washington in an attempt to devise ways and means to get their goods out of Germany, the obstacle, it appears, being the British fleet.

Miss Annie Ullman, for the past 15 years, cashier and bookkeeper for J. P. Klausner, Columbus avenue and 73d street, was married on June 20 to Maurice Bibro, a merchant of this city.

Richard Vincent, Jr., Whitemarsh, Md., and granddaughter were in the city June 26 and attended the exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York at Bronx park.

Victor Dorval's Sons, Woodside, have a good general stock, lilies, chrysanthemums, asparagus and a variety of pot plants being noteworthy.

Philip F. Kessler spent the closing days of June in Boston.

The above named society held an exhibition in the Museum building, Bronx park, June 26-27, which was noteworthy on account of the quantity of fine hardy stock displayed. The stock was good, and tastefully arranged. Leading exhibitors were: Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., hardy perennials, polyantha roses, hybrid tea and tea roses, and a collection of delphiniums; William Shillaber, Essex Falls, N. J. (J. P. Sarenson, Gr.), hardy rambler roses, including Tausendschon, Dr. W. Van Fleet, Hiawatha, Silver Moon Everblooming, Flower of Fairfield, Lady Gay, Aberie Roabier, Gardenia, Dorothy Perkins and White Dorothy; John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y., yellow Calla Elliottiana, and lilies and irises; Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y. (James Stuart, Gr.), vases of hybrid perpetual roses; Mrs. W. G. Nichols, Rye, N. Y. (G. N. Yonkers, N. Y.

With nearly 100,000 population, it is to be supposed that this city should have a good share of the florist business. It is also a wealthy city, or to be more definite, there are many people of wealth who own property and reside within its boundaries. The noted estate, "Greystone," once the home of Samuel J. Tilden, and now owned by Samuel Untermeyer, a noted lawyer, is in Yonkers. There are several hundred acres in this estate and the horticultural features are noteworthy. The glass area is larger than is usually seen on a private place and there is a fine collection of what are generally known as stove plants. At present a fine crop of pot chrysanthemums are being brought forward. On the grounds fine ornamental bedding was noted. T. Hutton, a young Englishman, is now superintendent of this place.

Among the commercial florists we found evidence of activity. At Macdonald's, 2 Main street, we found business very active. Commencement exercises of the schools were held June 29, which made considerable business. A seed business is also carried on.

Frank Knapper has been in business in Yonkers for many years. He formerly had a retail store, but in late years has devoted his attention exclusively to his range on Bellevue avenue, in which he is assisted by his sons.

The Parkhill Florists, 248 South Broadway, have a good store. C. A. Schaefer, formerly well known in the business in New York, now conducts this store.

The Milliot store, 18 North Broadway, does a good business and buys extensively in the New York wholesale market. This firm also owns glass.

The New York Floral Co., of which M. T. Rovatzoo is the leading spirit, has a fine store and a good business.

Mrs. Elizabeth Macheny has conducted a retail store for many years and may be called one of the pioneers of the business in Yonkers.

R. T. Broderick started a retail store at 3 Dock street about a year and a half ago and seems to be prospering.

St. Louis.

Summer dullness prevailed the past week, the only outlet being funeral work. The retailers are now preparing for vacations, fixing up and painting their stores. The weather is wretched, continuous rains causing what little transient trade there is to suffer.

NOTES.

The Florists' Retail Association met June 21, at Anschutz garden, 17 members present, Charles C. Young in the chair. A committee of four from St. Louis County Growers' Association was also there. The credit committee reported. It was suggested that books be printed of dead beats, slow pays and other undesirable parties with whom the retailers do not wish to come in contact. Every member of the association should receive one of these books. A committee of four retailers was appointed to confer with the growers' committee in reference to the closing of the wholesale houses Saturday at noon until Monday morning. The majority at the meeting thought the wholesalers should have conferred with the growers and retailers before deciding on early and extended closings. Action was taken on certain schools prohibiting flowers at graduations. The closing of all retail stores was also brought up and laid over for the next meeting. Four new members were elected, Frank Gorly, Joe Windler, W. H. Kruse and Andrew Meyer, Jr. Four applications for membership were also received. A prize was voted upon to be given for one of the events at the annual picnic, July 22.

H. G. Berning was quietly married to Emma Bruening, sister of his late lamented wife, June 29, who was cashier and bookkeeper for several years. It was the late Mrs. Berning's desire and wish that her sister should marry her husband three months after her death. Henry and his wife left for the east and will be gone for three or four weeks. The business will be left in charge of his brother-in-law, Otto Bruening. All his friends wish him good luck and continued prosperity.

At the meeting of the growers, held June 21, at C. A. Kuehne's, to meet the wholesalers, nothing was settled. The wholesalers closed at noon, Saturday, until Monday. They claimed their sales were larger than if they had kept open. The growers requested that they keep open until five o'clock Saturday, but the wholesalers stood pat.

Preparations for the annual picnic, given by the local florists' club, are in the hands of the trustees, who will have everything in shape, July 22.

The daily papers are giving large notices advertising the beauties to be seen at Shaw's Garden, everything being in fine shape.

Carnations are getting smaller and are of very poor quality, also sweet peas are soft and in many instances unsalable.

DULL TRADE FOLLOWS SUMMER'S ARRIVAL.

Trade was quieter last week than any previous week in June, owing to the passing of commencement time and the bedding season. Weddings, however, were quite numerous, and the dedication of the Lincoln highway, June 21, was the occasion for the use of cut flowers in great quantities. Stock has held out well all spring up until now, when the hot weather is really just beginning. Roses are good, but not as plentiful as they have been. Carnations from the local stock are quite small, and prices have dropped. The old crops of sweet peas are getting small, but the new crops look promising. Lily of the valley has sold well. Gladioli are in large supply and fine quality.

NOTES.

The dedication of the Lincoln highway, June 21, created a big demand for the florists. There were one thousand machines in the parade, many of which were decorated with natural flowers. Vice-President Marshall was the guest of honor. The parade started from this city and went along the Lincoln highway to New Haven, Ind. The New Haven Floral Co. had their grounds elaborately decorated and presented thousands of cut flowers to the participants of the parade. Frank Knecht's new touring car was decorated with Easter lilies and many roses. Messrs. Herman and Leitz of the New Haven Floral Co. are busy planting their houses of chrysanthemums and Killarney rose plants.

The Flick Floral Company furnished the decorations and one hundred corsages for the guests at a luncheon bridge at the Country club given by Mrs. Max Fisher, June 22. Snapdragons, sweet peas and Shawyer roses were used.

Edgar Wenninghoff is showing some good geraniums and other bedding stock in his down town store. He reports a splendid season.

The Doswell Floral Co. are showing some attractive window displays. Their greenhouse force is busy planting the young stock.

H. K.

Ridgewood, N. J.

Frederick C. Schweinfurth is one of the most expert rose growers that ships to the New York market. As a young man he served an apprenticeship with the late Ernest G. Asmus, of West Hoboken, whose name was for years synonymous with good rose growing.

A. V. D. Snyder, who is also a seedsman and agent for Bowker's fertilizers, has three large houses with a large stock of chrysanthemums coming on.

A. Thurston's Sons are erecting a new house of considerable dimensions to replace an old one, and will be well prepared for next season.

It is stated that the John Bingham estate is now out of business as florists.

NEW YORK.—A meeting of the creditors and advisory committee of A. T. Boddington is scheduled for July 1.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade June 30 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.

THE corn convention and exhibition will be held on the Panama-Pacific Exposition grounds, August 5-6. The secretary is Charles F. Mills, Springfield, Ill.

WIRES from seedsmen in California now indicate less favorable view of the onion seed crop than previously reported while the sweet pea outlook seems more favorable to them.

BLUE GRASS has taken a sharp jump because of so much rain during the harvest in June. Asking prices are $1.40 to $1.75 for new crop, which is an advance of nearly 50 per cent.

WESTERN seedsmen generally report trade with market gardeners as having been excellent the past season, but add that payments are slow, accounts to be collected running later than usual.

TWENTY-ONE different seed concerns are advertised by the United States department of agriculture, June 16, as selling stocks of vetch seed under the name of hairy vetch, which contains a greater or less per cent of other vetches.

PRESIDENT CHARLES DICKINSON, of the Illinois Model Aero Club, has suggested aeroplanes as engines of peace, stating that international boundaries would be obliterated and with the air filled with war aeroplanes war would be too terrible to undertake.

J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.
President-Elect American Seed Trade Ass'n.

Onion Sets.

Inspection of growing crop of onion sets at Chicago indicates excessive top growth. Several seedsmen who are greatly interested and have closely observed conditions are in doubt whether the sets will ripen down to their usual shape or rather be inclined to make longer and less desirable bulbs. One grower claims that a crop once grown by him that developed exceedingly long and heavy top growth could never produce bottoms worth harvesting.

Louisville has a slightly smaller acreage of onion sets than last year, but the crop is looking well.

French Bulbs.

The latest reports on the French bulb situation indicate that at least one Dutch house is buying in France on the basis of the first prices stated by the growers' syndicate. It is thought, however, by those well informed regarding the situation that these preliminary prices can not be maintained unless English and American buyers have large orders to place at an early date and such conditions are not expected.

American Seed Trade Association.

As chronicled in last week's issue, the thirty-third annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association convened at San Francisco, Calif., Monday, June 21. Supplementary to the report of the first two days' proceedings as previously published in these columns, the programme was continued Wednesday, June 23, which was known as American Seed Trade Association day at the Panama-Pacific exposition, the opening of the session being marked by the presentation by the exposition authorities of a bronze tablet to the association. Vice-president Lupton, in behalf of the association, graciously expressed the thanks of the organization. Following the taking of a group photograph of the members, the session was resumed and several interesting papers and discussions followed.

Prof. John N. Gilmore, chief agronomist of the Agricultural College, University of California, Berkeley, and formerly of Hawaii, spoke on "Horticulture in the Hawaiian Islands," and in the discussion which followed it was shown that there is a decline in the Hawaiian fruit and vegetable market production, due to insect pests; also that a better supply of these commodities could be secured from California by steamer shipments. A unanimous vote of thanks was given to Prof. Gilmore for his most interesting and instructive paper.

Mark L. Germain, of the Germain Seed and Plant Co., Los Angeles, Calif., followed with a paper on credits and credit systems of general interest to the trade, which was listened to attentively.

"Seed Growing in the Northwest," a paper by E. C. Johnson, of the Portland Seed Co., Portland, Ore., who was unable to be present, was read by Prof. Steele, and was listened to with much interest.

L. C. Routzahn, of the Routzahn Seed Co., Arrayo Grande, Calif., followed with a paper on "Flower Seed Growing in California." The superior vitality and germination of California seeds in competition with European seeds was brought out in the discussion that followed, as well as the wonderful possibilities of developing the demand for California seeds after the war.

A rousing vote of thanks was accorded G. A. Dennison, chief of the division of horticulture, Panama-Pacific exposition, for many courtesies extended the American Seed Trade Association and for his hearty co-operation in making the 1915 convention one of the most successful in the history of the organization.

The report of the committee on credits started an interesting discussion, in which the Wholesale Seedsmen's League collection bureau was commended by F. W. Bolgiano, of F. W. Bolgiano & Co., Washington, D. C. Secretary C. E. Kendel, of the association, suggested a shorter credit period than 90 days.

Application for membership in the association was received from Fred H. Hunter, San Francisco, and the Haven Seed Co., Santa Ana, Calif., and posted for action.

The banquet Wednesday evening, at the Commercial Club was characteristically Californian and a most enjoyable affair. An excellent repast, savored with music, toasts and repartee, marked the close of an interesting day. The finale of the evening was the presentation by Waldo Rohnert of a handsome gold timepiece to retiring President Morse, who was very agreeably surprised and in voicing his appreciation quoted Holy Writ as follows: "What I say unto one, I do unto all—watch!"

Thursday morning's session was of an executive nature. After the announcements, the reports of committees on obituary, auditing, legislation, etc., were made, followed by the report of the attorney, Curtis Nye Smith, and a discussion on legislative matters. The election and installation of officers, endorsement of next meeting place, new business, crop reports, etc., closed the session.

Election of Officers.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., president; Kirby B. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., first vice-president; F. W. Bolgiano, of F. W. Bolgiano & Co., Washington. D. C., second vice-president; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., secretary-treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., assistant secretary; Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; C. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; H. Simmers, Toronto, Ont.; Watson S. Woodruff, New York, executive committee. The membership committee, consisting of Albert McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Ben P. Corneli, St. Louis, Mo., and H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga., was re-elected.

Seed Farms Visited.

Friday, June 25, escorted by a special committee consisting of L. M. Kimberlin and W. Rohnert, visits were made to the seed farms of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif., and thence by auto to the establishment of C. C. Morse & Co., Breen Ranch and Flint Ranch, arriving at San Juan at noon, where a barbecue dinner was served on the Old Mission plaza. The Braslan Seed Growers' Co. and the California Seed Growers' Association's ranches, at Fairview, Waldo Rohnert, Kimberlin Seed Co., and others were visited during the afternoon, arriving at San Jose early in the evening, where the party was met by E. O. Pieper, who acted as a special committee for that evening and the following day. After a banquet and a night's rest at the Hotel Vendome, a trip was made Saturday to a number of ranches in the neighborhood, including those of D. G. Fisher and J. R. Freitas, of California Seed Growers' Association; Braslan Seed Growers' Hall ranch, W. J. Fosgate, and the Russell and Hughes ranches of the Kimberlin Seed Co. Upon arrival at the Country club a noon luncheon was served, after which the party returned to San Francisco and dispersed.

President-Elect Lupton.

YARRAWA

The Sweet Pea par-excellence for Winter Flowering under glass.

YARRAWA is absolutely fixed—true to color and type.

YARRAWA is an easy and good "doer," invariably giving an excellent account of itself whether grown in pots, boxes, raised benches or solid beds. YARRAWA has the heavy foliage and rank strong growth of the summer flowering type and is a true winter blooming Spencer. From seed sown early in October at Fordhook Farms, the plants came into bloom December 20th and flowered profusely until May. The flowers are exquisitely waved and when well grown will average two and one-half inches in diameter, many of them being duplex, or double flowered, thus adding greatly to the general effect of the bunch. They are borne usually in fours on extra long, strong stems. The color is a most pleasing shade of bright rose pink, with light wings. As the supply of seed will be limited we advise ordering early.

Floradale-grown seed exclusively—¼ oz., $1.00; per oz., $3.50; ¼ lb., $12.50.

that of a farmer until 1882. He organized a seed growing business at that time, making a specialty of producing cabbage seed and giving attention to the improvement of the varieties by selection. In 1910 his son Robert was admitted to partnership. The firm is now J. M. Lupton & Son.

Next Meeting Place.

Cincinnati was endorsed by the convention for 1916, but as usual the final decision in this matter will be made at the meeting of the executive committee next January.

Convention Jottings.

Thirty-five autos were employed on the seed farm inspection tour and 185 attended the San Juan barbecue. About 200 attended the banquet at the Hotel Vendome, June 25, where Bertram A. Herrington, ex-district attorney, Santa Clara county, officiated as toastmaster. The other speakers included retiring president L. L. Morse, ex-President Watson S. Woodruff, M. L. Germain, ex-President C. C. Massie, L. C. Routzahn, J. Chas. McCullough, W. C. Langbridge, A. J. Brown, President-elect J. M. Lupton, Kirby B. White, Peter Hollenbach, C. E. Kendel, Howard M. Earl, August H. Vogeler and ex-President J. C. Robinson.

T. H. Hopkins, manager of the John H. Allan Seed Co. branch at St. Anthony, Idaho, reports the pea crop in his section of Idaho, comprising between 30,000 and 35,000 acres, has been subjected to a month of backward weather, which has, however, done no material damage to the crop up to the present time, and with normally favorable conditions from now on a good average yield of peas is expected.

The Victor Johansen Seed Co., Los Angeles, Calif., was represented at the convention by O. W. Johansen. This firm grows flower seeds exclusively. Mr. Johansen says that prospects are not very good on account of the exceedingly wet spring, which delayed the planting season. They are now looking forward to a fair average crop, however. The aphis has done considerable damage to sweet peas.

S. F. Leonard, of the S. F. Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, says their party had a fine time in the Grand Canyon, it being an elegant day and every one in fine spirits. The scant population of many of the far western states impressed him strongly, the states of Montana, Idaho, Nevada,

H. Trimble McCullough, Solvang, Santa Barbara, Calif., reports that the season is not sufficiently advanced to tell much about the bean crop in his locality as yet, although prospects seem very fair.

At the Pieters-Wheeler ranch the inspection party got out of the autos, rested and were refreshed by Mrs. Wheeler providing them with lemonade.

Moth Quarantine in New England.

The presence of gypsy moth and brown-tail moth in parts of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut has caused the United States department of agriculture to place the sections affected under quarantine, effective on and after July 1, 1915. Notice of quarantine No. 22, with regulations, has been issued by the department covering the situation.

Viticultural Congress Called.

The official programme of the first international congress of viticulture to be held in the United States at the Panama-Pacific exposition, San Francisco, Calif., July 11-16 has been issued. Forestry in New York State.

At a hearing, May 18, before the committee on conservation and natural resources of the Constitutional convention, Professor Hugh P. Baker, dean of the State College of Forestry at Syracuse, urged that the state forests be made to produce revenue. He would abandon the present policy under which the forests are protected against timber cutting. He said "the virgin forest should be left standing as a monument of what the Adirondack forests once were," within a zone comprising from twenty-five to thirty per cent of the entire area. The rest should be used so as to produce revenues, always under safeguards that would prevent indiscriminate lumbering or denudation.

"The annual lumber bill of this state is something like $100,000,000," said Professor Baker. "We spend from $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 in the south annually for timber, while our own forests are rotting away. The federal government is conducting timber cutting operations in the Rockies and the Cascades in a manner which actually has improved the forests there and yet the revenue last year was more than $2,000,000."

"Where would you find your virgin forest to stand as a monument" asked H. Leroy Austin, who was Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner under Governor Hughes and who is a delegate to the constitutional convention. "They have been cutting timber over ninety-five per cent of the entire area of the state's forest preserve."

Kenneth Goldthwaite, editor of The Adirondack Enterprise, took the opposite view. He said the Adirondack forests were in worse shape now than they were twenty years ago, when the state adopted its present policy of protection. He urged that all timber cutting be prohibited and that the state adopt an extensive policy of reforestation.

"If $30,000,000 were spent by the state in the next thirty years for reforestation, then there would be an opportunity for timber cutting afterward that would yield the state, according to a careful estimate, some $10,500,000 a year. For the present the slogan should be: Plant more trees, permit no cutting, protect the forests better from fire."

John Watson, Newark, N. Y.
Vice-President-Elect American Association of Nurserymen.

Mr. Watson is a Member of the Firm of Jackson & Perkins Co., and Well Known to Florists as Well as Nurserymen Throughout the Country. His Father was Vice-President of the Nurserymen's Organization 36 Years Ago.

American Association of Nurserymen.

The fortieth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen which opened at Detroit, Mich., June 23, as reported in these columns last week, came to a close, Friday, June 25, and has passed into history as one of the most successful and interesting meetings in the annals of the organization. Papers and discussions, varied and bearing upon many problems of interest to members of the association, were features of the session.

J. R. Mayhew's address on "A Better National Association," was a forceful and logical plea for the entire elimination of the evils that at present beset the progress of nurserymen. He claimed the feasibility of his proposed measures if sufficient funds were available, and to that end suggested the maintenance of the present fee of five dollars for active membership, and an added associate membership fee of ten dollars each with dues for the former based upon total sales approximating a tenth of one per cent of the dealer's income. This was the most drastic measure recommended in his address, which called for many amendments of the present constitution and by-laws. President Chase appointed the following committee to carefully consider Mr. Mayhew's recommendations and report its findings at the opening session Thursday morning: J. R. Mayhew, E. S. Welch, Theo. Smith, R. C. Chase, Robt. George, F. H. Stannard, J. W. Hill, W. C. Reid, John Watson, Wilmer Hoppes, Peter Youngers, F. J. Ferguson.

The report of the committee Thursday morning was embodied in a resolution offered by the chairman embracing all the recommendations made by Mr. Mayhew and after a most spirited discussion was finally adopted as read. J. Horace McFarland in the discussion of the proposed measures made a hard fight for more publicity for nursery products, publicity which he claimed the new by-laws did not make sufficient provision for. The committee accepted his recommendations and the same was incorporated in the resolution, which was later adapted.

At the Friday morning session very interesting papers were read, including, "New Wrinkles in the Art of Propagating," by J. Jenkins, Winona, O.; "The Real Effect of Price Cutting on the Total Consumption of Nursery Stock," by Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; "Deal Direct the Catalogue Way," by W. J. Maloney, Danville, N. Y., and a paper by J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O., bearing on the cause and cure of rejections.

A resolution was offered by F. W. Kelsey, New York, and adopted asking that railroads and other common carriers adopt a system of tracing of nursery stock shipments, which would eliminate costly delays. A resolution protesting against the recent action of the Trunk Line Association's classification committee in arbitrarily changing the classification on carload shipments of all nursery material from fifth to fourth class was passed. This change entails an increase of 20 to 25 per cent over the already high rates prevailing to June 1.

Election of Officers.

At Friday's session the following were elected to serve for the ensuing year: E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., president; John Watson, Newark, N. Y., vice-president; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., secretary; Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb., treasurer. Executive committee: One year—J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo. Two years—J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Henry B. Chase, Chase, Ala. Three years—J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; Theo. J. Smith, Geneva, N. Y.

Milwaukee, Wis., was selected as the place of the 1916 convention.

Before adjournment, provision was made for the maintenance of an arbitration board, consisting of five members appointed by the executive committee. All members shall in the future submit their trade disputes to this arbitration board, where findings shall be binding upon all. Any one refusing to abide by the same, may be at the discretion of the executive committee expelled from membership in the association.

At a meeting of the executive board, after the adjournment of the meeting, John Hall was re-appointed secretary of the association.

Seen and Heard at the Convention.

F. W. Kelsey, of the Kelsey Nursery Co., New York, with his wife, visited his brother, Dr. Kelsey, a member of the faculty at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich., over Saturday and Sunday.

Secretary John Hall's rare efficiency was at all times apparent. He appeared to know the correct address of nearly every one who registered, without reference to the badge book. Mr. Hall, who was accompanied by his wife, visited their son, W. S. Hall, of the Lewis & Hall Iron Co. here.

President H. B. Chase made an admirable presiding officer. Parliamentary rules were observed and the most courteous consideration given at all times to the disputants, and the lengthy program was carried out completely.

D. Hill, of the D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill., visited some intimate friends here, as well as many of the firm's customers.

Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., delivered his steroptican lecture on "Roses," at Grosse Pointe, Mich., Tuesday, June 22, and visited some of the rose gardens of that place and Detroit, where he saw many splendid specimens.

Ex-President J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, was the most forceful and F. W. Kelsey, N. Y., the most polished speakers in the many animated discussions that characterized the meetings.

The response of James Pitkin, Newark, N. Y., to the mayor's address of welcome, was a gem for brevity and clever trade publicity.

President H. B. Chase's urgency of southern growers to diversified farming met with responsive approbation of all who have so long witnessed the disastrous repetition of cotton crops.

J. R. Mayhew's plea for a large, forceful, efficient organization and the elimination of state and district organizations was novel, but logical, and won the approval of the thoughtful members.

Many delegates were amazed at the extent of the automobile industry as seen at the many plants visited.

Many delegates claimed this to be the most businesslike convention the organization ever had.

Many compliments were paid to THE AMERICAN FLORIST for the advance pages covering the proceedings, appearing in the hall Thursday.

Legislative Committee Report.

The report of Wm. Pitkin, chairman of the committee on legislation east of the Mississippi river, was presented and was supplemented by a verbal report of a conference with Curtis Nye Smith of Boston, Mass., attorney for the American Seed Trade Association, and for the executive and legislative committees of the American Association of Nurserymen.

The result of this conference was a recommendation that Mr. Smith be employed as general counsel of the Association of American Nurserymen, his duties in substance being to keep informed of proposed legislation at Washington and in the various states and advise and direct the handling of such legislative matters, to give frequent information to members as to the requirements of state laws, and to give from time to time to the individual members of the association such legal advice as they might need in connection with their business. Under the reorganization plan of the association this matter was referred to the executive committee, and the details are now under consideration and will undoubtedly be carried out and can be reported on definitely within a short time.

The committee on uniform state legislation had a conference with Professors Sanders, Warsham and Washburn, representing the horticultural inspectors, and Orlando Harrison and E. R. Lake, representing the American Pomological Society, and an agreement was arrived at on the draft of a bill for uniform state legislation, and as a result the three associations are in an agreement as to the terms of the proposed bill. This was duly reported and a resolution passed approving the action of the committee and authorizing the committee to continue its labors and secure as rapidly as possible the enactment of the law in the various states. The details of further work yet remain to be arranged, but will be announced from time to time.

Nursery Trade as a Business Proposition.

A paper read at the meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen, Detroit, Mich., June 24, 1915, by W. H. Wyman, of the Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, Mass.

No one who is in the nursery business today, or who has a fair knowledge of the history of the business, can doubt that it is a proposition, for comparatively few, out of the many who call themselves nurserymen, have attained a reasonable degree of success; while many more have a name to live, but in reality are leading a precarious existence; still others have entirely fallen out and cast their wreckage upon the shoulders of too many with whom they have had to do. In this business, a few only succeed, while the great majority come far short of success, if they do not utterly fail. It may be said that the same is true of every business. With that proposition we are not to concern ourselves now. We are nurserymen, and if I rightly comprehend the import of this organization we are here for improvement; we have come together from all over this great country stretching from ocean to ocean, to clasp hands in friendly intercourse, to exchange ideas as well as wares, and to be inspired, if possible, to greater and nobler attainments in our avocation.

One ambition animates every one of us. We all want to succeed, and this is true of every man, strange as the proposition may seem. Some may be led to doubt that assertion, but I aver that it is true. All men court success, but from your view-point, they could not, if they studied diligently, do that which would more surely bring defeat than by continuing on in the course they are pursuing. By way of illustration, suppose a young man starts in business without capital; he will be given a chance. Everybody will help a fellow to make a start Brotherly kindness is not dead. If he deals on the square and works hard and lives up to his obligations, providing he has a fair amount of business sagacity, he can succeed. But if, on the other hand, he tries a short cut to success, forfeiting his word, and disregarding his obligations, his doom is sealed. The picture is not overdrawn. A few succeed in the nursery business, while many fail. Why is it? Is it because of its peculiarities? Is it hedged about by obstacles so many and so great as to make success almost unattainable?

The fact that some succeed proves that the difficulties, however great, are not unsurmountable. What would the business world think of a shoe manufacturer who would take an order for a thousand cases of shoes, and who did not know just what it would cost to manufacture these shoes? Such a manufacturer would be ruled out of the business. It is of no use to manufacture shoes or trees unless it can be done at a profit, and to do it at a sure profit, the cost of production must be ascertained with a reasonable degree of certainty. In the case of most manufactured articles, that is a comparatively easy task, but not so with the nursery business. The superficial method of figuring costs is the one most generally employed whenever such an attempt is made. That is, an acre of land will yield a given number of plants, say 14,000. It costs so much for the stock plants, so much to set them out, so much to cultivate the land per year, so much to bud or graft them, and so much more to dig and put them on the market. But that is not enough. The rental of the land, or the depletion of the soil, in case one owns his land; the losses incurred by climatic conditions, such as excessive rain, no rain, frosts, hail, snow and many more such natural contingencies, must not be left out of account. Then again the depreciation of tools, machinery and buildings must not be overlooked; interest on the investment and a list of overhead charges all enter into the cost of production. Neither is this all. Thirty years ago this catalogue of expenses would have been about all that would have had to be considered, but not so now. Insect pests, save the old tent caterpillar, were unknown. Even a quarter of a century ago, who had heard, or much less seen the San Jose scale, the brown-tail, gipsy, leopard moths or the white pine blister rust? I had not; but now all of us are familiar with some if not all of them; and we know too, that these things add to the cost of production. And yet while they add to the cost of production, they must not be regarded as unmitigated evils, any more than weeds should be. Weeds compel cultivation and hence growth; pests compel cleaning up of the nursery and its surroundings; they conduce to cleanliness. I venture the assertion that never in the history of the nursery business in this country, were there so many tidy, well-kept nurseries as there are today, and in a large measure the pests are responsible for this state of things. While all this, and even more is true, the fact remains, that these pests, so called, have added very materially to the cost of production.

All of these things must be taken into account in determining costs, and when all have been taken into account, we can arrive at the cost of production only relatively at best. But that relative cost makes a basis at which to begin. In our school-days, we wrestled with algebraic propositions, with known and unknown quantities. The unknown values in the equation were represented by such characters as x, y and z. Now we wrestle with problems, known as costs, and costs that are unknown. In the one case we could determine the value of the unknown by the known values, but not so with such unknown quantities as storms, draught, wind and hail. These unknown quantities must be determined not by algebraic process, but by liberal additions. A safe way is that of the druggist, who adds to the cost price his two per cent. If we figure that a given plant cost (using the known values) $20 per 1,000 to produce it, I have regarded it a safe proposition to multiply that by two. In some instances that would seem excessive; in others it would fall below the actual cost. On the whole I believe it is a safe rule to follow in determining costs. But we must not stop here, when we have considered this side of the equation, for it is at this point, that, with many, the tug of war begins.

Nurserymen are beset by dangers from without and foes from within their own camp. It is for the elimination of some of these deterrent factors that I beg every one of you to give due consideration. The plunger is a party to be avoided. The man who sells 10,000 Viburnum plicatum at a profit, year after year, starts in to increase that product by propagating 100,000. That is the man I would style a plunger, and the man who should be dissuaded from such folly. I simply use Viburnum plicatum as an illustration. The market calls for about such a number of plants of a given species. The number increases from year to year, as the volume of nursery business increases, and every growing concern has a right to increase its plantings, but it has no moral right to propagate any article so much in excess of the legitimate demand that it is compelled, in order to unload, to do so at any price, regardless of cost. I say we have no moral right to such a course. There maybe no written law forbidding me to sell an article for any price I please, but there is a moral law that forbids my doing so. No man has a right deliberately to destroy the opportunities of livelihood and of gain for any other man. Such a course works hardship to the many, and ruin to a possible few. The course of the plunger leads from bad to worse. It is loading the dice in the game of business. It is to invite financial disaster upon the perpetrator and disaster upon others. The logical result of plunging in production, is price-cutting at the selling end. The grocer who begins his career by cutting prices below a reasonable percentage of profit, works no good to a community. He is the man who should be shunned. He disturbs values and throws legitimate business out of the normal. He may run along for a while and make a big bluster in his community, but the day is sure to come when he, in a night, like the Arab of the desert, will fold his tent and get away or, what may be worse, have his tent folded for him, by order of the courts. The result is, legitimate business has suffered, the public has become bewitched by the bargain counter idea in trade, and no one has been benefited. The legitimate child of plunging in production is price-cutting that works no good to any and much harm to all. It may be urged that price-cutting is sometimes indulged in by those who do little, if any producing. That is true. Hawkers and dry-goods houses cut under the nurserymen in selling a few articles such as roses, California privet and the like; but they are in a class by themselves, and for this very nuisance the nurserymen are themselves responsible. What nurseryman will lower the dignity of his business by considering for one moment the prices at which these people, who have no investment in the business, but who sell stock they have been able to procure from some plunger or inconsiderate nurseryman? Plunging in production and its attendant evil, are evils which we should set ourselves to correct. I fancy I hear some one saying, "What shall be done when everybody has gone wild in production; when such a condition prevails again as that which pertained the past season, as in the case of apple trees"? Probably no one will learn anything from his folly in the past, and the majority will cut and slash prices again, should occasion arise; and advertise far and wide, "Apples for five cents to the trade, and ten cents to the public and if not ten cents, then anything." This is what happened within six months, and it is what will probably happen until we nurserymen become sane and sensible business men. Under such circumstances, what should we do? We should be men and have some "esprit de corps" for our craft. We should set our price where it will give us a reasonable profit, and we should stick to that price when once it has been established. In that event we may not sell all of our stock, quite true; but we shall get as much money for what we sell at a reasonable price, as we shall for all of it, sold at any ridiculously low price; and we shall not have ruined our prospects for another year. What do, then, with the surplus? By all means burn it. The bonfire is one of the best paying propositions in such a case. When prices are so reduced, it follows that quality suffers. When selling so cheaply everything must go. When there is an overabundance, the highest standards of quality should be maintained. There is no time when an article cannot be marketed at a profit, if only men will hold themselves to the proposition that they will not sell, unless it can be done at a fair percentage of gain. This does not follow that we have got to come together in convention and attempt to set a price on our wares; nothing of the kind. To attempt that would be to invite disaster. But we can, every one of us, say that if we cannot sell our stock at a profit, we will not sell at all. The result will be; that if we hold to that proposition, we shall all sell enough of our stock, so that we shall all make some money, even if we are obliged to burn a part of it. If we cannot make money, we are inviting disaster, and the quicker we hoist the white flag and go out of business, the better for what possessions we may have, and for the business in which we are engaged.

In the event of each man's fixing his price based upon the cost, plus a reasonable profit, there would be no uniformity of price, and that is what we do not want. That would work injustice, for there is not and never can be a uniformity in quality of stock and of service. In the nature of things these cannot be standardized, for the personal element enters into them. When I purchase stock of a given size of one party, I am willing to pay more than I would for the same size stock from some other party. In the one case I know that the name of the concern carries with it a degree of quality that I can depend upon. And this leads me to the crux of the whole matter. Our rivalry should not be in cutting prices to gain business, but in perfecting the quality of our stock and quality of our service.

Celery Planting.

Years ago we used to dread celery planting as the prevailing hot weather made this always a tedious, and often risky job. We have seen good, strong plants completely burned up in spite of several good waterings around the roots. Nowadays, with mechanical watering, the whole thing is a pleasure. By moistening the entire area the plants never suffer a particle, no matter how hot, and a perfect stand is the result. The writer has often said that a planter should be fined 25 cents for each plant that fails to grow—so important is a perfect stand in the celery business. It is not only the vacancy—but the plants next to the empty spot do not develop properly. These with excessive space will grow sprawly and sucker heavily, and an uneven lot is the result. Also the spacing is important—it must be uniform to produce a uniform crop.

The early crop we plant in rows six inches apart, the rows spaced 30 inches to permit the free use of the horse implements. The late crop we crowd a trifle more in the rows 5 inches and the rows four feet apart. The early crop is bleached by the use of 10-inch boards and the late crop banked with earth, using horse tools.

To produce a uniform crop of celery, it is absolutely necessary that the plants be uniform. When several sizes must be used it is best to sort into two or three grades and plant each lot separate; otherwise, the large ones will soon overpower the small ones and a bad lot results. Celery plants are exceedingly sensitive to dryness, hence the plants must be protected at all times. We have seen fine plants permanently hurt by exposing to hot sun and dry wind a few moments while digging or planting. We have found it cheaper in the long run to use only transplanted plants; therefore we prick our seedlings into cold frames in May, 2x2 inches, which gives us a uniform lot of plants well rooted in June. In our opinion there is nothing gained by wishing for cool weather, provided water is at hand—plant the first opportunity you can.

MARKETMAN.

Newport, R. I.

The June rose show, under the auspices of the Garden Association, assisted by the Newport Horticultural Society, was held on the Garden Association's new grounds, corner of Old Beach road and Gibbs avenue. These grounds are laid out as a permanent exhibition grounds and have already been planted in part with contributions by Mrs. Arthur Curtis James, Mrs. Stewart Duncan and Mrs. Hugh D. Anchincloss. The association is composed of society people and others interested in the advancement of floriculture.

The exhibits were shown under a tent and also in the open. The show was open from 2 until 8 p. m., admission being free. The first day was wet and the inclement weather put a damper on things. The second day was fine and there was a good exhibition and attendance. Owing to unfavorable weather conditions the rose growers claim that roses were not at their best, and the exhibit of roses on the whole was only a fair representation of what might have been had the conditions been otherwise. There was a fine exhibit of Canterbury bells and calceolarias and a bed of Viola cornuta atropurpurea, which is catalogued as a new, deep-violet blue, flowers all summer. It seems to the writer that this viola ought to find a place in cemetery work as it is compact and low growing and outside of cemetery work it looks like a grand good thing.

The best collection of named hybrid perpetual roses was awarded to William Waldorf Astor, (Hugh Williamson, Gr.); the best display arranged for effect went to Robert W. Goelet (Colin Robertson, Gr). For the best collection other than hybrid or tea roses the award was taken by A. F. Fish, New Bedford, Mass. For the best collection of tea and hybrid tea Colonel H. E. Converse, (David Ray, Gr.), captured the honors. Mrs. William Leeds, (William Grey, Gr.) was winner of several first prizes in the ing the summer at Lily Point Villa, rose classes.

In the strawberry classes for the best dish of Gandy First, Mrs. French Vanderbilt (Daniel Hays, Gr.) was first. A dish of Nick Ohmer, shown by David Ray, seemed to be the favorite strawberry.

Under the head of centerpieces, fancy baskets and vases, the fancy basket shown by Mrs. W. W. Sherman (Andrew Ramsay, Gr.) took first prize. This basket was round, with a tall handle and was filled with Mrs. Aaron Ward roses and rose foliage with a large bow of orange-yellow ribbon. The basket and roses matched in color and the whole was strikingly handsome and thought well enough of by the judges to award it the American Rose Society's bronze medal.

The best centerpiece was shown by Mrs. W. B. Leeds. The base of this basket was filled with Rhea Reid roses and foliage and had a tall tapering vase in the centre filled likewise. The Rhea Reid rose was shown in several classes and it attracted much attention, arranged both in single and bunches, and was awarded first prize for the best 12 outdoor hybrid tea roses. These were exhibited by Mrs. W. B. Leeds.

In the special awards, the American Rose Society's bronze medal was awarded to Mrs. William Waldorf Astor, for a splendid exhibition of hybrid perpetual roses. Mrs. W. B. Leeds won the silver medal of the American Rose Society for her exhibit of roses of the hybrid tea varieties. J. B. B.

RAINS AND HEAVY WINDS CAUSE DAMAGE.

The continual heavy rains have caused quite serious flooded conditions in several parts of the city. Wheeler park, which lies close to the banks of the Canadian river, is inundated in many places, particularly so in that part where the "Zoo" is located, and some parts of the flower garden have been temporarily spoiled by the high waters. A 74-mile an hour gale blew for over one hour in the early morning, June 25, and thousands of shade trees throughout the city were damaged, many of them irreparably. The flower business is beginning to take on its usual summer quiescent attitude, and it may safely be said that the busy season is over. Both the florists and the seedsmen are unanimous in declaring that the business season so far this year has been eminently satisfactory and shows quite an increase over preceding seasons.

NOTES.

The annual flower show of the city will be held, July 3, in the store rooms at 122 West Main street. This exhibition is under the auspices of the "Women of 89," an association that has done much good work toward the promoting of horticultural and civic betterment throughout the city.

We are informed that an agreement has been reached among the three retail stores to close at 6 p. m. every day during the months of July and August.

Geo. W. Stiles has gone to Chicago, leaving June 24, for a brief business trip.

J. W. Furrow, of Furrow & Co., is in Chicago on a business trip.

S. S. B.

HILLSBORO, ORE.—Business has been very satisfactory this season, according to W. H. Morton, manager of the Hillsboro Plant and Flower Garden. Crops are looking fine and there has been plenty of rain. Outside flowers are now affecting the price of indoor stock, and time for preparations for fall is being taken advantage of.

HOME GROWN, WELL ESTABLISHED, STRONG AND HEALTHY.

Fredericton, N. B.

Trade has kept up exceptionally well all spring. Although the weather has been generally cool, cloudy and backward, it has favored tulips and prolonged their season, which is from May 10 on until June, but a few sunny days now and peonies will be in, as they are due in about a week, the latter part of June. We have been fortunate in absence of frosts this spring in this section, as about the middle of June last year beans and all tender plants were killed and had to be resown. There has been a good demand for tomato, cabbage, cauliflower and celery plants; also for lettuce for table use all spring. The call for stock for window boxes, vases and bedding has been excellent. Sweet peas have enjoyed a good call, are now looking fine and producing well. The cool weather has suited them admirably. Some years ago the local public looked upon flowers and flower gardens with distaste, but now it seems that they are returning to their wonted popularity; a case of history repeating itself.

Several hundred of our finest men have already left to join the colors at the front. Three detachments have already gone and we are preparing for another to follow. They are loyal to the core here.

There is a great prospect of a heavy hay crop, the abundance of rain being in its favor. J. B.

Newark, N. J.

The growers of carnations and chrysanthemums are well up with their work, the planting of chrysanthemums being pushed. Though carnations in the houses are on the wane, we found some very passable stock.

E. Brunner, 256 Chancellor avenue, has planted a fine stock of chrysanthemums. Albert Brunner, also on Chancellor avenue, is growing ferns and other plants in addition to cut flowers.

At Hahn & Co.'s department store both cut flowers and plants are being sold. This department is managed by Harry Stein.

At August C. Bergerow's, Philips Brothers', the Stroebels' and other stores there is evidence of prosperity.

Eswell Kemp, near the Catholic cemetery, has a considerable glass area and does a good business in plants.

The Ivy Flower Shop, 454 South Orange avenue, which was opened about a year ago, seems prosperous.

At W. G. Muller's, on Lyons avenue, we found a fine healthy stock of carnations in the field.

CALUMET, MICH. — August Jurgens and Anton Then, of Chicago, are here supervising work on their peony plantations.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Delphiniums.

This perennial has become quite a popular cut flower for summer use and is very decorative and showy. Those that have a stock can increase the plants of the better varieties by propagation at this time. When the plants bloom those that produce the best spikes and are of the best colors should be marked. After the blooms are cut the small growths that break from the stem are very easily rooted. Prepare a bed in a shaded frame and insert the cuttings, watering heavily when first put in. They will need frequent syringing during the hot weather and will root in three to four weeks, when they can be either potted or planted in a frame where they can be given attention. As soon as well established they can be planted in their permanent location, but should be given a little protection during the first winter by throwing a little old straw or some such material over them.

Pansies.

For winter blooming the seed of pansies should be sown early. Procure a strain of seed that will produce large flowers, and unless they are to be grown in considerable quantities mixed colors are to be preferred. To obtain plants enough for winter blooming it will be better to plant the seed in flats and place them in a cool shady location in the house, where they are much more easily cared for than out in the open. If such a location is not to be had they can be sown in a cold frame and a sash that is quite heavily shaded placed over them until the plants begin to grow. As soon as large enough they should be planted in a cold frame until the bench is made ready, about the middle of September, in the house. The soil for winter growing should be good, and of the richest, in order to obtain large flowers, and the house in which they are planted should be maintained at a cool temperature, about 45 degrees at night after settled fall and winter weather commences. Pansies are not, as a rule, troubled much with insect pests, but sometimes in the fall in the houses they are attacked by green fly and they are quickly checked in their growth if the aphis gets a good hold upon them. A careful watch should be maintained and if they are found to be infested with aphis constant spraying with nicotine solutions will keep the insects down.

Roman Hyacinths.

The first bulbs to arrive will be the Roman hyacinths, and everything should be in readiness to properly care for them as soon as received. When the cases arrive the bulbs should be placed in a cool, dry place; if packed in bags they should be spread out either in flats or shallow boxes and placed where they will neither be too moist nor yet in too dry and warm a location. While it is too early to plant for the winter blooming, still a succession of plantings may be made every week until cool weather, when the balance can be planted up. Almost any soil will grow bulbs successfully but fine results are obtained with soil that has been thrown out from the carnation or rose benches and has lain out over winter to allow it to sweeten a little. When a fall pot plant is wanted a few of the hyacinth bulbs can be planted in bulb pots, but in growing for cut flowers flats are to be preferred, for they are much more economically handled and do not require as much care. In planting the bulbs cover the bottom of the flats with about an inch of soil, placing the bulbs on this quite closely together, yet not touching, as can be done with other bulbs. The flat should then be filled with soil, which should be packed between the bulbs with the ends of the fingers. They should then be given a good watering, enough to wet the soil all the way through and settle it around the bulb. The flats should be placed outside and covered to the depth of about three inches with sand or coal ashes or something that will lie close enough to prevent drying out. A label should be placed at the end with the date of planting, so that the several plantings will be kept separate and can be readily moved into the houses. In four to six weeks they should be well enough rooted to bring them into the house, where they can be placed under a bench until they begin to throw up their flowering spikes.

Office Housecleaning.

Nearly all growing establishments at the present day have what is termed the office, and during the busy season, in many places, but little attention is given to keep it in a tidy condition. Now is the time, after the carnations are housed and before the fall work commences, to have a thorough cleaning up of the office and workroom and get them in readiness for the coming season. Get all the papers filed away in proper shape and fix up all accounts as far as possible, and thereby get rid of much of the worry and trouble. Clean up the workroom and give it a clean coat of paint, and straighten out the supplies. If the stock of baskets has grown dirty get a little gold paint and give them a coat of this, which will certainly make them more attractive than the dingy supplies too often seen hanging on the walls or standing around. The florist too seldom appreciates how the customer likes to trade in a clean, up-to-date place, and often endeavors to excuse the dirty appearance by remarking: "It is impossible where so much dirt is handled to keep the place clean." Such a one is only fooling himself. The present-day customers, of whom many are ladies, know better; they see other places that are kept neat and clean, and they cannot be imposed upon with such tales. Now is the time to get everything shipshape for the fall and winter trade.

Asparagus Baskets.

There is always a good call for hanging baskets of Asparagus Sprengeri and there is nothing more decorative in a store or greenhouse than these beautiful baskets when well put up and when they are growing nicely. The young 3-inch stock will make nice basket work. The wire basket frame should be of good size, eight inches in diameter at least. Line the outside with green sheet moss, which makes a much better appearance than sphagnum, and then fill with good rich soil and plant the young plants in this. The basket, after planting, should be placed in a warm, moist house to encourage rapid growth; a house with a temperature such as palms are grown in is about right. They should be frequently syringed, and as soon as the long fronds have made a good growth they can be removed to lighter and cooler quarters.

Anemone Japonica.

One of the most useful perennials for the fall is the Anemone Japonica. It blooms at a time when flowers are very scarce, and if planted where it can be protected from the early frosts will produce quantities of bloom that can be made of use in all classes of floral work. The successful blooming of this plant depends much upon its summer culture. If the season is dry it will require constant watering, in fact, a good soaking. It is a good plan to place the hose in a bed of this and let the water run until the ground is thoroughly wet, and do this as often as may be required. It will amply repay in the long, strong shoots, full of blooms, that will be produced in the fall. The florist not possessing a good stock of this beautiful perennial should procure some of it and plant a bed for fall cutting.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Samuel Murray's New Flower Shop.

Samuel Murray's new flower store, 1017 Grand avenue, Kansas City, Mo., as shown in the accompanying illustrations, unique and up-to-date in its arrangement in every way, has been the recipient of many compliments since its opening, June 2. Located as it is in the center of the shopping district of the city, it has already become a point of interest to flower lovers of that city, with its attractive window arrangements and its tasty interior always filled with choice stock.

The fixtures are up-to-date and attractive, the color scheme being carried out in buff, the lower parts of the walls presenting a wainscoating effect of rough finished brick, above which an effect of rough stone is extended to the ceiling. A balcony offers excellent opportunity for the arrangement of plants and fancy baskets. Four domes in the ceiling with electrical effects also give opportunity for artistic display of plants.

Many beautiful floral arrangements accompanied by expressions of good will and wishes of success were received by Mr. Murray from friends in the trade, both local and from distant points, and the floral decoration of the store was beautiful in the fullest sense of the word. A gold horse shoe, from Arnold Ringier, Chicago, a life long friend, was placed over the door.

The brightness of Mr. Murray's new "home", as he calls it, however, does not eclipse the clever personality of his force, many of whom have been with him for periods ranging from five years to a quarter of a century. Among these are William Sharpe, who has been with Mr. Murray for 25 years; Misses Mary and Elizabeth Hayden, 16 years and 9 years respectively; William Reed and a number of others whose faces have been familiar to the store's patrons for some time past.

When Flowers are Plentiful.

In the early fall, before the city folk are all home, the markets ofttimes become overstocked to a degree that appears alarming. What to do with the immense quantities that keep coming in on top of those of yesterday, for which there was little or no demand, is a problem that tries to the utmost the best minds in the trade. The general consensus of opinion is that there must be created a new outlet, some way in which to get the people, the general public, those who have an idea that flowers are too expensive for their purse, to see them and learn the low price at which they can be purchased when large crops are in. The regular stores buy all they have demand for, or can sell in their comparatively limited way. Now, can they by special efforts push the sale at price reductions, and can they get the people to the store while such prices prevail, or will it happen that just as they begin to get interested the market shortens up with consequent higher prices?

The department stores who have the people all the time, crowds and more crowds daily, find a ready market for large quantities of roses, running into 10,000. and even 20,000 or more on bargain days. Now the question is: Would all the other people or a reasonable portion of them, who did not get to the department stores that day, purchase in the same way, could they have the flowers brought to their attention? The chances are they would, at least for a time, as long as the low prices prevailed, or the price matched their purses.

Now, how is this to be done? Some enterprising men are already in the field, carrying large stocks and offering them at low prices on certain days, when by buying in quantities they can offer flowers at very low rates. A man with two or more stores has an advantage over his neighbor, with only one place of business, as he can by buying in larger quantities get more favorable terms and sell at lower prices. At such sales cash is a great factor; most people expect to pay the money and where the margin is small, as it must be in such cases, it is the only safe way. With a store doing a larger volume of business and appealing to the middle or wealthy class, a quantity of flowers may be moved at special prices by sending out sample boxes showing the goods and the special prices they are offered for at that time. Everybody likes a bargain and many are tempted to buy flowers they have no special use for, just because they look good and are so cheap. Whether sales immediately follow or not, the effort to make them is not lost, as every one appreciates the gift which is pretty sure to be remembered later. Offers to supply flowers during this period three times a week at low figures will sometimes secure orders which may be continued at a higher figure as prices rise.

The point is that three-dollar-a-hundred roses can be bought at half the money or less, if purchased by the thousand, the problem being, to in some way create a market for them. There is no question that to a greater or less extent, depending on location and other circumstances, a wider market could be opened if the proper methods were pursued. A list of certain customers for early in the week, another for later, others for the week following and so on. It would cost something, but as an advertising scheme it should bring excellent results. The store would be kept in mind and have excellent chance at any early orders.

ATLANTA, GA.—The City Federation of Women's Clubs will petition the state legislature at its next session to adopt the Cherokee rose officially as the state flower. The enactment of a law to make damage to holly trees a misdemeanor is also on the schedule.

Exposition Notes.

Those who attended the American Seed Trade Association convention at San Francisco, discovered an interesting spot immediately west of the Palace of Horticulture where the Netherlands garden exhibit, the Massachusetts garden, the California garden, and the miscellaneous eastern gardens are located.

The Netherlands garden is a combined exhibit by all of the growers of the Netherlands made under the direction of the Netherlands Horticultural Federation. No individual advertising is allowed, but the official national organization makes the exhibit. The exhibit was commandeered, that is, the federation did not ask each man to send his best, but through its specially appointed commission selected for itself the best of what each man had. In this exhibit are to be found a wonderful display of conifers, boxes of all sorts of ornamental trees and shrubs, comprising splendid rhododendrons in season. The bulb display was replaced as the season advanced by tuberous begonias, which they intend to keep flowering through the season.

The Massachusetts growers federated in the Massachusetts garden where there are a number of especially interesting things; for instance, a magnificent exhibit of dahlias now coming into bloom, a fine display of irises and phloxes, delphiniums and Buddleias; an excellent collection of conifers and deciduous shrubs. Among the exhibitors in this garden are the following: Cherry Hill Nurseries, Forbes &Keith, R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Breck-Robinson Nursery, J. K. Alexander, Bay State Nurseries, Eastern Nurseries, Peter Fisher, New England Nurseries, Old Colony Nurseries, Patten & Co., Frederick J. Rea, Thomas Roland, B. H. Tracy, George H. Walker, George B. Eager, and Edward Gillette.

In the California garden there is a splendid showing of sweet peas, Lilium Harrisii, roses, gladioli, dahlias, carnations, and a variety of flowering shrubs. Among the exhibitors in this garden are the following: Hillsboro Nurseries, MacRorie-McLaren Co., Anton Zvolanek, Vallance Nursery Co., Henry W. Turner, California Rose Co., Metzner Floral Co., Gill Nursery Co., T. B. Shepherd Co., Richard Lohrmann, Fancher Creek Nurseries, California Nursery Company, Howard & Smith, C. C. Morse & Co., Bessie Boston Dahlia Farm, William Bustrim, Leonard-Coates Company, Pacific Coast Bulb Company, Carl Purdy, N. F. Vanderbilt, J. H. Willey & Co. and A. Twitchett.

In the Eastern garden the following have exhibits: Vaughan's Seed Store, Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Dingee & Conard Co., Conard & Jones Co., Bertrand H. Farr, Charles H. Totty, Arthur Cowee, John Lewis Childs, John Cook, Henry Eicholtz, E. G. Hill Company, Henry F. Michell Co., F. R. Pierson Co., S. G. Reuter & Sons, P. Van Deursen, W. W. Wilmore, Brant-Hentz Flower Company. Of the foregoing Vaughan's Seed Store has beautiful gladioli and roses in bloom which will be coming on for some time, having been planted with that end in view. Charles H. Totty's roses and heliotrope are beautiful; Conard & Jones have some beautiful roses, and Dingee & Conard, cannas. Arthur Cowee's and Jas. Lewis Child's gladioli will be in bloom during the S. A. F. convention time. B. H. Farr's iris has been very beautiful, but is now, of course, out of bloom.

The gardens around the Japanese pavilion are well worth inspection. They have some very wonderful dwarf trees there, some of them a thousand years old. The gardens around the New Zealand and Australia pavilions are also deserving of a visit, there being a wonderful collection of tree ferns in both of them, and New Zealand has a particularly fine collection of indigenous plants.

Kelway & Son, Langport, Somerset, Eng., and Sutton and Sons, Reading, Eng., have a beautiful display of flowering annuals in extended variety surrounding the International rose contest exhibit. There has been quite a general response by competitors in the International rose contest garden, where there are some very interesting roses showing new forms in great variety. The judges will judge these throughout the season, and their awards will not be announced until the close of the rose season. They will be carried over two seasons of bloom before decisions are announced.

In the Japanese garden, in addition to the exhibit by the Japanese government there is a special exhibit by The Yokohama Nursery Co., Ltd., of Yokohama, Japan, New York and London. In this will be found fine specimens of Thuya obtusa aurea nana, the finest specimens ever brought to this country; retinospora, over one thousand years old; Cycas revoluta, sago palm, one six hundred and fifty years old, another seven hundred and fifty years old; dwarf type wistaria, dwarf maples, Taxus turdiba, wistaria multijuga, about two hundred years old; an assortment of bamboos, Thuya obtusa nana, characteristic of Japan; also the same when trained into vertical shape, a wonderful illustration of the Japanese skill in training dwarf and other trees and shrubs, etc. Here are dwarf Japan maples, evergreens and bamboos showing their skill in extended periods of training lasting through hundreds of years. In the Japanese government exhibit there is a model of a Japanese garden in miniature laid out in regular style. Another private exhibitor in this garden is the Domoto Brothers, Inc., San Francisco, California, who show some brilliant tints of green in their various dwarf trees, shrubs, etc.

In the California exhibit garden the display by the Metzner Floral Company, of Mountain View, is noticeable, showing superb seedling varieties still unnamed, which a great many growers say are the finest they have ever seen.

In the competitive garden exhibit, attached to the Palace of Horticulture, C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., have some magnificent sweet peas grown on the English cordon system under the direct charge of Frank G. Cuthbertson. The entire exhibit is flowers grown from nursery stock. There are about 300 different varieties of flowers in addition to the sweet peas. They originally had bulbs set out which received a medal of honor, and were then replaced by the present exhibit of annuals. One of the largest of these is the snapdragons, which are very fine indeed and which represent all of the varieties recently introduced in Europe. Four gardeners are constantly at work on this exhibit, and there is a lady attendant and guide ready at all times to receive visitors. A. R. Gould, fellow of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, was engaged to have actual charge of this garden.

French Horticulture in War Times.

The production of roses, carnations and early vegetables from the south of France, usually so important, has been reduced to one-third. The absence of the heads at the front, the lessened demand, railway congestion, all conspire to reduce this commerce. Tomatoes are about the only crop that is not falling off. In the forcing establishments in the north the scarcity of coal and the difficulties of finding and reaching a market have reduced this branch radically. Many of the early vegetables and fruits are finding their way directly to the military hospitals.

Furloughs of two weeks have been arranged in many cases for soldiers

President Kerr's Address.

Ladies and Gentlemen, Members of the Texas State Florists' Association:

Ever since you paid me the great honor of electing me to the highest office within your gift, I have anticipated this hour, not so much to harvest the honors and privileges extended to your presiding officer, as for the opportunity to express to you my deep felt gratitude and appreciation for your kindness and good will toward me.

Robert C. Kerr.
President Texas State Florists' Association.

Our First Year's Work.—The 12 months past since we last met have been busy ones for those entrusted with the affairs of our organization. Your standing committees have also been faithful to their trusts and duties, as their reports will reveal to you. We have progressed, and increased our influence to such a degree that a review of the year's proceedings might well be devoted to laudations rather than to suggestions or criticisms. It is certainly gratifying to note the widespread interest in our organization the first year. When we consider the comparatively short time the Texas State Florists' Association has been in existence, it is remarkable what an immense growth it has made and what a power for good it has become. The large gathering here today is self evident testimony of the fact that the florists of Texas are awake to the importance of organization. Organizing as we have done has not come voluntarily, but the necessity of the times demand that we must pull together if we expect the accomplished results. One of our most valuable assets is to get together and get acquainted. How many florists have you met at our two conventions, that you had heard of, or done business with, but had never seen until met in the convention hall? This alone is worth our time, and expense of this organization. Let us keep up this good work and enthusiasm.

Texas to the Front as a Flower Market.—This organization is only one year old, and in that short time we have done wonders toward making this a better flower market. There were more flowers shipped to the outside market this year than the past five years combined. We have grown more and bought less this year, than any one year previous; and at the same time business has been normal—which goes to show what real good can be accomplished by real co-operation.

That Experimental Range of Glass for Commercial Cut Flowers.—Prof. Kyle will tell us today what the possibilities are for this experimental station. I believe that it is the consensus of opinion that the florists of Texas are entitled to some means of carrying on practical experiments with commercial cut flowers. The great amount of money spent each year for flowers is amazing, and to think that about 90 per cent of this is going out of the state, is certainly something that needs remedy. Every florist in the state of Texas should be vitally interested in this movement, and avail himself of every opportunity to help the good work along. I believe our best means of securing this experimental range will be through the horticultural department at College Station, this being centrally located. I would like to see a good strong committee appointed to work on this matter, and keep hammering away until we accomplish what we want.

The Annual Flower Show.—We consider our first annual flower show a grand success. It demonstrated to us that this is the best means of educating the public in the proper use of flowers; also for creating a greater demand. It is also a great education for florists. Every designer and grower produces the best that he has, and, as the saying is, "No man knows it all." Then in this way good ideas are both scattered and gathered, and taken home and put into practical use. I believe that the members will all agree that this is really the most important work of our association. I sincerely trust that the committee appointed for the ensuing year will work vigorously to see that this year's show will be larger and even better than last year's.

The Southern Trade Paper.—Every florist in the south should rally to the support of the Southern Florist. This is our official organ, and should be the means of communicating and carrying on our work. It is filling a long felt want. I want to state here that we could not do without the other trade papers, as they cover a field that we cannot cover, and the Southern Florist is not considered a competitor by the other papers. Every florist should contribute articles, also send in all news items from their respective towns. Practically every florist in Texas is a subscriber, and we have a wide circulation throughout the south. If you are interested in the welfare of the southern florists, you will rally to the support of this organ. But, being a subscriber is not all; we need material to keep the south posted. It is not my intention to criticize the other papers, but up to the last few months, how many articles pertaining to southern florists, or southern floriculture, have you noted in these papers, and why? It is not because they are not interested in us, for they are vitally interested in every section of the United States; but the real reason is that they are experiencing the same trouble we are having right now, and that is in getting the florists of the southern cities to report, and co-operate. They stand ready at all times to publish the news and any other articles submitted to them. We believe we have solved a problem by establishing a trade paper in our midst. Let every florist in the south realize that this medium is their paper, and is working for their interest, and go home determined to take more interest in the future welfare of an organ that is working for their good. Let me pause here long enough to say that this organization, nor any of its members (except Mr. Tackett), is not financially interested in this paper. It is only our moral support that we pledge.

The Florist Business on a Higher Plane.—The florist business as a general rule is considered about a third class business, and about three cases out of four it is true. This is our own fault. We fail to conduct our business in a way that makes an impression on the business world. We are too busy doing the work that a $2 man can do, instead of work at the desk, figuring profits and loss, store management, keeping a large and seasonable stock, discounting our bills, stimulating a demand for flowers, etc. It is my frank opinion, that if the florists will use their heads more and muscles less, their greenhouses will show a gain instead of a loss. It is high time we are waking up to these things, and I believe this organization will bring about an improved condition.

Our Local Clubs.—When we first began on organization work, the plan was to organize clubs in each city, and centralize these with the state organization as a central body. While the local clubs have not been as active as they should, the reports show that we have accomplished a great deal. We should realize the importance of the local clubs, and stir up more interest and enthusiasm the coming year. Remember the local clubs are no place to get together to discuss prices or control trade; nor is it the place to settle personal grievances. The florists should come together at the local clubs to work along lines to stimulate a greater demand for flowers and plants, such as pretty yard contests, co-operative advertising, stirring up interest in civic beautification, etc. The clubs that are working along these lines are accomplishing results. If your local club is lifeless, diagnose the case and see if the above mentioned does not apply.

Membership.—Every florist in the state of Texas should belong to this state organization. If you are not a member you are the loser. Cast your lot with the organization that is going to be the making of the florist business of Texas. In one short year we have made wonderful progress, but we need all of you, and you need us. If you have not taken out your membership—do so today before leaving the hall.

Affiliation with the S. A. F.—One of the most important matters for this organization to consider at this time is the best means of working with the S. A. F.—the parent body of all floricultural bodies of the United States. We are all vitally interested in the welfare of that organization; and we should take some steps toward stimulating more interest among the florists in the state of Texas. If it is possible, I would like to see our dues raised so as to include the S. A. F. membership. If we have one hundred such members, we are entitled to a member on the board of directors. Let us show the florists of the United States that we mean business; that when we start to do a thing, we do it right. If it is not possible to include S. A. F. membership in our dues, then do the next best thing. But we must wake up to the importance of the co-operative organization. Remember, there is good to be derived for you personally.

Manager Recent Highly Successful Sweet Pea Show at San Francisco, Calif. See Issues of June 26 and July 3.

Trade Exhibits.—It is certainly gratifying to note the very excellent display we have for our second convention. It shows that the wholesale concerns over the country realize that Texas is a great market; and are interested in us, and are willing to contribute toward helping to make this convention a success. I believe every member should show his appreciation by reciprocating when in need along these lines.

MORSE'S EXHIBIT AT THE AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY'S SHOW, PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION, JUNE 11-13.

SECOND ANNUAL OUTING OF KNOXVILLE FLORISTS' SOCIETY AT KINZEL SPRINGS, TENN., JUNE 25.

EXCELLENT JUNE BUSINESS.

The month of June was a record breaker for business, there being many weddings and receptions along with an unusual amount of funeral work. Stock came in heavy the past week but was in demand, and good in quality for this time of the year, especially gladioli, roses and lilies. There were some carnations on the market and very fine sweet peas, which are better than last week.

Henry Kusick & Co. report a very good week and stock coming in better. They are receiving some very fine Killarney roses and extra good Russell. Lilies and gladioli are still plentiful at this establishment, and some extra fine carnations are being received, which bring good prices.

Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports it is remarkable the way business keeps up, especially in funeral work. Hugo Ness has gone on his vacation to Colorado. Fred Fromholt is on his vacation at Bean Lake, fishing. Here's hoping he brings back the fish and not the usual fish stories.

Geo. M. Kellogg Flower and Plant Co. reports business as good and is receiving some very fine stock from the greenhouses. Miss Florence Fuller of this firm is going on her vacation to Mexico, Mo.

Miss Lou E. Boggess says business is very good. She is having a lot of funeral work. Miss Boggess is going on a vacation visiting Seattle, Portland and California for two months.

W. J. Barnes had one of the busiest weeks for this time of the year he ever had, both in funerals and weddings. He had seven wedding decorations on one day, June 30.

Mr. Hepting is bringing in some very good carnations, but expects to throw out his plants in a few days to make room for the new ones.

Miss J. E. Murray says business is excellent, especially in funeral work. Miss Grace Murray is going to Lincoln, Neb., on her vacation.

Alpha Floral Co. reports a week of good business. T. W. Atkins of this firm is going to Colorado Springs on his vacation.

John Colas has had a very good week's business, and is going to New York for one month.

Chas. Biederman & Sons say stock looks the best ever, especially asters and gladioli.

S. Bryson Ayers is bringing some good gladioli and sweet peas to the market.

Knoxville Florists' Society.

The Knoxville Florists' Society held its second annual picnic June 25 at Kinzel Springs, a summer resort about 30 miles from Knoxville. A special train was chartered for the occasion, and all the florist stores closed for the day. The party was made up of the members of the society, their friends and relatives, and consisted of about a hundred persons. The society had several honorary guests, among whom were John Evans of Richmond, Ind., and Gunnar Teilmann, Jr., of Johnson City, Tenn.

The weather man, who has been giving us showers daily for the last month or so, was very considerate on "picnic day," and although it looked rather threatening early in the morning, the day was fair. The party arrived at the picnic grounds about 9:30 in the morning and stayed until 6:00 o'clock in the evening. A bountiful dinner was served and everyone enjoyed the day very much; a number of contests were held before and immediately after dinner which took up considerable time, and a number of valuable prizes were awarded. After the contests were over the crowd spent the time in various ways, bathing, mountain climbing, kodaking, etc. The return trip was also enjoyed very much. It is believed that there was but very little business lost on account of the day's outing, as it was well advertiseed beforehand, and many customers gave their orders the day before. A. J. McNUTT,, Sec'y-Treas.

MARKET ON THE DULL SIDE.

There is very little to say in regard to trade, as the bottom has completely dropped out of the market. As for stock, there are plenty of roses and sweet peas, which can be had at any price, while the few asters and dahlias that are in the local market are only fair in quality and consequently only bring a fair price.

NOTES.

The outing committee have decided to hold their outing at Great Falls this year and we hope that all the stores will give their clerks that afternoon off. The date is July 21—so don't forget it for this is going to be one of the best they have ever had with plenty of refreshments in both lines—wet and dry.

W. White, designer for Marche & Co., is enjoying a few days at Colonial Beach, which is the Atlantic City for Washington florists, as W. W. Kimmell and O. A. C. Oehmler have cottages there and will be opened this week for the summer.

Wm. Gude must have something to do during the summer, so he undertook the task of judging some real American "beauties" at a local beauty contest, which was held at Brightwood, July 5.

Marche Co. have their window decorated with a Swiss scene, which is attracting the public and calls for considerable comment as it is one of the neatest windows in this city.

Graner Bros., of Congress Heights, seem to be the only growers in this vicinity that have good Shasta daisies, which they have no trouble disposing of.

Geo. A. Comley is sending in some extra good gladioli, and as there is not an overabundance just at present, they find a ready sale.

Ed Schmidt has set aside one night, September 7, when he will be the host to the local florists and their friends at a crab feast.

Some of the florists have started to close at 6 o'clock throughout the week and a half day on Sundays during the summer.

Visitor: M. Cohen, New York.

Newport, R. I.

Flower sales in this city are curtailed to a certain extent by outbursts of generosity on the part of "my lady" in supplying her friends with surplus flowers from her garden, the gardener being ordered to give away the blooms, and which he often finds to be a bothersome and thankless job. The writer knows of one gardener in particular who had orders to give flowers to a "friend." When the friend was leaving, he consulted his chauffeur as to what would be a suitable gift to give the gardener who supplied him so generously with flowers, and the gardener got the whole amount of one bottle of whisky, which may have opened the gardener's eyes for the time being, but no doubt he is again "handing 'round the flowers as the doctor orders." This infringement on the florist trade is only one. Another is to have the gardener make up the flowers for the luncheons and dinners; then again it is the handy butler or ladies' maid, who the madam says has exquisite taste—the exquisite beggars who are always striving to put a feather in their nest by begging and arranging flowers to please "my lady," all to which one may say with Macbeth—"Out, damned spot."

On Bellevue avenue, and confined within a distance of 200 yards, are five florist shops, commencing with Wadley & Smythe's at the Casino entrance, then the establishments of Ralph Armstrong, Harry Bunyard, Gibson Bros. and H. G. Leikens. All are New Yorkers with the exception of Gibson Bros., who operate their store here the year round. These florists, being in such close proximity to each other, are responsible for handsome window displays, as they seem to vie with each other in tasty arrangements of their stock, and at the present time the abundance of garden flowers gives added possibilities to the decorator's skill, with the result that the flower stores on the avenue offer varied arrangements in their windows, beautiful to see.

Iris Hispanica (Spanish Iris) of the yellow and white kinds is being used here in the best window display. Their dainty, novel, orchid-like appearance command no little attention, and when massed in gardens are attractive. A sunny place in the garden, to one side, would be a good place to mass them as they are not attractive out of bloom. It may not be generally known that bulbous iris should be replanted every two or three years, as the new bulbs form directly under the old bulb and thus in the course of a few years descend so low as to be out of the reach of the air and incapable of vegetation.

It seems that the foggy weather early in June was the cause for changing the sweet pea show dates from July 8 to July 15. Let us hope that the change will benefit all and a fine show result, as anticipated.

The rose show has awakened quite a lively interest in outdoor grown hybrid tea roses and the chances are they will be grown more extensively here in the future. J. J. B.

Louisville, Ky.

The commencement orders this year were not as large as usual, the leading event being the graduation of 160 pupils of the girls' high school, which called for bunches of a dozen roses, arranged with asparagus sprays at $1 each. This order was divided among four florists and in consequence did not make anyone rich. The girls pooled their money and secured bids from all the florists.

Flowers of all kinds are in oversupply. Sweet peas of the best quality wholesale at 20 cents and 25 cents per 100, gladioli, while fine in quality, enjoy only a fair sale at 50 to 75 cents per dozen, and carnations are very poor and are very slow sellers. Roses of good quality bring an average price of $1.50 per dozen.

NOTES.

The Jacob Schultz Company, with a capital stock of $12,000, divided into shares of $100 each, has filed articles of incorporation in the County Clerk's office. The debt limit is $10,000. The incorporators, with their holdings, are: George E. Schultz, ninety-five shares; Anna B. Schultz, three shares; Mary Scheedy, ten shares; C. M. Quirey, four shares; Earl Rabe, three shares, and F. J. Rettig, five shares. Jacob Schultz will retain a separate interest and will continue to own and operate the greenhouses.

H. Kleinstarink has bought the houses of Julius Buser and has removed them to his range. He has torn down his old houses, and is building three new ones 25x175 feet, and is putting in concrete benches. He has also bought land adjoining his place.

A. Rasmusson is rebuilding several houses, and has nearly finished replacing all wooden benches with concrete. He has about nine acres covered with glass and is needing more room to expand. Ground in this vicinity is valued at $3,000 per acre.

The F. Walker Co. are building a house 20x90 feet. Miss Genevieve Walker leaves this week for New York, where she will spend several months studying art.

E. G. Reimers & Son have bought the place built by S. E. Thompson from H. Kleinstarink and will remodel it and put it in first-class condition.

Providence, R. I.

Business the past week has been fair. The weather almost every day was either cloudy or rainy, and this somewhat held business up. Outdoor gladioli still come in good and are fine. Outside sweet peas are beginning to show up, but the rainy weather has held them back, and they will not hold inside the stores. Graduations are now over and the florists will have their dull season upon them once more.

John F. Wood will continue in business through the month of July, closing August 1, and will open in the fall in a new location.

Mrs. Olsen, of Riverside, is cutting sweet peas in large quantities that find a ready sale almost anywhere.

Fred Hoffman, of Pawtucket, has a new car. H. A. T.

Lake Forest, Ill.

The North Shore Horticultural Society was represented in the Fourth of July parade at Lake Forest by a float showing the goddess Flora surrounded by horns of plenty, and which received the first prize, a silver loving cup, being adjudged the best in the competition between a half a dozen or more in the float division. The color scheme of the float was pink and white, pink and white peonies and white daisies being the flowers chiefly used in the decoration. Flora, the goddess, was represented by Miss Agnes Bollinger. Children of members of the society on the float distributed small bouquets along the course of the parade.

At the last meeting of the society a tentative date for the annual flower show was set for Wednesday, July 28. This date, however, may be postponed until a later time in order to have entries of gladioli, a feature of the show last year. The exhibition will be held in the Durand Art Institute, as in the past, and a show equally as good, if not better, is assured. The floor managers will be Messrs. Alex Binnie and Benson, and the general committee will be E. O. Orpet, chairman; Frank Koehne, Otto Triebwasser, George Schaffer and Mr. Anderson. The harmful effects of delay in entering exhibits in other years is to be abolished this year by a ruling to the effect that no exhibits will be received for competition after 10 a. m. The material in Lake Forest, as well as in surrounding towns, is exceptionally good this year, so that a good exhibition with strong competition is assured. Mrs. Frances King's book, "Color in the Garden," is contemplated as a general prize, being a very useful book, and one not possessed by many gardeners. Whether or not gold medals will be continued as prizes this year has not yet been decided.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

This society held its regular meeting Friday evening, June 25, in the County building, Hartford. The committee in charge of the June flower show made its report, stating that they cleared about $80, all expenses paid, which they have turned over to the Union for Home Work. Much discussion was indulged in over the question af admitting an outside society into full membership as a branch of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, and it was finally left to the members to think the matter over, after which they would be better able to present their views, when the matter would be finally turned over to a committee to draw up definite plans for presentation to the society. Alfred Dixon, W. W. Hunt and Mrs. William H. Palmer were appointed a committee to draw up resolutions regarding the death of the late James J. Goodwin, one of our life members.

President Warren S. Mason, superintendent of the Pope estate at Farmington, had on exhibition a very fine collection of roses, comprising 45 varieties, the most attractive being specimens of Frau Karl Druschki, Ulrich Brunner, Cecile Brunner, Radiance, Margaret Dickson, John Hopper, George Arends and Nova Zembla. President Mason was much pleased with the growth made by this latter rose, stating that in his opinion it was equal to Margaret Dickson and Karl Druschki. Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, Gardenia, Silver Moon, Tausendschon, Philadelphia and Waterbury ramblers were in the collection of hardy climbing roses. W. W. Hunt, G. H. Hollister and Theodore Staudt were named as judges, and they awarded the exhibit of President Mason a first-class diploma and a smaller exhibit of H. L. Ritson received honorable mention.

Two life and twelve annual members were admitted to the society. Our next meeting will be held in September, the society taking the months of July and August as a vacation.

ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

New Orleans Horticultural Society.

Members of the New Orleans Horticultural Society held a meeting in the Association of Commerce building and presented a report of the proceeds of the recent flower show given for the "city beautiful" movement. The report up to date showed the receipts incomplete, but a final report will be made by the society at a subsequent date.

The receipts at present are $471.10, and the expenditures $455.64. The members of the association who exhibited at the show voted to add from their own private funds to this amount. This will be turned over to the various committees of ladies who helped to make the show a success.

P. A. Chopin, president of the society, presided, and Charles R. Panter, secretary, officiated in that capacity. The report was read by Joseph Steckler, chairman of the committee on arrangements. The annual outing of the society will be held in Mandeville, July 7.

Southampton, L. I.

Judges have been selected for the ninth annual show of the Southampton Horticultural Society, which takes place next month. Those chosen are: William McCollon of Islip, formerly gardener for S. T. Peters; John Canning, gardener for Adolph Lewisohn, Ardsley, and William Halsey of Southampton.

William Malcolm, David I. Gilmartin and O. C. Gardiner will pass on the vase competitions. Judges for the village street contest will be appointed by the Garden Club, of which Mrs. Albert Boardman is president.

OBITUARY.

August A. Voelker.

August A. Voelker, who since his early boyhood has been connected with the Voelker Greenhouses, Winona, Minn., died June 25, at a hospital at Rochester, Minn., where he had been for several weeks, under treatment for an attack of heart failure, aggravated by a severe cold. His death was entirely unexpected and came as a severe shock to his relatives and friends, especially to his mother, Mrs. Dora Voelker, who went to Rochester on that day to visit him, but arrived too late to see him in life. He was buried Sunday, June 27, in Woodlawn cemetery, Winona, and the mound was banked high with floral tributes.

August Voelker was 28 years old. He was reared in Winona and assisted his mother in conducting the Voelker Greenhouses until taken to Rochester for treatment, June 9. He is survived by his mother, a brother, Walter, of Kalispell, Mont., and a sister, Miss Dora Anna Voelker, who lives at home. The father also survives.

Otto Heinigke.

Otto Heinigke, a brother-in-law of John Weir, the well known florist, died, July 1, at his home, Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, aged 65 years. He was a well known designer and manufacturer of stained glass, having designed and manufactured all of the stained glass work in the Congressional Library, Washington, D. C., and many windows in the leading churches of New York.

BEMIDJI, MINN.—W. A. Elliott has completed a new greenhouse range in the rear of his store known as the Fair.

CAMERON, MO.—Carl Claeson, who has been connected with the trade at Sedalia, Mo., has taken a position with the Ralph Ward greenhouses in this city.

PASS CHRISTIAN, MISS. — Gardens and field crops in this vicinity are suffering from hot, dry weather. Growers are handicapped by lack of water for irrigation.

FORT WORTH, TEX.—Tom Ross, well known in the local trade and recently connected with the seed department of Baker Bros. Co., has gone to New Orleans to engage in business.

NEW HARTFORD, N. Y.—About 20 exhibitors were represented at a successful peony show given here June 15, under the auspices of the Central New York Horticultural Society.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.—R. L. Hogan has purchased the greenhouse on the estate of the late John W. Hogan, together with four pieces of real estate. The price paid was $4,475.

ALBION, MICH.—The greenhouses of Carl Jacobs, near this city, have been sold by him to F. E. Hubert, of Parma, who will take possession as soon as the present lettuce crop is harvested.

STERLING, ILL.—Harry Bent has sold his flower shop in the Randolph building to Robt. Lundstrom, proprietor of the Sterling Floral Co. The store will be closed and the stock removed to the company's greenhouses.

CLINTON, ILL.—Sylvester Grimsley is having plans prepared for a greenhouse to be erected on his property, at a cost of $5,000. The tentative plans for the new building show a structure 50x125 feet in dimensions.

ALAMEDA, CALIF.—Claiming that he was swindled by Otto Witt, who represented the floral business at 1419 Bay street as flourishing, and induced him to invest $500, R. F. Dunleavy of this city has filed suit to have the partnership dissolved.

TRUMBULL, NEB.—To enable florists to have three days in which to prepare for Memorial day business, Herbert F. Warren of this city has started a movement to have Memorial day changed from May 30 to the first Thursday in June of each year.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—The Dale estate reports the usual volume of spring business. Roses Ophelia, Killarney Brilliant, Double White Killarney, Double Pink Killarney, Lady Stanley, Shawyer and Russell, are grown in quantities. A fine crop of cattleyas is also coming on.

HOUGHTON, MICH.—Anton Then of Chicago, fern grower and prominent florist, is here, coming to Calumet for the purpose of gathering leaf mold and rotted pine needles. He expects to obtain about a carload of the leaf mold here and has a number of expert workmen at Ojibway gathering it for him.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

Will correspondents of florist trade papers please omit using the above society's name "in relation to private or local clubs"? There is only one Ladies' S. A. F. As yet no member in California has been authorized to transact business for the Ladies' S. A. F. MRS. C. H. MAYNARD, Sec'y.

President Welch Starts Early.

President Patrick Welch advises that owing to his presence being required at San Francisco a few days in advance of the opening of the annual convention of the Society of American Florists, he will start for the convention city a few days earlier than was at first planned, leaving Boston, August 4 (Boston & Albany R. R., train No. 41) at 10 a. m., Albany, August 4. (New York Central, train No. 15) at 4:25 p. m., Buffalo, August 4 (Lake Shore, train No. 15) at 11:00 p. m., central time, Chicago, August 7 (Chicago & Northwestern Ry., train No. 13) at 10:30 a. m.

President Welch will be pleased to have any members or trade friends join him on the trip and will be glad to hear from those who contemplate starting about this time.

N. Y. and N. J. Ass'n of Plant Growers.

Members of the above named association, after a strenuous and most profitable season, took advantage of a beautiful day, June 29, and under the leadership of their energetic and affable president, Abraham Lincoln Miller, took their annual Long Island outing. The start was made from Secretary W. H. Siebrecht Jr.'s law office, Queen's Plaza, at 3 p. m. After a journey through picturesque landscapes and other features, they completed the first stage of their trip at Feltman's Coney Island, where a fine shore dinner was awaiting them.

The chief guides of the numerous automobiles, which were elaborately decorated, were: A. L. Miller, W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., Edward Dupuy, Julius Roehrs, and Harry Baumann. Julius Roehrs was dubbed "Peck's Bad Boy" for continually running away and setting an unfortunate pace for himself. During the entire trip there were only three blowouts; two on the machines and one at a place, the name of which was forgotten. Among the many who made the trip were H. Baumann, Madsen & Christensen; Paul Fischer, Lehnig & Winnefeld; Peter Wagner, Roman J. Irwin, H. Siebrecht, Herman Schoelzel, H. C. Steinhoff, Charles Schenck, Harry A. Bunyard, T. B. De Forest, A. American Dahlia Society.

The executive committee of the American Dahlia Society, presided over by the president, Richard Vincent, Jr., met at the office of the secretary, Joseph J. Love, New York, June 26. Names of applicants for membership were presented and finances reported in good condition.

President Vincent produced a tentative schedule of premiums, which was adopted with a few amendments as far as it was possible to do so, as many of the parties offering prizes had not stated the amount they would give, and others are still to be heard from. The prospect being good for prizes, etc., advertising matter was ordered printed and distributed. There was a discussion regarding some publication or treatise on the list of varieties, their growing, etc., as soon as practicable.

A statement made concerning the different trial grounds was favorable to a number in different sections of the country.

In a discussion regarding the fall flower show, strong objections were raised toward holding this exhibition at the Bronx park museum. The committee as a whole decided to request the New York Horticultural Society's council to obtain for the society the American Museum of Natural History if possible. An offer was received from the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society of its hall in Philadelphia. After a noon adjournment the members of the committee re-convened in the afternoon and met the New York Horticultural Society's council and a general discussion as to holding the dahlia show in the Bronx park museum followed.

The undesirability of the Bronx was discussed both in regard to the inconvenience of getting the exhibits there as well as the question of drawing a justifiable audience, which appears rather doubtful.

The possibility of securing the Museum of National History was then brought up and the council promised to try and secure that building and to let the executive committee know within the next three or four days, if it could be secured for September 23-25. The abuse of privileges by a former society in distributing circular and business advertising during the show, was an objectionable feature. The dahlia society's committee pledged themselves not to do this, or allow it to be done by any firm exhibiting.

The New York Horticultural Society's council agreed to donate $100 towards premiums.

Grand National Flower Show.

The premium list is out for the Grand National Fall Flower Show, to be held under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in conjunction with the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the Department of Horticulture of the Panama-Pacific International exposition, at the Palace of Horticulture, Exposition Grounds, San Francisco, Calif., October 21-26, 1915. Copies may be had on application to Secretary T. Taylor, 2714 McAllister street, San Francisco, Calif.

Railway Gardening Association.

The annual meeting of the Railway Gardening Association will be held at the Hotel St. Clair, Detroit, Mich., August 17-20. The programme will include papers as follows: "Soils and Fertilizers," by J. K. Wingert, of the Cumberland Valley; "Lawns and Banks," by J. A. Byrne, of the Baltimore & Ohio; "Plants," by C. W. Eichling, of the Queen & Crescent; "Diseases, Insects and Other Injuries," by E. A. Richardson, of the Boston & Albany; "Equipment and Operation," by F. C. Stark, of the Pennsylvania Lines, West, and "Hedges," by F. W. Vail, Central of New Jersey.

Not Very Steady.

A farmhand had worked in the field from dawn till darkness, doing chores by lantern light. "I'm going to quit," he said to the farmer at the end of the month. "You promised me a steady job."

"Well, haven't you got one?" was the astonished reply.

"No," said the man, "there are three or four hours every night that I don't have a thing to do and fool my time away sleeping."—National Monthly.

STOCK OF ALL KINDS PLENTIFUL.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful and is selling at rather low prices, but the demand at this writing is better than it has been for the past week, which was the quietest that has been experienced for some time. The shipping trade has been good, but the local demand did not amount to very much. Some fine Hoosier Beauty roses are arriving in fairly good supply, but this variety cleans up quickly each day at very good prices, considering the general market conditions. There has also been a good demand for Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia roses and for Double White Killarney, which appears to give best satisfaction during the summer months. Prince de Bulgaria and My Maryland are also having a pretty good call, but taken all in all roses are not selling at the prices that they should and this holds good for almost all the varieties. Carnations are still seen, but the supply has shortened up considerably the past week. Orchids and gardenias are in good supply and the same holds good for lily of the valley and lilies. Gladioli are arriving in large numbers, but are not selling any too well. Asters are more plentiful, but clean up pretty well each day. Peonies are to be had, and there is enough stock in storage yet to last at least three more weeks. American Beauty roses are seen at all the stores in large quantities and some very choice stock is obtainable at very reasonable prices. Sweet peas are still a factor in the market and fairly good stock is obtainable at times. The principal topic of conversation in the market now is the coming S. A. F. convention at San Francisco, August 17-19, and from present indications it appears as if there will be a pretty good delegation from this city.

W. J. Keimel, Michael Fink, Paul Klingsporn, Peter Olsem, James Morton and E. A. Ollinger, members of the committee, were present and will leave nothing undone to make the event a success and guarantee everyone a good time. B. Any firm desirous of donating a prize to the sporting events should send same as early as possible to Michael Fink, 176 North Michigan avenue.

H. P. Gardner, with A. T. Pyfer & Co., will leave July 16 with the First regiment, Illinois National Guard, and regiment band, for San Francisco, Calif., where they are going as military escort to the Illinois Boosters, who will attend the Panama-Pacific exposition in a body.

John Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, George Economopolus, of the Alpha Floral Co., and Andrew Chronis, with Johns & Chronis, took in the sights at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouses at Morton Grove, July 1, making the trip with John Poehlmann in his Winton Six with John Poehlmann, Jr., at the helm. On the return trip a stop was made at Andrew Chronis' handsome new home in Wilmette and John Mangel's residence on Sheridan road. Both gentlemen have magnificent places and take great pleasure in showing their guests about. George Economopolus also expects to have a splendid place to entertain his friends soon, according to Andrew Chronis, who still insists that the beautiful young lady who nursed the good natured gentleman back to health is going to be the lucky bride.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having a good call for palms this month, and has a nice stock for one to select from. H. M. Oeser has charge of this department, and that he knows his business thoroughly can readily be seen after one has the pleasure to inspect the place. Tony Gabel, who has charge of the carnation department, says that over 200,000 plants are being benched and that the work is almost completed. Over 60,000 chrysanthemums in the sand are ready to be potted this week and a nice lot of stock in all the leading commercial varieties is still on hand and ready to be shipped out.

At Peter Reinberg's greenhouses Emil Reichling and his force are busy planting carnations and now have the work pretty well under way. The plants seem to have done very well out in the field this year and the stock benched was healthier and larger than ever before. Peter Baumann, of the store force, leaves this week to spend his vacation at Niles Centre with his parents. Felix Reichling and L. Hoeckner made a trip across the lake last week on the new passenger steamer St. Joseph, when they were the guests of the proprietors.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, held at 176 North Michigan avenue, July 6, much important business was transacted and officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Edward Muret, president; Charles McCauley, vice-president and treasurer; George Weiland, secretary, and Paul Klingsporn, manager. The board of directors consists of Fred Stielow, Fred Schramm, Anton Then, Rudolph Ellsworth, Joseph Schoos and the president, vice-president and secretary.

Herman Rogers, Weiland & Risch's obliging salesman, and wife, left July 3 for Detroit and Spring Lake, Mich., where they will spend several weeks visiting with friends and relatives. They made the trip in Alec Rogers' car, who, by the way, will be remembered by many, for he was at one time engaged in the florist business here when he was then better known as "Sammy."

Joe Schouten, with the Ernst Wienhoeber Floral Co., is having a dandy time with his new Ford.

Percy Jones' store force, consisting of Manager Van Gelder, Fritz Simons, Maurice Grossberg, Luke Schrer and J. Jonovz, have organized a relay team and challenge any wholesale house in this city to compete with them at the big picnic to be held at St. Paul Park, Morton Grove, Sunday, July 25.

Ed. Siebrecht, genial salesman of the Fleischman Floral Co.'s staff, departed, July 3, vacation bound for the Northland. A number of his friends are wondering what the fair lady's name is in Grand Forks, N. D., and if he will "pay double mileage" on the return trip.

Fred Ottenbacher, of the Zech & Mann force, will leave July 10 to enjoy a well earned rest. He is undecided whether he will attend the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco, Calif., or spend a few weeks fishing in the Georgian Bay regions.

At Wietor Bros.' store roses are arriving in good condition, especially Killarney, which is showing fine color. N. J. Wietor says that the carnations out in the field are doing splendidly this year and plants are all that can be desired.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting a nice supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses, which are moving well at good prices. Mrs. Horton is looking after affairs at the store during Mr. Washburn's absence.

Miss Powers, with Ronsley the Florist, South Dearborn street, has returned from a delightful outing at Diamond Lake and is again attending to her duties at the store.

J. A. Budlong is having a brisk demand for Double White Killarney roses, which this firm is cutting in quantity and which are cleaning up nicely each day.

Eddie Hauswirth, with Archie Spencer, is recovering from a severe case of blood poisoning which affected both of his hands and was caused by handling roses.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Hotel Bismarck, Thursday, July 8, at 8 p. m. when the banquet celebrating the consolidation of the clubs will be held.

George Fischer moved into a new store at 179 North Wabash avenue this week, which is one door south of Miller & Musser's wholesale establishment.

B. Zima, W. Vlk, John Michal, Joseph Ziska, Jr., John Ziska and several others are thinking seriously of holding a Bohemian picnic in August.

John Prickett and Arthur Blewitt autoed to Elgin with their families July 4, returning to their homes in Des Plaines the same evening.

John J. Wolniewicz, North Claremont avenue, has recovered from his recent street car accident and is able to be about again.

M. C. Gunterberg is back from a delightful automobile trip with her parents through the southern part of the state.

Al. Miller, who is employed at the George Wittbold Co.'s North Clark street store, was married June 30.

Miss Nettie Parker, with A. T. Pfyer & Co., spent July 4 with Miss Frieda Gebhardt at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Plans for the new Grant Park were placed on exhibition in Blackwell hall, Art Institute, July 7.

Fred Morphett, with A. Henderson & Co., is enjoying a well-earned rest this week.

Eddie Wojtkiewicz, with Kennicott Bros. Co., is spending his vacation in Michigan.

Illinois day at the Panama-Pacific exposition is July 24 and Chicago day July 27.

John Brodbeck, of Evanston, is back from a delightful four-day lake trip.

St. Louis.

The weather the past week has been warm, with showers. At time of writing it is cool and clear. The opening of a new bank used up a few flowers. All kinds of stock is plentiful and prices are low. Those who have an abundance of funeral work can afford to put up good work at a very moderate cost. Fancy ferns are now selling at $2 per 1,000. Asters, light pink variety, are coming in.

NOTES.

Albert W. Gumz, of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., and Miss Estelle Sties were married June 20. They left for Hamburg, Mo., and Wentzville, Mo., to spend their honeymoon. They will also visit Cincinnati and Chicago. Congratulations are now in order. Al is well known and liked in the trade and has a bright future.

The city forester has prescribed that residents of this city hereafter plant sycamores on their lawns and street fronts, instead of maples. The prescription comes after the recent storms which damaged the maples to a great extent. Sycamores, it is explained, are more hardy and less liable to damage in a storm.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. M. P. Schray, widow of the late Wm. Schray, and mother of Emil Schray, of heart disease, June 28, age 74 years. Her funeral took place June 29 and was largely attended. The floral offerings were numerous.

In the Italian garden at the Missouri botanical garden are 85 orange trees in bloom. The main gardens are especially attractive just now. One object of especial interest is the varnish tree, now a mass of yellow blossoms.

The local florists' club will meet Thursday, July 8, at the Odd Fellows' hall. The feature will be the nomination of officers. Final arrangements for the annual picnic, July 22, will also be made.

Ostertag Bros. were very busy with funeral work June 27. Henry has sold his large automobile and has purchased two Ford touring cars, and is having a truck made for delivery purposes.

SHORTAGE IN ROSES.

The rose crop has shortened considerably, along with some of the other stock, white roses in particular being far short of the demand. American Beauties, too, are off crop. Kaiserin roses will be in this week, which will help considerably. Carnations are in sufficient supply for all demands, but stock is becoming poor. Sweet peas are very plentiful, and stock is exceptionally good, as they have had plenty of rain at the right time. The supply of larkspur is not up to the requirements, as a good many of the best of this stock have been spoiled by mildew. Phlox is in good demand. America and Pink Beauty gladioli meet with a good call. Candidum and Easter lilies are excellent stock. The Sandusky water lilies will arrive in a few days now. Iris, outdoor stock, is coming in, but the call for same is slow. Lily of the valley is plentiful now. Greens of all kinds are in good supply.

FLORISTS' CLUB MEETING POSTPONED.

The July meeting of the florists' club, scheduled for Monday, July 5, has been postponed until Monday, July 12. Full announcement of picnic arrangements and other matters of interest will be made at this meeting and a full attendance of members is desired. At the last meeting of the club it was decided that foot races and all other field events would be open to all, with the exception of the base ball game, in which players must be members of the club to be eligible make Joe Jackson jealous.

Business is rather quiet, but not any more so than is usual for this season of the year. We do not look for any startling rush of trade between now and the middle of September.

The flower show, which was to be held July 3, has been postponed indefinitely, the heavy, continued rains, together with the terrific winds which have been prevalent lately, have done extensive damage to out-door flowers and it was thought by the management of the "show" that a creditable exhibition could not be assembled this summer.

MARKET HAS QUIET PERIOD.

The business of the past week has been seasonable; that is, it has been very light indeed. There is an abundance of stock of all kinds of varieties that are generally good at this season. In the roses, Mock, Russell, Sunburst, Ward and Hadley are very good, while the eastern American Beauties are exceptionally fine. Southern gladioli are coming in in quantity and sell fairly well. Easter lilies are away ahead of the demand; it is either a feast or a famine with this flower. Why don't the growers of the lily get together and divide up the season? George Anderson once said about Bride roses, of which he was quite a grower, and which at the time were selling very low, that if he had the whole output he could sell them all at an advance of 50 per cent without a word of protest from any one. Asters are now coming in and will soon be a factor. Sweet peas of very good quality are offered in quantity; those who take the trouble to pick them with the rising of the sun get the best price, as they do not keep long at the best this hot weather. Only the Spencers are worth growing and for forcing for market in competition; they should be planted at the right time, in the best soil, receive the best care, be bunched just right, after which the returns will be found the best obtainable. Valley appears to sell up pretty close, while cattleyas are a trifle draggy, being offered in quantity at very low figures.

NOTES.

The recent church decoration for the Wanamaker wedding, while it could not be called very elaborate, was elegant and artistic to a degree. Cibotium ferns were a feature, being banked high on either side of altar; also, at the entrance to the chancel. Vases of white roses and white hydrangeas relieved the green effect, while the altar was profusely decorated with vases of white roses, orchids, lily of the valley and water lilies. At the top of each column the length of the church and at either side the center aisle, there was placed a large cibotium fern. Each column was curtained with smilax, which was dotted with quantities of sweet peas. The effect as a whole was very fine. The decorations at the home in the country were very elaborate, no expense being spared.

The Liberty Bell was started on its trip across the continent Monday, June 27. The frame or float, on which this sacred relic was carried in the parade to the depot, was profusely decorated with palms, ferns and flowers. This commission was given to Lit Brothers' Department Store. Ye gods! What sacrilege! Next will come department store ministers for the weddings, with wives made returnable if not satisfactory.

The craft were much pained to hear of the death of Thomas Foulds. He was for a long time a grower of importance in this market, being the first to offer pink snapdragon. He grew this very successfully, and while he was able to hold on to his stock, had a monopoly in this color in this market.

The Macaw Brothers, at Norwood, have their new house planted with chrysanthemums, which are getting away to a strong growth. Gardenias, cut asparagus sprays and Scotti ferns are also grown in quantity.

The Florex Gardens, who took a record crop of sweet peas from a new house the past season, followed with tomatoes from which they are now commencing to cut. The house looks very promising.

Eastern American Beauties are a special with Edward Reid and they are wonderfully fine. Gladioli are seen by the thousand and appear to move off very well.

American Beauties are still the feature with the Leo Niessen Co. Gladioli are seen in large quantities, while excellent outdoor sweet peas are now a factor.

Berger Bros. offer a good line of summer flowers, leaders being Maryland roses, lily of the valley and gladioli.

Robert Craig, accompanied by Mrs. Craig, is spending a few days with W. K. Harris at Ocean City.

DEMAND FAILS TO ABSORB SUPPLY.

Business is not very brisk. There is plenty of good stock for the time of the year, but the demand is not strong enough to take up all of it. Shipping business is fair. Roses continue in good supply and include many excellent offerings. Lilies are very plentiful and include Easter lilies and some auratums and rubrums. Gladioli, too, are in good supply and have a fairly good call. Other offerings include lily of the valley, orchids, water lilies, snapdragons and carnations.

BIG OVERSUPPLY AND WEAK MARKET.

The market, which opened under fair conditions, June 28, fell flat before the end of the week. As an instance, special American Beauties wholesaled at the rate of $25 per 100 June 28; on July 2 they could be bought at from $4 to $10 per 100. The new crop seemed to arrive from all sections at the same time, and coupled with light buying, put stock down to figures that might have caused a panic in most any other business, but the florists are a "hopeful lot." However, there is little hope for better conditions for a week or two. There was a general exodus from the city for July 4 and 5, and, figuratively speaking, it took the remainder of the week for the market to sober up. Not only in American Beauties, but in all other stocks, there is a surplus. While there is a movement in special tea roses, there is a great amount of inferior stock that is practicaly unsalable. It is surprising the way the carnations hold out and the street men are again on the job. There are peonies on the market from cold storage, but scarcely anybody wants them. We may say that this branch of the cut flower industry should be stopped. Admitting that we have to eat cold storage beef, chickens and eggs, the cold storage line should be drawn somewhere. With literally carloads of good flowers going to waste, throughout the country, cold storage of flowers is being overworked. An immense crop of sweet peas is now arriving and whille good sweet peas are generally salable, there are too many for the demand. Orchids, lilies and lily of the valley continue plentiful and cheap. A glut of gladioli is also in sight. At present there are more than enough to supply the demand, but as we view it, this is but the beginning of sorrows. Asters may be useful a month hence, but nobody has any use for them now, particularly of the quality that is beginning to arrive. "Try it on the dog," seems to be the motto of some growers, or in other words send everything to New York that will not sell in any other city.

July 5.—This being a public holiday, not much business was expected, but a deluge of rain in the forenoon practically eliminated business. The market is glutted with stock.

NOTES.

August Millang, a member of the well known Millang family, who has retail stores in Brooklyn and Jamaica, recently had the first finger of his right hand poisoned from handling roses. The poison spread so fast that on July 1 the surgeons were compelled to amputate the finger at the middle joint. It is now hoped that the poison will be overcome. He is in the Jamaica hospital.

The Junitia democratic club of Brooklyn, of which our esteemed florist friend, John Mallon, is president, had its outing at Witzel's grove, June 26, and we are reliably informed that it was a very successful affair. Among the guests was John Eigenbrod, of Badgley, Riedel & Myer's staff.

W. M. Landis, who for a number of years has managed the Star Florist store at 65 West 14th street, has taken space and will open a store in the new Cosmopolitan Garden, 34 West 23d street. Mr. Landis is clever and active in the business and we wish him success in this venture.

Traendly & Schenck are quite strong on roses, Ophelia being, among others, noteworthy. Papa Traendly will spend a good part of this month on the farm at Rowaytown, Conn., and in August, with Mrs. Traendly, will make the trip to San Francisco. His valet will accompany him.

Edwin Auckers, one of Traendly & Schenck's clever salesmen, started a four weeks vacation, July 3. He plans to attend the outing of the Greek-American Florist Association, July 7, and spend the remainder of the time in Vermont.

Ralph Armstrong and wife are now sojourning at Newport, R. I., where he is conducting a summer store. The force at his Madison avenue store seem to be quite busy.

Miss Mabel Conkling, bookkeeper for H. E. Froment, has started for a vacation of several weeks. She is a hard worker and has earned it.

William Mack, of W. P. Ford's staff, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is now much improved.

At the store of Charles A. Dards it was recently stated that they had been very busy with funeral work.

John Young & Co. are handling fine stocks of the rose, Francis Scott Key, and also other good roses.

Moore, Hentz & Nash are receiving very fine stock of Rose Ophelia from R. C. Pye, Nyack, N. Y.

We learn that G. E. M. Stumpp is being successful with his new store at Southampton, L. I.

H. Bergman, a very clever florist, has bought Henry Hart's store at Far Rockaway.

Young & Nugent have recently been quite busy with funeral work.

JULY CLUB MEETING.

About 30 members of the local florists' club journeyed to the establishment of Fred Goldring, Font Grove, where the July meeting was held at the close of an evening which showed the country in the vicinity to be a picture of summer beauty. Following a discussion brought about by Edward P. Tracey relative to the small attendance at the funeral of one of the members who died last month, the club decided to instruct W. C. Newport, chairman of the sick visitation committee, to send postal notices to all the members to attend the funeral of any member who may die later. It is expected that this means will bring the matter to the attention of those who might otherwise not learn of it until too late.

Considerable discussion on the subject of the flower show in November followed the report of the chairman, F. A. Danker, who said he was willing to work for the success of the show but did not want the honor of the chairmanship of the committee. Several of the members suggested that as a number of the retailers had lost their enthusiasm for the show that perhaps it would be best not to go ahead with the arrangements this year. The consensus was that unless everyone is enthusiastic for the show it had better not be held. The subject was put to a vote upon a resolution offered by R. W. Bilson and the members voted unanimously not to have a show this year.

Edward P. Tracey told interestingly of an automobile trip enjoyed June 26-28 by a party of four members of the club through a considerable portion of New England, traveling 1,050 miles at an average of more than 225 miles a day. The party was made up of Ralph M. Ward, New York; A. S. Burns, Jr., Spring Valley; Frederick A. Danker, Frederick Henkes, Edward P. Tracey and Thomas F. Tracey. The party motored to Pittsfield, Mass., where they decided to take a run to the White Mountains, New Hampshire. They passed through Rutland, Vt., Manchester and reached Bretton Woods, where they made a stop for dinner at one of the large hotels, and then took up the journey to Portland, Maine, where they visited some of the growers and found carnations to be of extra quality. From Portland the journey to Boston was along the seashore. At Madbury, N. H., they saw Elliott's place with one greenhouse 1,350 feet long. On the way from Boston they passed through Hartford, Conn., on the way to Cromwell, Conn., to visit the establishment of A. N. Pierson, Inc. Here they found a city of greenhouses with appliances up to date and every evidence of a large and active business. Wallace R. Pierson showed them many things, including a dairy with 150 cows. The Pierson establishment has 500 men employed and is one of the largest commercial places in the East. Wallace accompanied the party back to Hartford, where they visited the parks and were much impressed with the rose gardens and rockery work. On the day they were there the park was thronged with visitors attracted by the rose exhibits.

After the meeting refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. The meeting of the club on the evening of August 5 will be at Henkes Brothers, Newtonville. Arrangements for the annual clambake of the club are under way. A special meeting of the organization was held on the evening of July 8, at which the subject was discussed. It is planned to hold the outing for the members and their lady friends in August at a date to be announced later.

Among the recent visitors was Patrick Welch of Boston, president of the S. A. F., accompanied by Mrs. Welch. The couple spent four days in this section and besides visiting a number of the growers and retailers, took a side trip to Saratoga. At the Spa, Mr. and Mrs. Welch put up at the Hotel Worden. One of the surprises here was to find that Mine Host Kelly and President Welch were old acquaintances. Twenty-seven years ago, when President Welch last visited Saratoga, Kelly was a clerk in the hotel. With the lapse of time Kelly has become proprietor of the house. The evening was spent in pleasant reminiscences.

In her will, Mrs. Dean Sage of Menands, bequeathed to Thomas Talbot, gardener for some years on the Sage estate, the sum of $200. Mrs. Sage remembered all the old employes with various sums. The only other bequest outside the family and the servants was the sum of $50,000 to Cornell University, in which institution Mr. Sage in his lifetime took a great interest.

BUSINESS AND PRICES SATISFACTORY.

The condition of oversupply which has hit almost every city in the country has made itself felt here also, but not nearly as much so as is reported elsewhere. While stock of all kinds, especially roses, has been very plentiful, business has held up in a surprising manner, and much of the glut was taken care of at good prices. On "Dollar Day" which was featured by a leading afternoon newspaper, many florists offered unusual bargains in flowers of various kinds and great quantities were sold. Roses are in great oversupply and the quality is splendid. Numerous sales on these popular June flowers are being held. The month of June has been a splendid month for bedding stock as the cold weather in May retarded sales very greatly with the result that what florists lost in May has been made up in June, sales running ahead of last year. On the whole florists here are very well satisfied with the business they have transacted during the first six months of the year.

CLUB MEETING.

The meeting of the local florists' club, held at S. N. Peck's flower store on Superior street was very well-attended and it is presumed that the announcement that plans would be made at this meeting for the annual picnic brought the crowd. These picnics have been great successes the last three years and it was unanimously voted to have another, July 7, at Ottawa park. Various committees were appointed by Max Spanner to assure another success. Preceding the picnic, all florists will line up for a parade in their delivery and touring cars, and will parade the principal streets of the downtown section. The autos will be handsomely decorated with bunting and flowers. At the park various games will be staged, the main feature of which will be a baseball game between the Germans and the Allies; also a tug of war between the same factions if any still remain hors de combat.

At this meeting the Sunday closing movement was also endorsed. All stores with a few exceptions will close Sundays at noon during July and August.

NOTES.

Schramm Bros. have had a tremendous amount of landscape gardening during the month of June and have succeeded in inducing many real estate men to decorate their lots with a view to making them sell more quickly. This work has been done for Schramm's by James McLeod, a landscape gardener, a member of the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain.

June 20, a party of five florists of this city toured to Monroe, Mich., to visit the many famous nurseries of that place, which include Greening's and Ilgenfritz's. The party included Frank M. Schramm, George B. Schramm, Albert Lehmann, James McLeod and Arthur C. Kneisel.

Miss Helen Patteh, Madison street florist, is pleased with the way orders for casket covers have been coming in of late. Miss Schwartz, her bookkeeper, is back on the job again after an enforced layoff of three weeks due to illness.

Wisner, Delaware Street Florist, has found business increasing and as a result is planning to rebuild his ranges this summer. K.

Morganton, N. C.

While early vegetables, such as garden peas, onions, turnip greens, mustard, kale and asparagus made a poor crop as a consequence of the then prevailing drought, this has been largely atoned for by an abundance of moisture, fine growing weather, with the result that all later vegetables made fine crops. We have cabbages, beets, onions, lettuce, new potatoes and snap beans, both for table use and a large surplus for canning. Some varieties of fruit did well, while others made a poor crop, or none at all. The strawberry crop is medium, blackberries just coming in, cherries poor to medium; peaches, nearly ripe, moderate crop only; good apples scarce, few and far between. There are many blight worms, mites and other insect pests to contend with this year. Flower garden stock does not seem to be making anything like the progress one would usually look for at this season, when compared with other years. We had a rainfall of 3.15 inches in March, 0.41 inches in April, 4.82 inches in May, 2.96 inches up to June 28, totaling to date 11.34 inches, and making a monthly average of 2.88½ inches.

New Early Flowering Giant Pansies

The new strain produces its giant flowers about six weeks earlier than other known types. In the early part of March last year, when the old type Pansies hardly showed any buds the plants of this new strain bore from three to five of their giant flowers.

The Seed Trade

J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., President; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., First Vice-President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary. Thirty-fourth annual convention, June 1916.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. Willmer Livingston, of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., to meet his wife and mother returning from Seattle.

OWING to the lateness of the pea crop some of the western seed trade convention visitors did not return via Idaho, but will make that trip later.

FLORAL PARK, N. Y.—John Lewis Childs, Mary C. Childs and Vernon G. Childs have incorporated as John Lewis Childs, Inc., to do a seed and flower business. The capital stock is $400,000.

DES MOINES, IA.—The Iowa Seed Co. advises that there has been unprecedented demand for summer seeds, due to the continued cold weather. The year's business as a whole is well in advance of previous records.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Chris Reuter reports greatly extended business, due to the decrease in cotton acreage and the consequent demand for seed specialties not heretofore used in the south to any very large extent.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade July 7 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.—Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., returned from the Wisconsin pea districts, July 7.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Northrup, King & Co. say their business has been very satisfactory during the spring months this season with the exception of the month of May, which was a little quiet, owing to the unseasonable weather conditions.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—W. Atlee Burpee & Co. state that since the first of January their retail, market garden and wholesale business in the aggregate has been equal to last year. They lost considerably, however, in the export trade early in the winter.

JACQUES COURTINE, who has called on the American trade for many years past, is now with A. & L. Bremond Freres, Ollioules, France, and will manage their business during the war, both members of the firm having been called to army service.

PALO ALTO, CALIF.—The Sloan Seed Co. has been granted authority by the state railroad commission to issue its common stock to Frank C. Sloan in exchange for his going business. Permission to sell 2,500 shares of preferred stock at par value of $10 is also granted.

REPORTS on clover seed prospects on the Pacific coast seem to be mixed. Some parts of Oregon report root worm, while in contradiction the Willamette valley predicts a bumper crop. Idaho and Montana report damage and smaller acreage. Carry-overs are small in both clover and timothy.

NEWARK, N. J.—Alexander Forbes, president of J. F. Noll & Co., is at present in Orange Memorial hospital, where he was operated on for appendicitis June 17. He is making very satisfactory progress towards recovery, and it is hoped that another week will see the finish of his sojourn there.

THE seed trade generally reports June collections falling behind those of last year and quite a few dealers asking for extensions into July. Market gardeners, especially in the west, are getting very low prices indeed for their crops, which have been liberal, and so slow in paying that early closing of their accounts is far from promising.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Wood, Stubbs & Co. say their sales are just about what they were last season, possibly a little bit less. All of the sales, however, were much smaller and the larger part of the business was curtailed to a considerable extent. This is attributed to lack of ready funds among their customers. The total business, however, shows a fair profit and they feel very well satisfied with the returns.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Worms and insects have never been so numerous and destructive in the history of the city and have caused heavy demand for sprayers and insecticides. A recent severe hail storm has caused demand for garden seeds, due to necessity of replanting, but otherwise trade is dull, and local seedsmen are planning their vacations.—R. J. B.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Currie Bros. Co. says that the season now closing has been quite satisfactory, showing a considerably increased business over last year. The firm is particularly gratified at the counter trade. As it is occupying a new location it was more or less a speculation when moving whether the counter trade would increase sufficiently to justify the change.

Boddington to Incorporate.

At a meeting of the creditors of A. T. Boddington, 342 West Fourteenth street, New York, held July 1, it was unanimously resolved to incorporate. The statement of the business transacted during the past four months was sufficiently favorable to warrant these gentlemen in making the Arthur T. Boddington Co., Inc., a permanency under this new title. This incorporation will be without prejudice to the claims of the creditors and was, it is said, adopted for the purpose of safeguarding their interests.

In Memoriam.

Whereas, The American Seed Trade Association has lost during the past year from its members, Jesse E. Northrup, of Minneapolis, Minn.; John M. Griffith, of Baltimore, Md.; Louis B. Schulte, of Houston, Tex.; William H. Grenell, of Pierrepont Manor, N. Y.; and

Whereas, Almighty God in his infinite wisdom and love, has removed from our midst the above members, be it, therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of these four active members the American Seed Trade Association has sustained a great loss; and this association extends to the bereaved families our sincere sympathy in their great loss, and that these resolutions and memorials be incorporated in the minutes of this convention, and a suitable copy thereof be presented to the respective families.

SPECIAL MEMORIAL BY S. F. WILLARD.

The American Seed Trade Association has lost by death during the past year two honored ex-presidents, Jesse E. Northrup and William H. Grenell. Both were active and staunch supporters of all that pertained to the best interests of the seed trade. Because of my close relations with both of them during the years of my official connection with the association, I desire to express my deep sense of personal loss, and to record the high regard and appreciation which I held for both; with Mr. Northrup an acquaintance during only a few years, but full of kind words and acts on his part, which will long remain with me as a treasured expression of his friendship; with Mr. Grenell an acquaintance during all of his business life and a more intimate and close friendship during the later years. Mr. Grenell's death while in the prime of life came as a sudden shock which will not soon pass from me. He was a quiet, unassuming man of strong character and genial disposition, with a large circle of personal and business friends to whom he was ever loyal.

"But thou and I have shaken hands,
Till growing winters lay me low;
My paths are in the fields I know,
And thine in undiscover'd lands."

S. F. WILLARD.

JESSE E. NORTHRUP.

Jesse E. Northrup, of the firm of Northrup, King & Co., died at Minneapolis, Minn., February 4, 1915. Mr. Northrup was one of the best known seedsmen in the United States. For many years he took an active interest in the affairs of the American Seed Trade Association, and served as its president in 1901-1902. While in health he was always ready to give of his time and means liberally to promote the best interests of our association. As a resident of the city of Minneapolis he held a prominent place, and will be greatly missed from the many different business, civic and social affairs with which he was so closely connected.

JOHN M. GRIFFITH.

John M. Griffith, president and founder of the firm of Griffith & Turner Co., Baltimore, Md., died October 3, 1914, at the age of 77 years. Mr. Griffith was actively engaged in the seed and farm machinery business for more than 50 years. As a member of this association he was always ready to extend a helping hand to any work undertaken by the seed trade.

LOUIS B. SCHULTE.

Louis B. Schulte, of Houston, Texas, died March 20, 1915, at the age of 45. Mr. Schulte was president of the seed firm of Reichardt & Schulte Co., having been with this company for about 16 years. He was very active in the affairs of his home city, and was a valued member of the Elks, Knights of Pythias, Travelers' Protective Association and other local organizations.

WM. H. GRENELL.

William H. Grenell was born at Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., January 26, 1846, and died at his home May 19, 1915. Mr. Grenell became a member of this association in 1892, and has always been very active in all of its interests. He was elected president at the Alexandria Bay convention in 1905. The abounding hospitalities at this meeting furnished by Mr. Grenell, will long be remembered by those who participated. Besides his large seed growing business, Mr. Grenell was interested in various other business interests in his home town. For 13 years he was captain of Company A, 35th regiment, New York state guards. During all the years that Mr. Grenell was a member of this association he was a leading spirit in the directing of its affairs, and no man will be more missed from its meetings and councils than he.

Seedsmen Visit California Seed Farms.

One of the most delightful features of the programme of the convention of the American Seed Trade Association, San Francisco, Calif., June 21-24, was the visit to a number of the seed farms in the vicinity of that city as the guests of the seed growers. California hospitality abounded at every turn and the delightful trip will long linger in the memory of the members of the association and their ladies.

The party left San Francisco at 8:05 a. m. June 25, and after a pleasant rail journey of two hours arrived at Gilroy, where autos were in waiting, with the seed farm of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co. at San Juan scheduled as the first stopping point. Here the principal crop is sweet peas, then at the zenith of their glory, and each lady in the party was presented with a bouquet of these beautiful flowers. The various farms of C. C. Morse & Co. were next visited, after which the party returned to San Juan, arriving at noon, and a barbecue was served on the historic grounds of the former General Castro, at one time governor of California under Mexican rule. The repast was an immense success, thoroughly enjoyed by all, and of decided interest to many of the party who had never attended one of these unique affairs. Large juicy steaks, broiled over coals in the open air, chicken salad and Spanish beans were part of the menu, and after the meal a photograph of the party was taken in front of the Old Mission of San Juan Bautista, founded in 1770 by the Franciscan fathers. After the picture the visitors were permitted to view the interior of the mission. Following this autos were again loaded and visits were made to the farms of the Braslin Seed Growers' Co., Waldo Rohnert and the California Seed Growers' Association, near Hollister. At the Rohnert establishment cherries were passed to the ladies. The return to Gilroy was then made, where one of the farms of the Kimberlin Seed Co. was visited; also another of the California Seed Growers' Association, and the headquarters ranch of Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., where a stop was made to allow the visitors to remove some of the dust from their throats with liquid refreshments provided by the amiable hostess, Mrs. Wheeler. The trip was then resumed to San Jose, the party arriving there about 7 p. m. Here a banquet, the menu of which was published in these columns last week, was served at the Hotel Vendome, after which dancing was enjoyed by the younger set. Rooms were provided for all and after a good night's rest, breakfast was served, the seed growers acting as hosts, and the autos were again entered and visits were paid to the following seed farms in the vicinity of San Jose in the order named: McGill Seed Co., California Seed Growers' Association, W. J. Fosgate, and Kimberlin Seed Co. Cigars and refreshments were served to the guests during the inspection of the establishments. At 2:00 p. m. a delightful luncheon was served at the San Jose Country Club, after which the party was taken back to San Jose and boarded the train to San Francisco, where it dispersed for home.

In the preliminary report of this exhibition in these columns, issue of June 26, this award was inadvertently omitted.

Convention Echoes.

Lawrence S. Payn, a convention visitor, representing the house of Simon Louis Freres & Co., Bruyeres le Chatel, France, left Bordeaux May 2, arriving in New York May 12. When he left France the situation was serious from the fact that the acreages will be greatly reduced in garden seeds generally, owing to withdrawal of men mobilized, and even if the crops were to be fair, deliveries are bound to be short on contract. Immediate advices from his house indicate that they have advanced prices on some things on account of the outlook, due to labor scarcity and diminished area planted. A certain proportion will be sown of cereals for absolutely necessary supply of food for the people there. He reports a successful trip in this country so far and good business.

The firm of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., is one of the largest in the seed growing business on the Pacific coast and was established about the year 1873 by C. C. Morse, the father of Lester L. Morse, retiring president of the American Seed Trade Association, and who has practically been the head and front of the arrangements for the entertainment of the convention of the A. S. T. A. convention in 1915 at San Francisco.

Hogue-Kellogg Co., Ventura, Calif., were among the bean growers in that vicinity who entertained visitors to the convention who stopped off en route. W. H. Woodruff, of F. H. Woodruff & Son, Milford, Conn., accompanied by Mrs. Woodruff, Watson S. Woodruff and wife, W. C. Langbridge and wife and Howard M. Earl, were among those who enjoyed Ventura county's hospitality.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

22—KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, and many others. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

26—KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long.

28—MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance.

30—GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous.

32—GIANT PARISIAN—The flowers are of enormous size, and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground. An unusually showy mixture.

NEW SEED NOW READY

All sorts and mixtures, except the new Pansy Princess, are $5.00 per oz.; $1.25 per ¼-oz.; 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c; any 5 pkts, $1.00. Please order by number.

PRINCESS. 20—The New Upright Pansy

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President; John Watson, Newark, N. Y., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916.

AUSTIN, TEX.—The office of Ed. L. Byers, chief inspector of orchards and nurseries of the state of Texas, has been moved to this city from Houston.

FORT WORTH, TEX.—J. B. Baker, of Baker Bros. Co., has returned from Detroit, Mich., where he attended the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen.

WE are in receipt of the Thirty-second annual report of the board of park commissioners of Minneapolis, Minn., profusely illustrated with maps and half-tone engravings.

NEW ALBANY, IND.—Considerable apprehension is being felt by fruit growers in this locality, following the appearance of pear blight, which is spreading throughout the county.

J. R. RICHARDS, superintendent of play grounds of the south park system, Chicago, delivered an address at the opening session of the national congress on "Recreation" at San Francisco, July 6.

DELAVAN, WIS.—The Moxley Nursery is reported to be in the most flourishing condition it has been for many years. All the vacant space of the 31 acres which comprise its extent is being utilized, and it is estimated that there is under cultivation 90,000 plants, shrubs, etc., of every description and variety.

Christmas Trees Planted by Millions.

That Uncle Sam is determined future generations of young Americans shall not suffer any decrease in the crop of Christmas trees is shown by the fact that the forest service is about finishing up its big planting of ten million trees. All over the vast areas of the national forest reserves in the western states, mostly in mountainous regions, this work has been vigorously prosecuted for several months.

European Pine Importation Prohibited.

Pursuant to a quarantine order signed by the secretary of agriculture, the importation of European pine trees into the United States will be prohibited after July 1. This action is taken to save American pine trees from the ravages of the pine shoot moth, which has already done much damage in European forests and has become established in nurseries and parks in some states. With the quarantine in effect, it is believed, however, that by pruning and destroying the affected nursery stock the disease can be stamped out.

The European pine shoot moth eats out the new buds and kills the young twigs of pine trees in such a way that the timber value is permanently lowered. The moth lays its eggs in August singly on the new buds of the pine, and the young larva hatches and eats its way into the buds, where it spends the winter. It is impossible to reach the larvæ with insecticides, and the only effective way of combating the pest is by pruning and destroying the infected buds and twigs.

French Nursery Stocks.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

Fruit Tree Stocks.—The usual average has been sown and transplanted. There may be some shortage in one-year-old stocks, but the supply of two-year stocks is ample to cover any deficit in the smaller grades.

Ornamental Trees and Shrubs.—There will be the usual assortment, owing to the fact that they were propagated before the war began. As usual, the list is now so extensive that some items will be short and others too plentiful. In some the price will be slightly lower and in others advanced to a small extent, so that the average will be about the same.

Rose Stocks.—Canina is good and will be in sufficient supply. Manetti and La Grifferæ will be scarce and high. Multiflora and Polyantha seedlings will be in good supply at the usual price.

Roses.—A good assortment is ready for the next season's shipment and some of the novelties have been extensively propagated.

Labor.—The same conditions exist as in September last year. Some more men have left, but some wounded at the beginning of the war have returned. Women are employed more generally. German prisoners are employed also in some districts, so that the labor average is about 50 per cent of normal. This will suffice under present restricted business conditions.

Transportation.—Shipments will be made as usual, Bordeaux being now the principal seaport for the American lines. It is anticipated that all shipments for the United States will be made on time at the usual season.

Rejections.

Paper read by J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O., at the fortieth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

Telegram:

April 18th.—Shipment of 10th at hand—not up to grade. Wire disposal, or will accept at one-half price.

Letter:

June 12th.—Enclosed find check as per your statement of June 1, less $15.87 for 75 peach, 25 pear, 38 gooseberries, 16 roses and 8 maples. Your invoice of October 25. Above stock was dead, damaged and crooked; we could not use it.

Report:

April 21st.—Received 435 Staymans, rejected 148; these are too large and do not match well with our own stock, several of them are one-inch or more in diameter. Received, 700 Baldwin, reject 235; 140 are under 11/16-in., 22 crooked, 36 no roots, 37 root gall. Received 15 red horse chestnuts, reject 4; these have no self starter.

Letter:

June 15th.—In response to your statement of June 1, the shrubs and roses sent us last fall are all dead. They were carefully handled, and you know that we have been in the business a long time and know how to care for and force stock. As they were no good, we must decline to pay your bill and should be reimbursed for our loss of time, care and profit on sales.

Any of the above sound familiar? What do you do? Send a credit memorandum? Order stock returned, which you know will be worthless when received, or so late in the season that you can only put it on the brush pile? Write and tell your customers, what they already know, that according to terms long established, all complaints must be made within five days after receipt of goods; that you are not responsible for loss or damage, after delivery of stock in good condition, properly packed to carrier at your station? That the trees, etc., had been carefully examined by a competent state inspector and no evidence found of scale, root gall, wire worms, hot air or perjury? That you shipped shrubs and roses from the same blocks, graded by the same men, to a great many firms who forced them all right and paid their bills promptly with no complaint or deduction? Do you mix in, with the above replies, according to the needs of your customers, blarney, sarcasm, appeal to reason and to common honesty, veiled and unveiled threats of refusal, and the terms of the law, and above all, the solemn fact that you need the money? Do you get a check back by return mail? If so, what will you take for copies of your letters, or a receipt as to how to write them?

Are all rejections reported wrong? No—I care not what your facilities are, or how sure you are that everything is labeled, graded and packed right, counts and recounts verified, some errors will be made, some stock sent out that never ought to go, and when a letter or report comes in promptly, giving definite numbers and reasons, the probability is that it is right and allowance for such cases is a legitimate over-head expense for every nurseryman, and should be figured in our selling prices.

What about the unjust ones? A nurseryman once told me that he figured on paying freight bills with his claims for shortage and rejected stock, and I am quite well convinced that others are working on about that basis, although they don't tell about it. If you have sand enough to call for a show down and run the risk of offending a customer (although such customers are generally costly ones in the end), it is easy enough for them to claim a mistake in reports from cellar or that goods have been misplaced or destroyed. Eliminating all proper and honest claims, I think any of you engaged in the wholesale business will agree with me, that there are many claims made, aggregating large amounts, every season that should never be entertained or allowed; that in some instances we are forced to carry the risks of our customer's business and have thrown back on us, the damage to goods in transit, or caused by improper handling and care for stock after received, saying nothing of claims from the man who bought early and finds the market going against him, or the man who over-bought and figures he will have a surplus. In fact, the man who tries, often succeeds in making his creditors stand part of the loss caused by his poor judgment as to when and what to buy. Common business integrity should cause us to stand our own losses and to report promptly on receipt, any claims we may have for adjustment, and yet every June and December in response to season statements come deduction and claim for allowance on stock shipped sometimes months before, and for which no previour report or claim has been made.

What are we going to do about it? Judging from past experience, grin or not, but surely bear it, and in effect put our seal of approval on the other fellow's sharp or dishonest practices. Perhaps it might be well for all of us to do a little thinking along the line of grading, both our own and the other fellow's stock. Remember just what was done with the block that was a little injured one winter, or that made up almost, but not quite to best grade. Give the other fellow credit for being just as anxious for a square deal as we are, until we know to the contrary.

Mention the American Florist when writing

Those of us who have two sets of graders, one working on stock received and one on our own growing, might switch the gangs, say once a week. Does any one really think if the members of the American Association of Nurserymen would live up to our long established terms, no claims considered that are not made within five days after receipt of goods, that we are not responsible for loss or damage after delivery to carriers in good condition properly packed, that we would not shut off at least the larger part of unjust rejections? If we held our accounts open, refused to give more credit until settlement was made; in fact insisted on what was right, and only that, while it might cost some of us on the send off the loss of a few orders, it certainly could not but help in the end, all who are honestly striving for the betterment of our business. It does seem that this class, the vast majority of our members, ought to have the sand to stand together on a few business propositions and not allow a small minority to establish terms that are neither right nor just because we may possibly lose the profit on a few orders.

Controlling the Apple Borer.

"Worming" and painting the trunks of the trees are recommended to owners of apple orchards as efficient methods of dealing with the roundheaded apple-tree borer in a new farmers' bulletin, No. 675, of the United States department of agriculture. A heavy application of some paint that will not injure the trees but will remain in an unbroken coat on the bark for two or three months, is effective in preventing the female from laying her eggs in the tree, and greatly reduces the omount of tree, and greatly reduces the amount of worming, or the removal of the insects with a wire and knife that must be done.

INDEPENDENCE, KAN.—The horticultural outlook in Douglas county is particularly bright. The estimated value of the fruit crop is $30,030.

MIAMI, FLA.—For the purpose of deciding whether or not the nurserymen of Dade county should be allowed to sell their stock in the county, the state plant board, which was organized for the purpose of directing the campaign against citrus canker and other plant pests, is conducting hearings at several points in the county.

Greenhouse Tomato Culture.

Many complaints are heard this season in regard to poor crops of greenhouse tomatoes. The trouble is a poor setting of fruit. Directly, this is caused by cloudy, cool weather conditions and excessive rains on one hand and carelessness on the part of growers on the other hand. During such a period as we have passed through the last five weeks, some attention must be given, as matters will not run themselves.

While tomatoes generally set fruit pretty readily during warm, sunny weather, in the absence of such weather, the expert grower must resort to every means at his hands to secure success. Such weather conditions are a benefit in disguise, as by a reduction in output in a general way, the active grower reaps his reward.

Among the necessary cultural methods comes, first, restricted moisture; second, assistance in pollination; third, fire heat. In these notes we have often emphasized the need of reducing the soil and atmospheric moisture at the time of fruit setting; we must prevent a rank growth, and also assist the formation of potent pollen by carrying a dry atmosphere. If outside conditions are against us, start the fires just enough to correct the trouble.

We have a house of Bonney Best tomatoes that is carrying a heavy crop, produced under very unfavorable conditions. This house carried a heavy crop of lettuce late into the season. The lettuce was cut about May 10, and at that time had almost choked out the tomatoes. Immediately after removing the lettuce, the house received one good watering, followed by a thorough hoeing, and no more water was applied until dry rot appeared upon a few of the half-grown fruits. At every favorable opportunity, daily, the house was pollinated by using the "drum stick," simply a handy round stick to jar the plants to shed the pollen. The plants are on strings and a half dozen sharp raps with the stick will start the pollen during the noon hours, and the work is rapidly done. Since the fruit is set we have watered heavily to get all the size we can.

MARKETMAN.

Controlling the Squash Vine Borer.

The squash-vine borer lives largely upon the squash and pumpkin, but is also found on the muskmelon, cucumber and gourd. Its presence is not usually detected at first, but can later be located by the coarse, yellowish excrement which the borers force from their burrows in the stems, and which accumulates on the ground beneath. Later the leaves suddenly wilt and die down, and unless the borers are cut out of the vines, the chances are great that the vines will be killed. The larvae are known to bore through the stems from the roots to the base of the leaves, and through the leaf stalks, according to the new United States department of agriculture Farmers' Bulletin No. 668, "The Squash-Vine Borer." The Hubbard squash, marrow cymlings and other late varieties of squash often suffer the greatest injury from the squash-vine borer, and the devastations are likely to be more acutely felt in small gardens than in large commercial fields.

Not infrequently crops are lost year after year where the ground is successively planted to pumpkins, squashes or other crops which the borers infest. Since the insect passes the winter in the fields which it has ravaged, the ground should not be replanted the succeeding year to crops on which the borer lives.

Good results have often been obtained by planting as a trap crop, as early as possible, a few summer squashes such as crookneck and early cymlings, between the rows of the main crop of late varieties. The summer squashes attract the borers in such numbers as to leave a much smaller number to deal with upon the late or main crop. As soon as the early crop is harvested, or earlier, if the ground is needed for the main crop, the summer squashes and vines are raked up and burned to destroy all larvae which they may harbor. The same treatment is followed after gathering the late varieties. This method has proved profitable where used in New Jersey, and should produce good results further north. In the south, however, where well defined broods of borers appear, it may not be so efficient, but is at least worthy of a thorough test.

Another cultural method which tends to restrict the damage is to cover a small part of the vines, after they have attained some length, with earth, so that secondary roots will be sent out to support the plants in case the main root is injured by the borer. When the vines are so badly infested as to be incapable of bearing fruit, they usually die at once, and should be promptly taken off the field and burned. As soon as the crop is matured, the old vines should be destroyed.

The old-time remedy of cutting the borers out of the vines, although laborious, is useful. It is about the only method open for employment after the borers have entered the vines. As several individuals often infest a single vine, it is best to cut longitudinally so as not to sever the vine from the root stalk. The wound will heal more quickly if covered with moist soil. The location of the borer in the vine may be readily detected by the accumulation of yellow "frass" or excrement at the point where it is working.

BALTIMORE, MD. — A severe hail storm in this vicinity did considerable damage, many truckers losing their entire crops, necessitating replanting.

Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,
L. Buckendorf,
Norfolk, Neb.

Annual Convention and Exhibition, Fort Worth, July 6-7.

The Second Day's Proceedings.

The second annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association opened at Fort Worth, Tuesday, July 6, as reported in these columns last week, the first day of the meeting being given over to entertainment of the visitors and preliminary business.

After the selection of Dallas as the place of the 1916 convention, and the election of officers for the ensuing year as chronicled in our report of the opening day's proceedings, a warm discussion of the state law requiring nursery and greenhouse inspection, enlivened the Wednesday morning session. Criticism was made of alleged looseness on the part of the state inspectors in doing their work, and the claim was made that Texas florists were handicapped by being forced to comply with an inspection law that was not in force in some other states. The round table discussion, "Carnations as a Profitable Crop in Texas," led by Bird Forrest, Waxahachie, was completed, and was followed by a paper, "How We Should Treat Our Competitors," read by H. O. Hannah of Sherman. Other papers of interest read during this session included the following: "Why Woman Is Indispensable in the Florist Business," by Mrs. Annie Wolfe Brigance, Waco; "The Retail Store and Its Management, and Some Methods of Saving Time and Material," by H. Greve, Dallas, followed by a discussion. At the close of a short session in the afternoon, the visitors were taken to Forest park by trolley and a ball game was played between the local club and visiting florists, which resulted in a victory for the visitors. A barbecue followed the game and was enjoyed by everybody present, the attendance numbering about 200.

DURING RECESS.

The women delegates to the convention were delightfully entertained at a reception in their honor at the Westbrook hotel, Tuesday afternoon.

Fun ruled for more than an hour at a luncheon at the Cafe O'Reilly Wednesday. Philip J. Foley of Chicago was toastmaster, and as usual kept the guests in an uproar with funny stories. Pickled elephant, with boot straps, and alligator hide, stuffed with bean potpie, were two of the pieces de resistance among the delicacies noted on the menu.

R. C. Kerr, of Houston, was pitcher for the visitors in the ball game; that is, he was until Frank McCabe, of Chicago, and Tom Wolfe, of Waco, "got to" his slow ball and hammered him out of the box.

Phil Foley pitched the first ball in the ball game and also struck out the first man. "Some pitcher"—both quality and quantity.

The auto ride about the city Tuesday afternoon, included visits to the greenhouses of J. E. McAdam, Baker Bros. Co., Geo. Kennedy and the Drumm Seed & Floral Co.

It was a very good convention. Fort Worth's hospitality was of the true southern kind, and the visiting florists were royally entertained.

Next—The fall flower show at Houston.

Co-Operation.

A paper by President Patrick Welch, of the Society of American Florists, read at the second annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, Waco, Tex., July 6-7, 1915.

Gentlemen of the Convention:

I sincerely regret that I am unable to fulfill the promise which I made to your honorable president some time ago to be present and address you on the question of the greatest importance to all state and national horticultural and floricultural societies—that is, affiliation with the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. I believe thoroughly in local organization in our profession, but my experience of 30 years of membership in the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists convinces me that membership in these should also be supplemented by membership in the national organization. The state organization is limited in the scope of its usefulness, and at best can only accomplish limited results. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society, one of the oldest societies in our country, having been founded in 1829, has greatly encouraged and developed floriculture and horticulture in New England, and its example has been followed by many organizations all over the country, and yet many of its leading members are members of our national organization, and are continually testifying to the benefits derived from the national society. Our society with its national charter, its membership, coming from nearly every state and territory of this great United States knowing the advantages and realizing the deficiencies of their respective state organizations, makes a mighty gathering, whose interests and influence reflect the impressions of our profession all over our country.

The objects of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists are to advance the love of floriculture and horticulture in America; to promote and encourage the development of their industries; to classify their products; to hold meetings and exhibitions; and to co-operate with national and state governments and horticultural bodies in disseminating horticultural knowledge.

Membership—All persons interested in horticulture, professionally or amateur, and manufacturers of and dealers in horticultural supplies shall be eligible to membership individually, and on payment of $5, other things being satisfactory, shall be admitted to membership. The annual dues thereafter are $3 a year, and any annual member in good standing may become a life member on the payment of $25 and be exempt from all future assessments. This society has handled questions of tariff, transportation, shipments, nation-wide publicity for our business, national flower shows, and other questions, to the advantage of all, during recent years especially, and will continue to do so more effectively in the future. The society feels, however, that every florist and horticulturist should obtain membership, and we therefore solicit the aid, assistance and co-operation of this Texas State Florists' Association and of other organizations. In order to encourage membership in our national organization, and at the same time to insure representation on our national board of directors, it is now one of our by-laws that whenever 100 members of any society have become members of our organization its President shall have a seat in our Board of Directors, thus we feel, assuring co-operation.

The dangers to co-operation come from within, and not from without, and the co-operation movement is no weaker nor stronger than the intelligent determination of those who engage in it, therefore let us have in the national organization your assistance in bringing it about. As John Stuart Mills has said, "All advantages that a man may possess arise from the power of acting in combination with his fellows, and of accomplishing by the united effort of members what could not be accomplished by the individual effort of individuals." I believe that you will carry home from this convention a practical conception of the difficulties which beset our business, and the reward that awaits their solution, and I feel that we in the national society can help in this solution. I extend to every member of the Texas State Florists' Association a most sincere invitation to enroll as a member of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. We look to the great state of Texas to send us some of its giant intellect to help in this society, and I feel that we will not be disappointed.

In behalf of the national organization I want to extend to you their greeting and wishes for a most happy and prosperous year.

Florists as Advertisers and Book-Keepers.

A paper by R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex., president of the Texas State Florists' Association, read at the second annual convention of the association, Fort Worth, July 6-7, 1915.

I want to say before I begin my paper proper, that this is a friendly criticism, and the gun shoots as far back toward me as it goes forward toward you; and I want to give you the benefit of the lesson that I received. I suppose there are no two features of our business that are more neglected than those pertaining to advertising and book-keeping. There is no line of business that needs a thorough system of book-keeping and judicious advertising more than the florist business.

How many florists in Texas today know whether or not their greenhouse is a paying proposition, if they are not keeping accurate records? While visiting throughout the state the past year, I was amazed at the great amount of wasted room in the greenhouses of Texas. Are your greenhouses producing 50 cents per square foot each year? If not, then they are a losing proposition. All over and above this amount is profit. Taking the average cost of labor, stock and fuel, the above figure is a fair estimate by an authority. How are we to know whether or not we get these results unless a system of book-keeping is used to show what is produced?

The reason this subject is so vitally interesting to me at this particular time is that about six months ago we had an auditor complete a new set of books—and I want to tell you we have had some eye-openers. I am frank to say that our greenhouses up to that time had never made us one dollar. We are now culling out the stock that is unprofitable and adding more stock that has showed profit.

This was not only true with our greenhouses, for we have had many leaks in our store. The auditor opened up a complete set of books for the store that showed what each department is doing. For instance—funeral work, plants, decorating, miscellaneous, etc. We have found out what is the average cost of each delivery; the percentage of the cost of advertising, and other things of this nature that there was no way of getting at before. It is positively staggering on investigation to find the great losses we have been suffering, and to think that we did business in such a reckless manner. There is no other business that can be conducted so badly—as the way some of us conduct the florist business, and have it last a year's time.

Another matter I want to touch upon is that of our credit. Many of the florists are very careless with their credits. Did you ever figure what you can save in one year's time by discounting your bills? If not, do so, and you will find it will run into a nice sum. Then, too, you can face the world with a smile, and say you owe no one.

I had a very prominent florist from central Texas tell me he owed no one except his banker. This florist is what I call a good business man. The florists of Texas today are in better condition financially than those in some other sections—so let us strive to "clean the sheets," pay all our obligations, even though we have to go to our banker to do it. Tell the world the florists of Texas owe no one; we have the real cash now, give us the goods.

Now just a few words on advertising: For the past three years this has been my hobby, and we have increased our business wonderfully by consistent advertising. I want to say that advertising can make you, or it can break you. It is something you will have to study very closely. In newspaper advertising 10% of the people who read the paper buy flowers—10% of the flower buyers read "Your Ad," and 10% of those who see your ad are ready to buy flowers. You pay for 100 per cent of circulation and get results from 1/10 of 1%. This may be slightly overdrawn, but it is a safe figure.

My point is this—your medium must reach the flower buying people. With the coming of the moving picture shows there opened up another good avenue for advertising. But this must be only in the best theatres; and the same rules that apply to the newspapers apply to the moving picture shows. Don't pay for dead circulation. Your advertising campaign should be laid out a year ahead, and followed out to the letter in order to get results.

Now, just a word about direct advertising. Frankly, I believe more study should be given to direct advertising, as I feel we get more good out of this medium than any other. The most essential thing is a good mailing list. Letters or literature should be well prepared and well written; not too much to say and to the point. I believe personal letters to the customer interest the customer more than stock folders. They feel there is something of a personal nature in the letter, and will read it through. Perhaps the best advertisement after all is a satisfied customer.

When you spend your money for advertising and get the customer to your store, by all means have him go away pleased. Let your motto be—"Satisfaction Must Be Yours."

How to Treat Your Competitors.

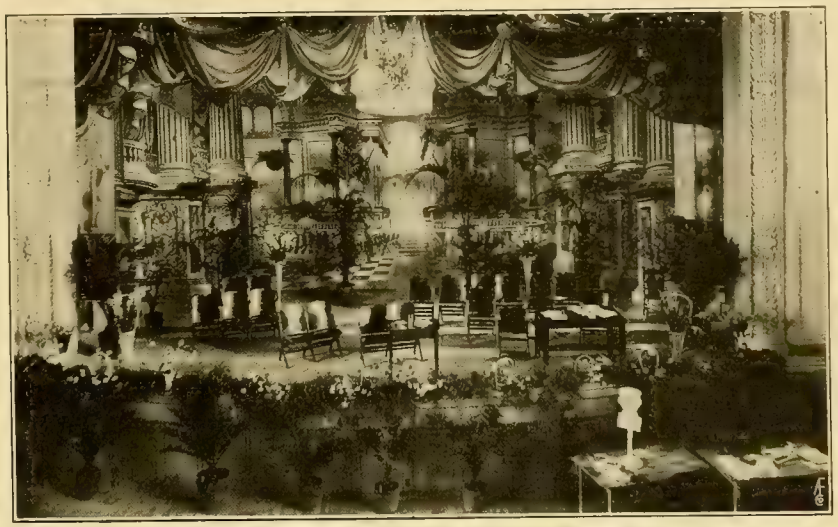
A discussion led by H. O. Hannah, Sherman, Tex., at the second annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, Fort Worth, July 6-7, 1915.

This is a friendly talk, part from experience, part from hearsay. We are here for our mutual benefit, to cure the defects, and to encourage in being and doing the right thing at the right time.

Your competitor is your best friend. You may say a friend in disguise. He keeps you from being sordid, arrogant, selfish and perhaps unaccommodating. Hence, treat him fair, square, honorable, just, truthful and considerate. Remember the success of his business may often add to your success. No one firm is going to sell all the flowers; each have their friends and there is a place for him. Do your best, grow the best flowers and plants, keep the most attractive store, arrange your flowers the most artistic, excel in all your decorations, be original, be inventive, but never be a "copy cat", using your competitors brain. Set the pace and let him follow.

Competition has given us such men as Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., on chrysanthemums; E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., on roses and Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., on carnations. Strive to excell. It is the same in all lines of business. Competition has given us the Cadillac, the Pierce-Arrow, and the Ford. Make your own prices, and be sure you make them so they will leave you a profit. You owe this to your business and to your competitor, and if he is a man, he will do likewise. Be on good terms, visit him and his store, and never do anything that would cause you to avoid his presence or his confidence. Never do anything that will cause him to ask you why or wherefore the cause thereof. Honor and truthfulness should govern your acts toward him. Sell all the stock you can, but do it in the right way. Never, no never, let the thought occur to you, "I will cut the price or quality to keep my competitor from making the sale." That is dishonorable.

If you are making prices on a large job of decorative work—wedding party or hall—and you find out his prices and take same for almost half his price, making no money for yourself, but robbing him, it is almost grand larceny. In furnishing figures for such occasion, tell them as we do, not figuring against our competitors, but be honest, and tell them that you can only do this at a profit, but will make it complete and guarantee satisfaction. This is what we do, and if the other fellow wants it for glory, we do not. We are in business for money, but will seek glory and honor in other fields. Work is often cheapened until the other fellow gets it, but the customer knows a cheap price often means cheap work.



TEXAS STATE FLORISTS' ASS'N CONVENTION HALL, FORT WORTH, JULY 6-7.

MEMBERS OF TEXAS STATE FLORISTS' ASS'N AT SECOND ANNUAL CONVENTION, FT. WORTH, JULY 6-7.

Never treat your competitor in any way that he will censure you, either to your face or to your back. My competitors have never come to me and accused me in any way of being unfair to them or to the trade. Many florists falsify, may I say lie? Often to no profit. Truth prevails and lasts. Special sales for surplus are legitimate and honorable, but to make floral wreaths for 50 cents or to sell carnations continuously for 25 cents or 35 cents per dozen, is disastrous, cheapens the goods, and there can be no profit, or if any, very little. It costs to grow flowers in Texas, and to buy we all know there is a cost and expense. The trade wants good stock and is willing to pay for it. You do in other lines.

Never pull crepe, against your competitor, nor allow your agents. That is dishonorable and unworthy of your profession. Remember, you sell God's most gracious gift to man, in all its sweetness and beauty, hence do not cheapen it nor tarnish it by your littleness or unworthy act. Never, no never, cut your price, solely to keep your competitor from making the sale. That is almost petty theft.

Tell the truth and expect it of your competitor. Never say that an azelea, poinsettia or primrose will bloom all summer, in order to make a sale; that is lying and your competitor may be honorable. These things are done. I have known clerks of competitors to tell customers theirs was the only flower store, when there was one almost across the street. For shame. You may some time make a sale by misrepresenting, but a clear conscience is more than a few pennies.

We have a railroad commission to make our railroads "toe the mark," not to cut prices, or make rebates, and in many places florists need regulating. Permit me to say we have two competitors, and we are on friendly terms, trade, loan or sell anything the other needs. I appreciate accommodating my competitor.

Never cheapen your goods by giving away a flower, or corsage to almost every one that enters your store, trying to buy their trade. There are times to give judiciously. Flowers have value. The dry goods man, the grocer, or the druggist do not continuously give away their goods. Then why should you? Don't make yourself cheap or you stock common. Flowers have their value and dignity, if I may use the word.

Carnation Growing in South-east Texas.

A paper by Elizabeth O. Weissinger, Beaumont, Tex., read at the second annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, Fort Worth, July 6-7, 1915.

Carnation culture is a comprehensive subject, bounded by an infinite diversity of opinion, but, seven years ago, when we took our courage in both hands, lacking capital and experience, and handicapped by "skirts," the ultimatum had gone forth that carnations could not be successfully or profitably grown in southeast Texas. Nothing daunted, we built a house especially for carnations, 28x150 feet and 16 feet high, running north and south, with roof and side ventilation, raised benches five feet wide and steam-heated. We get field-grown plants from Furrow & Co., Guthrie, Okla.; hence, we do not have to worry about our stock, and always get the best.

This season we planted White, Light Pink and Rose Enchantress, also Herald. For our compost we use three or four parts good maiden loam to one of well decomposed stable fertilizer, which has been prepared at least three months in advance before putting in benches, which have been thoroughly scrubbed and whitewashed. We order plants for September delivery and plant directly to benches, 12 inches apart, and give a good watering to settle the soil about the roots.

We find many details about carnation growing that require constant attention and unremitting care. Spraying is most important during the warm days we have in the early fall. By this means the temperature can be reduced to a moist growing atmosphere. We frequently spray the under part of the foliage where the red spider makes its appearance, and always spray quickly.

We give our plants strong wire support, and though they may wilt a little during the day, as long as they are erect and crisp each morning, we do not worry over losing them. The way the soil is handled has a great deal to do with what you get out of it. Judicious use of fertilizer and lime, with constant forking to keep in good mechanical condition, and the "seeing eye" that apprizes instantly of lurking danger.

The Beaumont Floral Co., owned and managed by women, represents faithful toil and the achievement possible to even unskilled women in "The man-made world."

"Who digs a well or plants a seed, a sacred pact he keeps with sun and sod; with these he helps refresh and feed the world, and enters partnership with God."

ZVOLANEK'S PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION GOLD MEDAL SWEET PEAS.

Zvolanek's Gold Medal Sweet Peas.

According to reports of the officials of the Panama-Pacific exposition, San Francisco, Calif., the exhibit of Ant. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Calif., a magnificent display of winter-flowering sweet peas which was awarded the Gold Medal of Honor, is most admired by the thousands of visitors to the exposition garden.

The accompanying illustration shows the Zvolanek Gold Medal sweet peas, of which there are 39 orchid-flowering varieties planted in the garden. The flowers are picked almost every day and exhibited in the Palace of Horticulture, where the magnificent blooms are a great attraction, commanding the admiration of visitors to the building, who are numbered in the thousands daily.

The seeds were sown in, the last week in January, the ground at that time not being fully prepared. The subsoil of the exposition garden is quicksand, and this is covered to the extent of 10 to 15 inches with sandy loam mixed with one-third rotted horse and cow manure, with occasional sprinklings of lime and bone meal. The vines were in flower the middle of April and are at this writing still covered with a wealth of bloom, with all indications that they will continue in color for some time.

William A. Leslie, the gentleman in the picture, a practical grower who has had charge of many other horticultural displays, is in charge of the Zvolanek sweet peas, and is under the direct supervision of Carl Purdy, well-known landscape architect, now superintendent of the exposition garden. Both are hard workers with practical minds and the Gold Medal of Honor bestowed upon the Zvolanek sweet peas is evidence of the careful culture that brought the flowers to such a high state of perfection.

American Rose Society.

The American Rose Society at its annual meeting in Boston endorsed the Cleveland flower show as its representative for a rose show this fall. The committee to represent this work is: Guy Bate, Newton Falls, Ohio, chairman; L. L. Lamborn, Alliance, Ohio, and E. B. George, Painesville, Ohio. These gentlemen constitute an official committee to represent the American Rose Society in accordance with the above action. The report that comes back at the present time is that the exhibition of roses from the middle west will be of the first order. The list of premiums for the exhibition is quite liberal also.

With the present month the newly elected officers assume their places in the organization of the society, viz.: S. S. Pennock, 1612 Ludlow street, Philadelphia, Pa., president, succeeding Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Louis J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., vice-president, succeeding Robert Pyle of West Grove, Pa. The holdovers are Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., treasurer, and Benj. Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., secretary. The executive committee for the ensuing year stands as follows: John H. Dunlop, Richmond Hill, Ontario; Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.; Eber Holmes, Montrose, Mass.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.

An executive committee meeting will be held at the office of President S. S. Pennock, 1612 Ludlow street, Philadelphia, Pa., at 2 p. m., July 20. At this meeting consideration will be given to the coming national flower show in Philadelphia; also to the affiliation of local soiceties and the test gardens.

Four different affiliated societies have had a set of medals for their June shows. The paid membership of the American Rose Society is 20 more than we had at this time last year.

THE CARNATION.

Care of Field Plants.

The routine work of the summer care of the plants in the field must be attended to steadily right along, so that when the time comes to bring the plants inside they will be in first class condition. In our section of the country we are getting a great deal more rain than is usual at this time of the year and very little of what you might call summer weather. The plants are making nice growth and require close attention to the work of topping the growths to keep the plant in good shape. This is a very important part of the work and every opportunity must be taken to attend to it on time. The present weather conditions are ideal for the rapid growth of weeds, and it is a good plan when the ground is dry enough to allow for the work to be done properly, to take every opportunity and get out and clean out all weeds before they become large enough to injure the plants. It is also very important to keep the cultivator going, and when the ground becomes dry enough after each rain, attend to this part of the work without delay. The loosely cultivated soil on the surface of the land helps to serve as a mulch to protect the roots of the plants during the hot dry weather, but there is one thing that the man behind the cultivator must be careful about, and that is, not to throw the soil up around the plants so as to cover up their stems and lower branches.

The items mentioned may appear to be details in the work of caring for the plants that are of small importance, but we have found out that it is the paying of strict attention to the small things during the time the plants are making their growth in the field that leads up to a successful season for the plants later on, and there is a great deal of satisfaction to have a field of carnation plants under your charge on which so much depends in the coming season and feel that you have done everything possible to bring out the best—their best qualities.

After such a long period of wet weather, we may soon expect the opposite conditions, which is very likely to cause the plants to become infested with green fly and red spider. These can be checked by regular sprayings of insecticide about every ten days.

After caring for the young plants in the field, we can turn our attention to the plants in the houses, which are fast finishing up their usefulness and as soon as they become no longer profitable to bestow enough attention on to keep them in good shape, they should be thrown out and not allowed to remain on the benches to serve as hatching places for thrips and red spider. Place the rings and wires outdoors; also, I believe it is a good policy to allow these to have the wind and rain work on them every year while they are idle.

The benches of plants that are still doing business, and which it is the intention to allow to remain up to the last before throwing out, should be cared for as regards watering, syringing, airing and disbudding; also do not allow the flowers to remain on the plants if they cannot be used up right along, but clean them off before they have a chance to wither.

Indoor grown plants that are planted direct to the benches without being planted in the field should now be in their permanent quarters and must receive close attention to their many requirements right along or they are bound to be a failure. Constant attention to topping is very necessary to get a plant large enough to prove profitable; indoor plants stretch out much faster than the field plants, consequently it is so much more important to keep the work of topping the shoots done up close. Indoor grown plants can be planted closer on the benches than those from the field, 10 inches apart each way being ample for them, or if the wire rings will allow they will stand a little closer. These plants need regular watering and syringing, as they require it and the weather conditions will permit, therefore making it necessary to keep the surface of the beds open by frequent scratchings, but do not go deep enough to injure the roots of the plants. Particular attention must also be given to spraying with insecticide to keep the plants clean; also allow all the ventilation possible, both day and night, being on the guard against storms.

Cultivating the Hydrangea.

Paper by R. Scott, Montreal, Can., read at a meeting of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, April 5, 1915.

At this season of the year as we visit the show windows of the many florists of Montreal to admire and criticise the wealth of bloom displayed in its most artistic array and to compare the different growers' stock with our own, we must admit that the hydrangea, as an Easter plant, is growing more popular each year.

This year there was some very fine stock offered in some of the leading stores, both of the Otaksa and the newer French varieties, the delicate shades of color ranging from pure white to deep pink, compelling the admiration of all the passers-by. The hydrangea, I think without exception, one of the most popular, satisfactory, flowering plants we have in cultivation today. They lend themselves to so many situations, either inside or outside, either as individual specimens or in groups, etc., and can be timed to flower from early spring until late summer. From the florist's point of view they are a very profitable plant to grow, as well grown plants command a ready sale. They are of easy culture, growing well in any ordinary potting mixture, and only are asking for lots of water in their growing season. To have good flowering plants by next season, the young stock should be propagated as early as possible; if there are no old stock plants to select cuttings from, take the new flowering shoots from those now in growth. Selecting as far as possible, strong, short jointed shoots, trim the cutting about ½-inch below the joint, then insert in the sand and water it in well, shading from the strong sun until they show signs of rooting. As soon as the stock is well rooted, put into a 2½-inch pot and keep them growing. When the pot is well filled with roots, repot into 4-inch pots. A week later pinch out the points. When they have made new breaks, about three inches, remove to cold frames, plunging the pots to the rim, keeping them well watered and shading from the sun, gradually hardening off until they will stand the full sunlight. Be careful not to let them dry out, as the hydrangeas will scald very quickly if they get dried out.

When the points begin to harden up, reduce the water supply, and when danger of frost is near take care not to let them get too much, or else the flowering points will rot off. Any young stock that is not ripened up when they are taken into their winter quarters, should be placed on a bench in a cool house, standing on about an inch of earth packed close together, giving them enough water to keep them plump. The smallest shoots will set good flower buds this way and will repay for the extra room taken up. Older plants do not require this treatment as they set their buds earlier then the young stock and can be stored away in any cool place, away from the frost. Look them over occasionally and see that they are not getting dried out too much. Some growers plant their stock out during the summer, but I prefer the pot grown plants, as they are always under control and I find they ripen up quicker and make better shaped plants. To have good one year-old flowering plants, whether the old variety or the new varieties are grown, the wood must be well ripened up, and if the grower has the room, the greenhouse ripened plants will give the best results.

Fastigiate Conifers.

In the pinetum are young trees of the White Pine (Pinus Strobus, var. fastigiata) with erect branches which give the trees a peculiar and distinct appearance. They were raised from grafts taken from a tree which was growing a few years ago near Stamford, Conn. The Scotch Pine (Pinus sylvestris), which shows a strong tendency to seminal and geographical variation, has also produced a fastigiate form (var. pyramidalis). The so-called Swedish juniper is a narrow, dwarf pyramidal form of the common juniper (Juniperis communis, var. suecica). This little juniper is not very hardy in this part of the country, but is often planted in the middle states. The handsomest pyramidal coniferous plant, however, in the arboretum is a form of Thuya occidentalis (var. pyramidalis) raised some time before 1885 by Robert Douglas in his nursery at Waukegan, Ill. It is a tall narrow plant suited to replace, although much smaller, of course, the fastigiate cypress which plays such a part in the decoration of the gardens of southern Europe. This arbor vitae is sold in some American nurseries as Thuya occidentalis pyramidalis Douglasii. The common spruce (Picea Abies) has produced many abnormal seminal forms and among them are at least two with erect branches (var. columnaris and var. pyramidalis). A few individuals of these varieties were found many years ago in European forests and the cultivated plants have probably been propagated from these wild plants. Less important are two dwarf pyramidal forms of the European fir (Abies Picea, var. columnaris, and var. pyramidalis). The Lawson cypress from the Pacific coast (Chamaecyparis Lawsoniana) is another tree which shows great variation in its seedling offspring. Among them is a distinctly pyramidal form which appeared in an English nursery many years ago and is known as Cypressus Lawsoniana erecta viridis. Like all the forms of the Lawson cypress it is not hardy in the neighborhood of Boston. The so-called Irish yew, a pyramidal form of the European yew Taxus baccata, var. fastigiata), of which there is a yellow-leaved variety, is a popular garden plant in all countries where it is hardy. Unfortunately this interesting tree is not able to survive the New England climate. This is true of the erect garden form of the Japanese Cephalotaxus (pedunculata, var. fastigiata).

Of these 28 plants with abnormally erect growing branches five in two genera are North American, one only is Asiatic, and 22 are European, the Cornish elm, which is not an abnormal tree, but a geographical variety, being omitted. The predominance of abnormal forms among European trees is due, no doubt, to the fact that European trees have been raised artificially from other countries, and that European cultivators of trees have been keener than others to propagate and detect plants of abnormal habit and foliage. It is less easy to explain the absence of fastigiate trees from such largely cultivated genera as faxinus, catalpa, prunus, magnolia, Salix and tsuga. Of our common hemlock in this last genus there are a number of dwarf forms and forms with abnormal foliage, but among them none has yet appeared with erect growing branches. —Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

ST. CLOUD, MINN.—Fire caused slight damage to the St. Cloud Floral Co.'s range, June 24.

TOPEKA, KAN.—Omar F. Whitney of this city has been elected to succeed Jesse LeRoy Pelham as secretary of the Kansas State Horticultural Society.

BARRINGTON, R. I.—A severe hail storm June 26 damaged 25,000 square feet of glass and caused a loss to fruit, shade trees and gardens estimated at $500,000.

Los Angeles Horticultural Society.

One of the largest attendances in the history of this society was present at the July meeting, held in Kruckeberg's hall, the feature of the evening being a talk by Frank Lewin, who selected as his subject, "Rose Culture." One of the cardinal features of the address was the simple method in which the speaker described each point, thus enabling the beginner to get the full benefit.

Starting away back in the olden times in Greece, Mr. Lewin told of how they prized the "queen of flowers." Leading down to the present time he went into full detail as to simplifying the culture, describing the soil, planting, irrigation, fertilizing, pruning, disbudding and the diseases. Perhaps the most emphatic statement of his address was "where weeds will grow, roses will grow." Spade the soil over several times; dig large holes; plant dormant bushes; be sure roots are nicely spread; fertilize with liquid cow manure; irrigate, do not sprinkle; during July, August and September do not water at all; in pruning, trim bushes low and use five-eye method; for green aphis use garden hose with nozzle or spray with soapsuds; mildew is often caused by overwatering; use one ounce sulphate of potassium to each five gallons of water.

He furnished a list of varieties for the beginner, and the further advanced growers. For the beginner he suggests Ulrich Brunner, Radiance, Lady Hillingdon, Mme. Abel Chatenay, Gen. McArthur and Paul Neyron for the bush varieties, and K. A. Victoria, Caroline Testout, Excelsa, Cecile Brunner and Dorothy Perkins for the climbers.

For the advanced he favored Harry Kirk, Lady Battersea, Frau Karl Druschki, Clara Watson, Katie Moulton, Rhea Reid, Geo. Dickson, Edward Mawley, Betty, His Majesty, Lyon, Sunburst, Capt. Hayward, Alfred Colomb, Mrs. John Long, Prince Otto and Geo. Arends for the bush varieties, and Lady Ashdown, Reve d'Or, Neervelt, Gainesborough, Maman Cochet, white and pink, and Tauschendshoen for the climbers. At the close of his elegant paper he was given a rising vote of thanks.

The chair appointed P. D. Barnhardt to deliver a talk on the trials of a gardener for the topic of the next meeting.

Mr. Dieterich, chairman of the picnic committee, being absent no further action was taken. The chair added Messrs. Hunt and Kruckeberg to the committee with instructions to hold a special meeting of the picnic committee with full power to proceed.

At a special meeting of the picnic committee composed of Jacob Dieterich, chairman; Charles Winsel, James Taylor, A. A. Hunt, James MacGillivray and Hal S. Kruckeberg, held July 9, it was unanimously voted to abandon the picnic this year, owing to the lateness of the season, the Elks' convention which will be held here this month, and the convention of the nurserymen at San Francisco next month. It was suggested that in place of the outing a smoker be held once a month, thereby keeping funds in the treasury for the fall flower show of the society.

TRADE ENJOYS REST.

The dull season is upon us, and it affords to hard-worked florists a well-deserved respite from the strenuous efforts of the past three months. Ever since Memorial day business in this city has been splendidly active, surprisingly so; hence, florists are content to have a time of rest and recreation thrust upon them. There is an abundant supply of all kinds of seasonable stock, more, in fact, than the market can absorb. Roses are of excellent quality and have enjoyed a lively sale. Carnations need not be mentioned at this time. Sweet peas are coming in splendidly at the present time. Candidum and Easter lilies are excellent sock, but are not in great demand.

CLUB OUTING.

Even a drenching rain that started at 10 o'clock and persisted until 2 could not mar the enthusiasm and spirit of florists of Toledo and northwestern Ohio, July 7, the day of the annual outing of the florists' club at Ottawa park. Florists closed their stores at 9 a. m. The auto parade this year was the most successful and largest yet held, consisting of delivery and touring cars gaily decorated with bunting and banners advertising the Toledo Florists' Club outing. At 2 o'clock, when the rain abated, the various games and contests were entertainingly pulled off under the direction of Max Spanner, who proved an able manager. After these events the ball game between the East side and West side florists took place, but the rain put a damper on this contest after but a few innings were played. The East side was in the lead when the game was called.

NOTES.

Monday, July 5, Schramm Bros.' force enjoyed their annual picnic at Striker's farm near Sylvania. It is in line with this firm's progressive policy to give their employes a day's pleasure at their expense. The trip was made in the delivery cars and in George B. Schramm's touring car. At the farm two old-fashioned country meals were thoroughly relished. The main event of the day was a ball game between the wholesale department, captained by Albert Lehmann, and the retail department, led by Frank M. Schramm, in which the former were completely overwhelmed.

Max Spanner is the proud owner of a beautiful new Overland delivery car of the very latest type, which he exhibited for the first time in the auto parade. It was very attractively decorated for the occasion.

John Koelker, of Koelker & Sons, is in New York for a three weeks' stay. Before he left he stated that his business has been very good during the first half of this year.

The June-White Floral Co. has retired from the flower business here after a short but stormy career. This flower store was opened on Madison street about a year ago.

Harry Turvey, West Toledo florist, is soon to leave on a three weeks' motor trip through Ohio and Indiana.

Minneapolis, Minn.

Summer weather has at last arrived, and flower buyers are now taking to the lakes at a rapid rate. The season has been so cold and backward that people have preferred to remain in town, but the quiet season is evidently now on. Flowers are coming into the market in good supply, and there are plenty for all demands, with the exception of outdoor sweet peas, which are due later in the week.

NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Atteson, of Pelican Rapids, announce the engagement of their daughter, Etta, to George P. Mitchell, the Lake street florist. The ceremony will take place in October.

The Minneapolis Florists' Base Ball Club defeated the fast Robindale aggregation, July 11, the score being 23 to 4.

Cal Rice, of Rice Bros.; W. D. Desmond, of L. S. Donaldson Co.; Chris Eisele and several others of the craft will arrive home from the Northwest, in time to "whoop her up" for the picnic. They were the guests of Lawrence Mathes, of the Shotwell Floral Co. at Fargo, N. D., while stopping there.

D. W. C. Ruff, of this city, was awarded first prize at the recent flower show of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society for his exhibit of 175 varieties of peonies.

The florists of the Twin Cities are all enthusiastic over the picnic to be held at Spring Grove, July 20. The ball game will doubtless be a hard-fought battle.

Tom Rogers returned from a week's outing at South Haven, Minn., July 12, and was distributing some fine black bass among the "boys" at Oscar E. Amundson's.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is through planting its chrysanthemums, and is wholesaling its wholesale stock, which is of very fine quality.

Mrs. L. L. Eddy, of Excelsior, has three acres planted to peonies and will add two more this fall.

C. G. Anderson is now settled with his family and says he likes the city and the lakes.

The Farmer Seed & Nursery Co. has closed its branch store in this city for the season.

Lakewood Cemetery Greenhouses are all being cleaned and filled with fall stock.

The Gopher Floral Co., 40 South Seventh street, has closed its doors.

Rice Bros. are receiving some very choice fancy ferns and greens.

Visitors: C. S. Harrison, York, Neb.; E. C. Ecker, of the Minnesota State Nursery, Albert Lea, Minn.

Los Angeles.

F. W. Stark and brother, Lawrence, of the Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo., are spending several days in California visiting both expositions and the show places of the state. While in this section the Stark Brothers are being entertained by J. D. Meriwether, the manager of the Roeding & Wood Nursery Company, of Los Angeles, who was formerly with the Stark Company for 17 years. No doubt the Starks will be so impressed with California that they will visit us more often in the future.

The Dean Iris Gardens of Moneta announce the new Iris Mrs. Allan Gray, which is of a delicate lilac color. Blooming as it does during June and July, it greatly adds to the blooming period of the iris. Iris Crimson King is now in full bloom, being the second crop of the season.

Chas. A. Chambers and wife, of Fresno, who have been spending some time in San Diego, made a short visit to Los Angeles. As Mr. Chambers is the secretary of the Fresno Board of Park Commissioners he made this trip largely to study the parks of Los Angeles and vicinity.

John S. Armstrong, proprietor of The Armstrong Nurseries, of Ontario, Calif., is stopping for a while at his Los Angeles home.

HAL S. KRUCKEBERG.

Washington.

Outside of a light call for water lilies and gladioli, there is no demand for anything in the market. Roses of all kinds went "a-begging" during the past week, Francis Scott Key, Hadley and Killarney in both colors, in extra long stemmed grades, selling as low as $5 for a box of 500. Shorts sold at any price offered for them.

NOTES.

The local delegation that will leave for the S. A. F. convention at San Francisco will be very small from present indications. At present it consists of Wm. Gude, A. Gude, Theo. Diedrich and Mr. and Mrs. Shellhorn. It is hoped that the party will be larger before the time of departure.

O. Bauer and family have taken a cottage at North Chesapeake Beach for the summer. Otto will enjoy a much-needed rest during the next few weeks in fishing.

W. Wenkler, of Chevy Chase, is sending some of the best asters ever seen in this city to George C. Shaffer.

STOCK POOR AND DEMAND LIGHT.

Business during the past week was practically at a standstill. The demand for every line of stock was light, as the retailers are doing very little aside from general work. The quality of indoor stock is getting poorer every day as the season draws to a close. Roses are scarce; however, the demand is very light. Russell, Taft, Ophelia and Hadley are the best sellers. Carnations are getting poor in quality. There are large quantities being shipped, and they sell at practically any offer whatsoever. The heavy rains during the week spoiled a great many sweet peas, and those that are coming in are not up to standard.

NOTES.

At a recent meeting of the committee on prizes and exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society it was arranged to have the large spring exhibition during the month of May, 1916. A smaller exhibition of bulbous stock will be held during March. Many new features have been planned for the May exhibition, and it is hoped that it will surpass any show of its nature ever held at Horticultural hall.

Robert Montgomery and wife, Natick, Mass., left for their summer cottage on Bustins Island, Me., July 7, by way of automobile. Mr. Montgomery has purchased a new Overland car, and upon its delivery will return to Natick and drive over the road to Maine.

Perry Green, of Quincy, has some of the best sweet peas that are being shipped to Boston. Countess of Spencer, White Spencer and Frank Dolby are his mainstays. He also is cutting a large crop of sweet sultans.

Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, has already commenced cutting from his large stock of field-grown gladioli. He is planning to force 100,000 bulbs in one of his largest houses for next Memorial day.

Mrs. Robert McGoram is spending the month of July at Peaks Island, Me.

F. L. W.

Canadian Horticultural Society.

The eighteenth annual convention of the above society will be held at London, Ont., August 3-5, and from the programme announced, gives promise of surpassing all former meetings of the organization in interesting features. Among the important papers that will be read during the meeting are the following: "Fertilizers for the Greenhouse," by Prof. R. Harcourt, Guelph; "Irrigation," by Prof. T. G. Bunting, Quebec; "Insect Pests that Affect Greenhouse Stock," by W. A. Ross, Ottawa. The question box will be an important feature and there promises to be an interesting discussion led by A. Q. C. O'Brien of Toronto, an expert accountant, who will speak on cost systems for florists' stock and prices at which stock should be sold. H. J. Moore, of Queen Victoria park, Niagara Falls, will present the report of the committee of plant registration and will have important announcements to make in reference thereto. Papers will also be read by W. J. Potter, superintendent of parks, Toronto, and W. J. Jones, of the Dale estate, Brampton. Among the social features of the meeting will be a visit to the greenhouses of J. Gammage & Sons, Ltd., London.

Ontario Horticultural Exhibition.

If a suitable building can be obtained, the directors of the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition anticipate holding the exhibition this year as usual. Last year the exhibition had to be postponed, due to the fact that the buildings on the exhibition grounds were turned over to the militia, and while it cannot be determined as yet whether any of the buildings will be available this year, the secretary has been requested to ascertain, and if his report is unfavorable, the exhibition manager will endeavor to secure other accommodations. It is suggested that prize-winners this year contribute their prize money to the Red Cross Society.

Teaneck, N. J.

Joseph Rofferzeder, who has been well known as a grower in the North Bergen section, now has the greenhouses formerly conducted by L. J. Dirig. He is a clever grower, has a variety of stock, and is doing well.

Hermann Encke has a glass area of about 25,000 square feet, and grows sweet peas and chrysanthemums. At present he is cutting fine long-stemmed peas in the field, and has a very healthy-looking stock of chrysanthemums coming on.

William Gisking now has the range formerly conducted by his father, who died last winter, aged 72 years.

Teaneck can be reached from New York by the ferry from 130th street and the Hudson river electric line.

A. F. F.

Hudson Heights, N. J.

William Bluthgen, Jr., has a neat range and grows a variety of stock, and does considerable retail business.

McMillan & Sons have now a great crop of chrysanthemums coming on. For winter they will have sweet peas and a variety of other stock.

John Fruhauf has recently put up two houses and grows plants. He has been a hard worker, as his property was covered with native trees when he started.

OBITUARY.

Alfred J. Tharp.

Alfred J. Tharp, for over 20 years a grower with a range at Bedford Station, N. Y., died at his home in Bedford, July 10, in his sixtieth year. In the earlier years of his career as a grower his range was noted for fine carnations. When the well known wholesale firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, of New York, started in business, he was their first shipper. In late years he had also been engaged in the real estate business with an office at 7 East 42d street, New York. He was a native of Waterloo, N. Y.

Mr. Tharp was a member of the Masonic order and a man of fine character. He is survived by a widow, three daughters and two sons. One son, Vernon, has been associated with him in the florist business.

Greenhouse Glass.

The glass market is holding very firm, with no prospects of a change until fall. The demand for greenhouse glass is fair, with no great surplus on hand.

American Dahlia Society.

The exhibition of the American Dahlia Society will be held in the American Museum of Natural History, New York, September 24-26, arrangements with the museum authorities having been made, regarding the use of the building.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

Mrs. John Vallance, 81 Glen Avenue, Oakland, Calif., has been appointed chairman of the introduction committee by Mrs. W. F. Gude, president, for convention week at San Francisco, Calif., August 17-20.

MRS. CHAS. H. MAYNARD, Sec'y.

Chicago Fall Show.

The fall flower show executive committee met at the city offices of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., July 12, there being present A. Henderson, August Poehlmann, Arnold Ringier, George Asmus, E. A. Kanst, Edward Goldenstein, C. W. Johnson, W. J. Keimel, N. P. Miller, H. H. Wilkerson and M. Barker. The report of J. C. Vaughan on poster was presented and full power was given this committee to proceed as may seem best in the matter of securing suitable design. Plans covering the trade space to be sold in the Coliseum and annex were discussed at length and arrangements made to issue diagram and regulations. Appropriations aggregating approximately $1,000 were made in the gardeners' classes and the preliminary premium list was ordered printed. Chicago Grand Floral Festival was settled upon as the official name of the exhibition.

American Ass'n of Park Superintendents.

The preliminary announcement of the seventeenth annual convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents presents what promises to be a very interesting meeting when the organization convenes at San Francisco, Calif., Aug. 18-20, and as several other horticultural organizations hold their conventions in that city during the same week there will undoubtedly be a very large gathering. Roland W. Cotterill, secretary of the American Association of Park Superintendents, issues a cordial invitation to all persons connected with this line of work to attend the convention, whether members of the organization or not.

A special train, consisting of dining car, sleepers, observation car and baggage car, arranged by the Great Northern Ry. Co., will leave Chicago (C., M. & St. P.), 6:30 p. m., Sunday, August 8, and will make stops at Minneapolis, Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, where elaborate entertainment features have been planned by the local park commissioners. At Glacier National Park, a 12-hour stop will be made, allowing for an auto tour of the park and a steamer trip on St. Mary's Lake. Persons intending to join the party on this special train at Chicago or Minneapolis should notify Herman W. Merkel, chairman transportation committee, Zoological Park, New York.

While the programme is not at this time complete, there will be lectures, papers and discussions which will be interesting and valuable. The following have agreed to participate: Samuel Hill, president of the Pacific Highway Association; E. B. DeGroot, director of physical education, San Francisco; J. H. Prost, city forester, Chicago; L. P. Jenson and Ernest Strehle, St. Louis, Mo.

The entertainment features will include a reception and dance at the St. Francis hotel Tuesday, August 17; steamer trip around San Francisco bay, luncheon at Oakland, followed by an auto trip to Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley, a stag smoker for the gentlemen and a theater party for the ladies on Thursday. Friday and Saturday there will be inspection tours of the parks, playgrounds and boulevards of San Francisco and the Panama-Pacific exposition exhibits.

The party will leave for the San Diego exposition and points east Sunday morning, August 22.

Bay Tree Steamer Released.

London, July 12.—The release of the American steamers Seaconnet and Neches after their cargoes had been unloaded for the prize court indicated that the authorities have conceded a point in the dispute which has been going on since the beginning of the war between the government and the owners of detained ships.

Both steamers were given clearance without being compelled to pay the usual port fees and dockage charges.

The Seaconnet, New York to Gothenburg, was detained last month at Kirkwall and later taken to Shields, where part of her cargo was thrown into the prize court. The Neches was seized in the Downs June 24 and ordered to proceed to London. The contention of the British Government was that her cargo came from a country hostile to Great Britain.

[The S. S. Neches carried a considerable quantity of Belgian bay trees and palms. It is understood that Belgian shipments are being made regularly via Holland.—Ed.]

American Gladiolus Society.

The schedule of the sixth annual exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society, to be held at the Casino, Newport, R. I., August 18-19, under the auspices of the Newport Garden Association and the Newport Horticultural Society, is ready for distribution, and copies can be had by addressing Henry Youell, secretary, 538 Cedar street, Syracuse, N. Y. The shows at Newport and Atlantic City will be the largest ever held in the history of the society. The Newport Horticultural Society offers $100 in special prizes for Rhode Island growers only. The general premium list includes awards to the amount of $650, besides two gold medals, seven silver medals, four bronze medals, four silver cups and other articles of value. Applications for space for trade exhibits at both shows are coming in rapidly.

Convention Travelers' Chicago Stop-over.

The Chicago Florists' Club has made arrangements to entertain all florists visiting Chicago on August 12 en route to the convention at San Francisco. The entertainment will consist of an auto ride through the parks and other points of interest about the city. The ride will end with a dinner at the Bismarck Gardens at 6 o'clock p. m. After the dinner the party will return to the city by 8 o'clock in ample time to prepare to take the train for 'Frisco at 10 o'clock p. m. The committee in charge of the entertainment urges all florists visiting the city that day to meet them at the Auditorium Hotel at 1:30 p. m. sharp prepared to start on the trip.

TRADE VERY QUIET.

Trade has been very quiet the past week, but several of the large wholesale houses report that so far during July there has not been much difference in the sales over the same month of last year. Stock of all kinds is very plentiful and is being sold in large lots at bargain prices. American Beauty roses are arriving in unusually large numbers this week, but are not selling any too well, even at the low prices offered. The bulk of the American Beauties now arriving are long-stemmed flowers, for which there is little or no demand, but it appears as if the shorter grades are moving better and bringing as high prices as the longer stemmed stock. The supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses is also large and stock in this variety can be had at reasonable prices. Hoosier Beauty roses continue to clean up well and this variety is making quite a hit with the local buyers. Some good Hadley are arriving and the same holds good for My Maryland, Ophelia and Prince de Bulgaria. Double White Killarney are in good supply, but clean up well each day, especially on shipping orders. All the other roses are also plentiful, and taken all in all roses in general are selling in large lots at low prices. A few carnations are arriving yet and the receipts of gladioli never were so large nor probably sold at such low prices as they are bringing now. Sweet peas are still being offered in large quantities and at times fairly good stock is obtainable. Lilies are in good supply and some fine lily of the valley is obtainable. Orchids are seen in large numbers and the receipts of asters are steadily increasing. Peonies are still a factor in the market, but the end of the cold storage supply is near and no one will regret when the season is over, for the market is completely gutted with out-door stock, which is affecting the sale of greenhouse grown flowers to a large extent. Large shipments of Virginia boxwood are arriving and the employes at the wholesale houses are busy bunching up this stock in their spare moments.

NOTES.

All florists are invited to participate in the fourth annual window display exposition of local products, August 2-7, inclusive, to be held under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Mayor Thompson has issued a proclamation officially declaring the week of August 2 to be known as "Chicago Market Week" and inviting the people to participate and cooperate in a general celebration. In addition to the proposed window displays of local goods there will be held simultaneously the fashion show for the benefit of the public as well as out-of-town visitors, together with other market attractions of unusual interest. Many of the largest commercial houses have already signified their willingness to actively participate in this undertaking and this is a splendid opportunity for the trade to do likewise. There will be no expense or obligation on the part of those agreeing to participate other than the arranging for exhibits, the giving of window space and such special advertising displays as each firm may desire to use. Further particulars regarding "Chicago Market Week" may be obtained for the asking from the Association of Commerce, 10 South La Salle street.

Frank Oechslin and wife left for California July 10, to take in the sights at the Panama-Pacific exposition. Mr. Oechslin's property on Quincy street is becoming quite valuable and is gradually being surrounded by new flat buildings and will be pretty well hemmed in on the Jackson boulevard side in the near future, for this street is being extended to the park and is already well lined with buildings. When Mr. Oechslin started in 15 years ago he had a clear view from Madison to Lake street, but that territory is all built up and it would not be at all surprising to hear one of these days that he had sold a part of his property and moved a part of his plant further out in the country.

H. N. Bruns, 3032 West Madison street, has a good stock of nice boxwoods still on hand but they are moving fast, for he is about the only dealer who has any kind of a supply on hand. Mr. Bruns' son, Herman, who is taking the floricultural course at Urbana, is helping out at the store during vacation and while some of the employes are enjoying a well-earned rest.

John Astor Jacobs of the E. C. Amling Co. is on his vacation this week and Bert Cole of the same firm leaves July 17 with his wife for a 2,200-mile lake trip on the steamer North American. Bert says that every time he takes a vacation American Beauty roses are in full crop the week before.

Fred Price of the J. A. Budlong store force is on the sick list this week, so Manager Philip Schupp is giving Wm. Homberg a lift in the shipping department. The Budlong firm is cutting a good supply of summer roses, particularly fancy Double White Killarney.

The allied building construction material interests lifted the ban on the delivery of material Saturday, July 10, which was the first important effect of the settling of the carpenter's strike. It means an immediate resumption of work. The building industry in Cook county has been paralyzed, and $30,000,000 worth of construction work has been tied up since early in April on account of the strike of carpenters and other trades. This settlement insures this city's industrial peace in the building industry for the next three years, and is a good settlement. The uniform agreement provides that there shall be no lockouts during the life of the contract. It was admitted that the carpenters got one of the best agreements they have ever had. They will get 70 cents an hour for three years, a raise of 5 cents an hour over the old scale.

Weiland & Risch had a few blooms of their new rose Champ Weiland at their store this week, where they attracted much favorable attention and were greatly admired by the customers. It is a sport of the original Killarney and is said to be considerably freer than any of the Killarneys. The buds are large and the color is a bright, clear, glistening cerise pink, with the inner and reverse sides of the petals identically the same. Placed alongside of the rose Mrs. Chas. Russell it is a full shade darker and absolutely fadeless, with the stem well clothed with a rich dark red foliage. It is deeply scented, and is one of the prettiest roses that one ever had the pleasure to inspect. John Risch says that the name of the variety will probably be changed to the Wonder Rose and that the firm is thinking seriously of placing it on display for the first time at the fall flower show in the Coliseum.

Louis R. Finnerman is back in the employ of Percy Jones, and will be a member of this firm's relay team which has challenged any wholesale house in this city to compete with them at the big picnic to be held at St. Paul Park, Morton Grove, Sunday, July 25. The team will consist of Morris Gronberg, Louis R. Finnerman, Fritz Simons and Luke Schrer, all members of the Percy Jones house, and who will run in the order named.

The annual outing of the Chicago Florists' Club, to be held at St. Paul Park, Morton Grove, Sunday, July 25, promises to be well attended. The baseball game between the Growers and Wholesalers will be hotly contested, and if all the players will do all they claim that they are going to do it will be a contest worth while seeing. Everybody is invited to attend and from present indications everybody is going to be there.

Wietor Bros. are busy housing their carnations, and so far 90,000 out of 160,000 plants have been benched. This firm grows all the best new and standard varieties, and N. J. Wietor today believes that Bonfire is one of the best paying reds on the entire place. The store force will start on their vacations soon, and it appears as if everyone is going fishing.

Mrs. J. F. Kidwell, who underwent an operation for appendicitis two weeks ago at the Presbyterian Hospital, is slowly recovering, but her condition is still considered to be quite serious.

George Gobel, one of the obliging young salesmen at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store, leaves July 17 to spend a two weeks' vacation at Paw Paw Lake, Mich.

BEAUTIES-ROSES-CARNATIONS

Miss Elsie Winterson, daughter of E. F. Winterson, the well-known wholesale florist, stole a march on her parents and many friends, Wednesday, July 7, when she was quietly married to B. J. Boehm at St. Elizabeth's Episcopal church at Glencoe. The happy young couple dropped in to see Fritz Bahr, a great friend of the family, after the ceremony, and just as he was entertaining his friend Anton, then at dinner. Mr. Bahr might have had nothing to do with the elopement, but the splendid feast he had ready for the couple and the extra plates that were set looked kind of suspicious, but then no one would blame him for assisting such a charming young lady as Mrs. Boehm, and it is needless to add that Mr. and Mrs. Winterson have forgiven them all and everyone connected with the romance is happy. Congratulations of the trade are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Boehm.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having a brisk call for chrysanthemum cuttings and plants and each mail brings in new orders. Field-grown carnation plants are also moving nicely, and if orders keep coming in the way they have been the past few days a grand cleaning up in both lines will be experienced. T. E. Waters of the supply department has received an unusually large number of requests for the firm's new supply catalogue, which is bigger and better than ever and now ready for mailing. Miss Hazel Gremm of the supply department left this week for California (avenue) to enjoy a well-earned rest.

A. L. Vaughan says that so far there has been no great difference in the sales in July at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store compared with the same month last year. He thinks that there are too many gladioli grown for market purposes, and is wondering what prices this stock will bring the latter part of the month and in August, when the receipts will be considerably larger, compared to the extremely low prices now realized.

Fred Ottenbacher of the Zech & Mann store force is on his vacation this week and Gale Fanning is back from his outing and again on the job at the store. Allie Zech says that business has been none too brisk this week, but on the whole he has no cause to complain, for stock is cleaning up quite well, notwithstanding the quiet spell that all the dealers are experiencing now.

N. J. Wietor, Adam Zender, John Sinner and D. E. Freres, and fifteen others, represented their parish and were in the funeral procession when the remains of Most Reverend James Edward Quigley, Archbishop of this city, were removed from the La Salle street depot to the Holy Name Cathedral on North State street.

Peter Reinberg is cutting from a nice crop of Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia roses and the receipts of American Beauties are very heavy at the store now. Emil Reichling, superintendent of the Reinberg greenhouses, will be one of the local florists to attend the S. A. F. convention at San Francisco, Calif., in August.

Fred. Schramm was elected vice-president of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association at the annual meeting last week, and not Chas. McCauley, as was reported in the trade papers. Both gentlemen are such good-natured fellows that one is apt to get them mixed once in a while, inasmuch as Mr. McCauley is treasurer.

are steadily realizing that there is only one white rose on the market in summer that gives satisfaction and that particular variety is which has several strong features, viz: Full flower, heavy foliage, better keeper and shipper and last but not least it is whiter than the common strain of White Killarney.

FUNERAL WORK ONLY OUTLET.

The market is crowded and unusual summer dullness prevails, the only outlet for flowers being funerals and an occasional bouquet to a hospital or some anniversary. Carnations are daily becoming poorer as well as their keeping qualities. Long stemmed American Beauty roses are plentiful, but the demand is limited. Asters are coming in and moving slowly, in fact, everything seems to be at a standstill. Gladioli, from the outside, are also very plentiful and are selling at low figures and at that are not cleaned out.

NOTES.

One of the largest and best attended meetings of the year of the local florists' club was held July 8, over 50 members being present. The secretary had sent out postal cards asking why only 20 regularly attended the meetings and the other 80 per cent absented themselves. A discussion followed and it is believed there will be a better attendance in the future. An invitation was received from Joe Hauser for the August meeting to take place at Webster Grove. Joe and his wife promise a good time. The feature of the meeting was the nomination of officers for the ensuing year, as follows: Jules Bourdet, president; Dave Geddis, W. A. Rowe and W. S. Wells, vice-president; J. J. Beneke and Will Ossick, secretary; W. C. Smith and J. J. Windler, treasurer; W. W. Ohweiler, George Pring and W. E. Ogle, trustees. The meeting in general was very enthusiastic and cigars were passed around.

E. L. Rogers reported trade quiet, but the summer season gives him a chance to forge ahead and replenish stock for fall trade. For a young beginner, Rogers has built up a large trade in florist wire works.

Joe Hauser and wife will be busy making preparations for the local florists' club meeting early in August. Joe is very proud of his dahlias.

W. J. Pilcher is now cutting his summer stock in roses. He is cutting some new stock in American Beauty roses.

The Mullanphy Florists had a beautifully decorated window for the Fourth of July, put up by Otto Sander.

The recent severe wind storm at St. Charles did not do any damage to Denker or any of the craft.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. is receiving a daily cut of dahlias, which are now in crop.

The growers at Kirkwood are busy making repairs, painting and preparing for the fall trade.

H. G. Berning and wife are expected home this week. W. F.

USUAL MIDSUMMER BUSINESS.

The midsummer dullness presents little that is new or interesting. Growing conditions continue unusually good, resulting in ample quantity of outdoor stock. Gladioli are especially fine and in large supply. Business is of about the usual midsummer volume, mainly funeral work, with hospital and sick-room boxes a fair second, and social demands a weak third. The month of June had a good crop of weddings, mostly moderate in their demands upon the florists, but totaling a nice volume in this very agreeable part of the trade. Chrysanthemums are looking quite well, and about the usual quantity are in the houses. Carnations held unusually well this season, but are now tottering to their finish. Outdoor carnations promise to be very good by planting time. About the usual preparations are being made for next season's business.

NOTES.

Vacation, turn-about, is relieving the stores and greenhouses of the pressure of surplus help during the dull season. Even the boss hopes to try it for a week or two in most places.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Mueller of East Ninth street will leave July 13 for a six weeks' tour of California. They will attend the S. A. F. convention in San Francisco, on August 17-19; also the meeting of the Rotarians which is held there this month.

Spokane, Wash.

A flower show that will be the largest exhibition of the sort ever held in this city, and that will vie with Portland's rose carnival, is being planned by the Spokane Horticultural Society. The exact date has not been decided upon, depending upon other arrangements, but will probably be either August 26-28 or September 9-11. The aster, Spokane's city flower, will be featured. No flowers not grown in Spokane will be open to entry, and outside of a special class indoor flowers will not be permitted in competition with the outdoor blooms, the purpose of the show being to encourage the growing of flowers by amateurs.

A mammoth floral parade, with hundreds of automobiles decorated with natural flowers is to be a feature, and special prizes will be offered in this event. In the general exhibition a number of handsome prizes will be offered.

At a meeting of the society, June 29, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: A. W. Witherspoon, president; P. W. Kimball, vice-president; A. A. Kelly, treasurer; Alex Carr, secretary.

MUCH GOOD STOCK BUT DEMAND LIGHT.

For the season there is an exceptionally fine assortment of flowers, particularly roses, with Mock, Sunburst, Maryland and American Beauties, the eastern stock especially, all fine and somewhat better than ever before offered at this time. Because of the demand, which is very light indeed, prices run low. Other standard flowers, such as outside snapdragons, sweet peas, which latter are very plentiful, and gladioli are largely in excess of the demand. Cattleyas are also far too plentiful. Lily of the valley sells up fairly well. Easter lilies also lay behind, there being about 300 for every 100 required. Carnations are still with us, but look as if they would like to be off on their vacation. Asters are not quite good or plentiful enough to be a factor, but will soon rule the market. Some dealers are offering dahlias. It seems to me that a fine should be imposed at once on any one offering the dahlia before August 23, or perhaps September 1 would be better. Five long weeks of this fall flower, beautiful and useful as it is, is about all the trade can stand, as by October 10 so many other good things are clamoring for admission that our gaudy friend is crowded out and retires from the race.

NOTES.

The July meeting of the florists' club was the least interesting of the year. Generally the plans for the S. A. F. convention contained interest enough to draw a crowd, but distance this time fails to lend enchantment, and even the August meeting is to be dispensed with. This will be the first regular session to be missed since the organization of the club.

It's summer time with the Berger Brothers, but Billy Stevens is always on the job. There is not a florist in town that does not get a call from "Stevie" at least once a day.

The Leo Niessen Co. are featuring gladioli and Easter lilies. Cattleyas and lily of the valley are also to be had in quantity.

They say a Vim car is to be added to the Reid fleet this fall. Business dull, but very good for the season, is the report here.

PLENTY OF SEASONABLE STOCK.

First cuttings of gladioli, with which florists' shops are now gay, are pronounced to be the finest ever. The wet season has been highly favorable to their propagation. They are having a good sale at $1 per dozen. Dahlias are also excellent stock, and at least a month ahead of usual maturing. These two flowers, together with snapdragons and Shasta daisies, are the prevailing favorites. There is no scarcity of anything. At this time last year roses were almost out of the market, as the result of drought. A few cuttings from young stalks in American Beauties have appeared, but are more of a novelty than a factor in the trade. Their early display means an excellent yield for fall and winter. A new departure with local growers is that of producing Ophelia roses in considerable quantities, this activity being confined to a few wholesale growers. Carnations are inferior stock and in light demand, selling as low as one cent apiece.

NOTES.

The Hardesty - Schory Company, South Parsons avenue, has been succeeded by the Hardesty Floral Company, Mr. Schory retiring from the trade. Frank W. Hardesty will remain as manager. The company has a pretty shop contiguous to the best residence district, and is building up a nice business. Mr. Hardesty is quite a successful landscape gardener.

The Livingston Seed Company is on reduced force to give its people vacations. Harry Baltz, traveling salesman, is on a fishing trip in southeastern Ohio. Edgar Hedges, florist, is in Cleveland, and Miss Margaret Dillenbaugh, florist, is taking her outing at Buckeye Lake.

E. R. Munk, of the Munk Floral Company, has taken personal charge of the branch in the Brunson office building, which was started last fall in connection with the sale of cigars.

SUMMER QUIETNESS NOTICEABLE.

The period of summer quiet is now firmly entrenched, with stock plentiful and of very good quality. Roses, such as Taft, Maryland, Milady and the Killarneys are good, and carnations are plentiful and of good quality. Lily of the valley, orchids and American Beauty roses are in good supply with a good demand for the latter. Outdoor sweet peas are also coming in good. Funeral work has been very good during the past week.

NOTES.

Summer decoration of the flower shops are now in order. W. J. Palmer & Son's Genesee street branch had a very attractive window, with windmill, log cabin and water fall. It was laid out very attractively and was a clever piece of decorative work.

The annual outing of the florists' club will be held Thursday, July 15, at the famous Bedell House. The "old reliable" committee on picnics, composed of Messrs. Brucker, Streit and Grever, will see that everybody has a good time.

Vacations are now very much in order. Two or three from each of the down town stores are away each week getting much needed rest and recreation.

The "Czar of the Market", J. B. Wiese, expects to make a trip in his new Stewart "Six", going as far east as Philadelphia.

J. B. Stafford had the Derby day horse show decoration for the Niagara Racing Association. The designing was excellent.

S. A. Anderson was away on a few days' fishing trip last week, sojourning at Long Point, Ont. His luck was good.

Early autumn will see the Wm. Scott Co., Inc., with a new Lippard-Stewart delivery car added to their service.

MARKET CONTINUES OVERCROWDED.

Toward the latter part of the past week there was a somewhat diminished supply of roses and carnations, but more than enough to supply the demand. On July 10, American Beauty roses, special, wholesaled at the rate of $15 per 100; special pink carnations at $1.50 per 100. Orchids, sweet peas and many of the shorter tea roses went very cheap. Twenty cents per flower was the best for cattleya gigas and inferior stock sold as low as eight cents per flower. It would appear that the orchid flowering sweet peas will soon put the short and inferior varieties out of business. When the best of all kinds of stock is very cheap, poor stock has but little chance. In gladioli the market is glutted with the variety Pink Beauty, and it looks as though nearly all the growers were sending them in. A fair supply of America is now arriving. In lilies, lily of the valley, and various minor stocks there is an abundant supply.

July 14.—There is little change in the condition of the cut flower market. The weather continues very cool, for this season. An ample supply of good rose stock is arriving; orchids, lilies and lily of the valley continue cheap and hard to move. The Gladioli America is more plentiful and selling at 25 cents per dozen or $2 per 100. A strike of 75,000 garment workers seems impending which if it continues will be unfavorable to business.

GREEK-AMERICAN FLORISTS' ASS'N OUTING.

The ninth annual outing of the above-named association was held at Witzel's Grove, College Point, July 7. The weather throughout the day was ideal for such an event. The steamer Atlas took 400 persons on the delightful trip up the sound, and later arrivals by autos and the trolley lines swelled the number to about 500. On arriving at the grove a substantial breakfast was served, after which there were baseball and other games and races. A fine dinner was the closing event before the steamer started on the home trip. The officers of the association are: D. J. Pappas, president; Theodore Malandre, vice-president; Peter Theopine, treasurer; C. Thomas, secretary. Trustees: A. Stathakos, George Hanges, D. Pappadem, D. Storiades, Theodore Karampas, Geo. Mitres, Christ. Pappas, John Tryforos, Theodore Cardasis, John Strates. George D. Nicholas, a former president, was very active in assisting to make the affair a success, as was also President Pappas and the other officers. As the director of games, Peter Matzoras was very clever. The awards follow:

Boys' race, under 10 years, 100 yds.—T. Theodoratos, first, grand silver cup; Geo. Carleftes, second, small silver cup.

Girls' race, under 10 years, 100 yds.—Mary Pullman, first, Rogers silver set; Jennie Carlette, second, Rogers smaller set.

Young ladies' race, all ages, 200 yds.—Miss Dziva, first, powder jar; Miss Tryforos, second, powder jar.

Married ladies' race, 150 yds.—Mrs. Warth, first, butter dish; Mrs. Lafayette, second, soup ladle.

Young men's race, 1 mile, novices—Parusson, first, loving cup; Maniates, second, prize cup.

Fat men's race, 150 yds.—Lookos, first, shaving set; Herney, second, bread tray.

Jumping—Tsizkos, first, military set; Zervakos, second, silver salad fork.

Baseball — Greeks vs. Americans. Greeks winners of Athenian loving cup.

Prize bowling—Giakas, winner of emblematical trophy.

Race for members, 200 yds.—C. Pappas, first, tea set and tray.

Modified Greek Marathon, 2 miles—Molenas, first, tea set, value $25; Mavukes, second, solid silver tea pot; A. Rigo, third, gilt clock.

A number of American growers and wholesalers attended the outing. Thanks are due the officers and members of the association for their uniform courtesy and consideration.

NOTES.

C. Albert Small and Mrs. Small spent the past week in Washington, D. C., where they were attending the wedding of their nephew, John H. Small, Jr., to Miss Helen May Leary, July 6. The groom is the son of John H. Small, Sr., and Mrs. Small of Washington. John H. Small, Sr., and C. Albert Small comprise the well-known firm of J. H. Small & Sons. The happy young couple departed for San Francisco to spend their honeymoon.

The annual meeting of the New York Cut Flower Co. was held July 12. The following officers were re-elected: Eugene Dailledouze, Madison, N. J., president; Henry Hentz, Jr., Madison, N. J., vice-president; G. W. Hillman, secretary - treasurer; Wm. Hackland, asst. treasurer. Directors: F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; F. L. Moore, Chatham, N. J.; J. A. Millang, Bayside, N. Y.; E. R. Asmus, North Bergen, N. J.

As business gets slow, the joys of the fisherman increases. On July 6 a party of florists went to Freeport, L. I., and caught 150 sea bass. In the party were Phil. Kessler, Peter Jacobson, Leo Klein, George Golsner, Max Ulrich, Chas. Ulrich, Louis Cohn, Eddie Treple, Phil. Kessler, Jr., and Louis Cohn, Jr.

It is reported that Mrs. Suhrer, mother of the members of the firm of Suhrer & Guy, retail florists, of 31 East 125th street, was seriously injured in an accident caused by a runaway horse, July 11, and that her young granddaughter was killed.

C. Y. Scott and John Miesem count a Tuesday lost when they cannot go a-fishing. On one of their recent trips they caught 47 weakfish that averaged from 2½ to 5 pounds each.

Wm. H. Kuebler, the Brooklyn wholesaler, went to Albany with a party of friends, by boat July 8. He reports very high water up state, the low lands being flooded.

Frank Traendly, Harry Bunyard, M. C. Ebel and others attended the sweet pea show at Newport, R. I., during the past week.

LIGHT BUYING THE RULE.

The hot weather has put a decided crimp on business conditions of every line here, and the buyers are making their purchases on the smallest basis they possibly can, buying just enough flowers to keep their stock in order. There seems to be a fair amount of funeral work, however, and this is about all we have as good prospects during this season. Carnations are still holding out very well and are of good quality, ranging in price from $5 to $15 per 1,000. Roses are also in good supply, but can hardly be expected to keep from one day to the next, owing to the heat, which blows them wide open when exposed. Lilies have been good and plentiful, likewise sweet peas. Gladioli are fine, and some fancy Klondike, America and Panama are offered at reasonable prices. Outside flowers, such as larkspur, delphinium, candytuft, coreopsis and California poppies sell well. The supply of green goods is heavy.

NOTES.

Mrs. E. A. Williams' business is somewhat handicapped at present, owing to the raising of Penn avenue to the flood level, which is about three feet higher than the sidewalk as it is at present. So, when our next flood visits the store, the Venetian idea of

MARKET VERY QUIET.

The less that is said about the present local market the better. Business in the city is very slow, while shipping business, very good at times, averages only fair. A heavy cut of Ophelia, Shawyer, Hoosier Beauty, Taft, Double White Killarney and My Maryland roses is coming in and all are of a very good quality. Lilies are a glut and most of them do not sell at any price. Gladioli are very plentiful and are having a poor market. Many find their way to the ash-barrel. Other offerings include auratums, rubrums, water lilies, asters, which are rapidly becoming very plentiful; carnations and lily of the valley. Green goods are plentiful.

FLORISTS' OUTING.

The florists' society will hold its annual outing at Coney Island, Wednesday, July 21. There will be the usual outdoor sports, consisting of baseball and athletic contests, as well as bowling and the attractions the park management offers.

CLUB MEETING.

The annual meeting of the florists' society was held at Max Rudolph's place, College Hill, July 12. The successful candidates for the offices of the club were: President, Max Rudolph; vice-president, C. E. Critchell; secretary, Alex Ostendorp; treasurer, J. Chas. Murphy, and director, H. Witherstaetter. The chair appointed a relief committee, consisting of Frank Deller, chairman; J. Chas. Murphy and Ray Murphy, who are to solicit subscriptions to a fund to help the florists whose places were damaged by the recent storm and who need help. The society headed the list with $100 subscription. After the meeting the members present adjourned from the lawn to the dining room, where Mrs. Rudolph had provided a bounteous repast. Mr. Rudolph's greenhouses and growing stock, as well as his hospitality, deserve and received the highest praise.

NOTES.

The storm of July 7 did a great deal of damage to some greenhouses in West Price Hill and at Ft. Thomas, Ky. At Mrs. Chas. Witherstaetter's place five greenhouses are a total loss, while the dwelling house and barn were both badly damaged. Herbert Greensmith lost a greenhouse as well as suffering damages to his house and barn. Arthur Kramer's greenhouses, boiler room and dwelling suffered greatly. At Deller & Witherstaetter's place the power house was turned over and parts of the houses, machinery and sprinkler system ruined. Five of Ed Fries' greenhouses were completely demolished. At Wm. Taylor's the middle one of three greenhouses was blown away and the remaining two completely shattered. Henry Gochel lost two of his greenhouses, while Chas. Pfeiffer's Sons and Lou Pfeiffer's Sons each suffered some loss. All of the above also lost heavily through damage to outdoor crops.

Lou Davis, of P. J. Olinger's goes to Memphis at the end of this week and then to Arkansas on a month's fishing trip.

C. E. Critchell has been having some fine early asters.

Visitors: Mr. Thomas, of Hill's Store at Indianapolis, Ind.; Mrs. Shull, of Roanoke, Va.; Mrs. Gerlach, of Piqua, O.; and Rob. Newcomb, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, Ill.

H.

Providence, R. I.

Business the past week has been quiet, very little doing in any line of the work. All flowers are coming in now faster than they can be handled by the retailer. Sweet peas are very plentiful and outside gladioli are very good and find a ready sale in floral work. The first asters came in last week and were good for so early in the season.

The members of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society will take a sail down the bay to Newport to visit the annual sweet pea show to be held by the Newport Horticultural Society. After visiting the show, the members and their friends will be shown over the grounds of some of the handsome estates in Newport. The Boston Horticultural Society will also go on the same steamer, but they will enjoy a clambake to be held by the society.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, is in New York this week.

HANDS OFF seems to be the rule so far with users of blue grass.

HOLLAND advices of June 30 indicate that the bulbs being taken up are of unusually fine quality.

GREEN BAY, WIS.—The Everett B. Clark Seed Co. has added an automobile to its delivery service.

BELOIT, WIS.—H. S. Clifford has closed out his seed business, which he has conducted here for 28 years.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Farmer Seed & Nursery Co. has closed its branch store in this city for the season.

TIMOTHY as a standing crop looks good. Some well posted dealers are taking the bear side on the new crop seed.

MICHELL'S trial grounds at Cornwells on the Pennsylvania Railroad are beginning to bloom and make a good show.

FIELD CORN, east and west of the Chicago section, is looking very spotted in the fields and is at least two weeks late.

AS A trade mark descriptive of seeds, John Oliver Johnson, Chicago, has registered the words "Winner Brand," Ser. No. 85,237.

DALLAS, TEX.—The Texas Cotton and Cotton Seed Co. has been incorporated by J. W. Carter, T. A. Smith and Y. O. McAdams; capital, $2,000.

CONSULAR reports of June 24 state that vegetation in the Netherlands and England has been greatly damaged by frosts and drought.

OWOSSO, MICH.—The Young-Randolph Seed Co. will erect a two-story brick warehouse on a piece of property it recently acquired in this city.

AMOY, CHINA.—The source of Chinese narcissus bulbs is reported to be plague-infected, hence possible difficulty in exportation this year.

JANESVILLE, WIS.—Otto Kreuger, who has been connected with the Helms Seed Store for five years, has become junior partner in the firm.

CLOVER has been doing well, but it will not stand continued wet. Marshall Durya says the farmers had better begin putting rubbers on it if it rains any more.

VISITED CHICAGO: John B. Davis, Sturgeon Bay, Wis., en route to the Idaho pea district; H. G. Pedrick and wife, Pedricktown, N. J., returning from California.

THE onion set crop at Chicago is beginning to bottom. It will be August 1 before pulling begins. Dry weather from now on is necessary for a satisfactory harvest.

THE war tax of one cent on each letter and post card mailed in Canada and the tax of two cents on each check and bill of exchange has been cheerfully met and everyone is anxious to help in every way possible.

THE German seedsmen, Chas. Bruggemann, of Villefranche, France; M. Herb, of Naples, and Dammann of San Giovanni, Italy, have left their respective countries. The two latter are said to be in Switzerland.

REPAYMENT of seed loans made to Kansas farmers some years ago, for the purpose of buying seeds, is provided for in House bill 884, recently introduced into the Kansas legislature. It is stipulated that interest shall not exceed eight per cent.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade July 14 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.—A. H. Goodwin, of the W. W. Barnard Co., came in from his summer home in Indiana this week and expects to go to Europe this fall.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—F. W. Bolgiano & Co., 1009 B street, N. W., have filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $50,000. Trustees: F. W. Bolgiano, Bessie E. Bolgiano, R. B. Ward, R. T. Moffet, Clair V. Allen, George E. Gude and Cyrus Armiger.

SHENANDOAH, IA.—The past year has been the best in the history of the Henry Field Seed Co., with sales amounting to approximately $313,000 and the number of orders over 105,000. This is an increase of over 26 per cent in number of orders and about 33 per cent in volume of business over the previous year. At the annual meeting July 6, the usual 8 per cent dividend was declared and the present officers and directors were re-elected.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The St. Louis Seed Co. reports business, both in mail order and counter trade, ahead of last year by about 15 per cent, except on seed corn, of which they sold 100 per cent more than in 1914. Counter trade in all lines of garden and flower seeds has been good, due to the excellent weather they have had this year with plenty of rain and a cool May and first part of June. Bedding plants, such as geraniums, cannas, roses and flowers for window boxes have been in good demand, and they are still selling pot plants for window boxes and hanging baskets.

Seed Salesmen Cover Trade in Autos.

Northrup, King & Co., seedsmen, Minneapolis, Minn., as an experiment this year, have supplied their force of traveling salesmen with Ford roadsters, distributing the machines over a wide range of territory so as to form a general opinion as to their adaptability.

The accompanying illustration shows the travelers and their roadsters ready for the start, which was made July 6. They will cover the territory from the Great Lakes to the coast and from Canada to Oklahoma.

Steamship Rates May Advance Still More.

A correspondent of the London Nurseryman and Seedsman, in the issue of June 26, calls attention to the advance of rates by Dutch steamers running between Rotterdam, Amsterdam and England, from 25s. 8d. to 37s. 6d. per ton, on which the editor of the British publication comments as follows:

"I have no other information on the subject beyond the general facts which I have gathered from a friend at Lloyds. He explains that the action of the Dutch companies is by no means singular. Freights all round have risen from 50 to 100 per cent, occasioned by the increased cost of insurance, the difficulties, and consequently the greater cost of navigating the seas, and the pronounced shortage of ships. At the present time the government has by no means worked up to its maximum demands upon the shipping trade of the country, so that there are more ships at present available for commercial purposes than there is likely to be in the future—hence prices are lower now than they may be a few months later."

French Bulb District Notes.

French advices of June 25 indicate but trifling change in prices of bulbs at first hands. The difficulties before mentioned in these columns regarding the lifting, grading, packing and shipping of this stock have apparently been so serious as to have the effect of maintaining those prices which would naturally have declined because of lessened export demand had the labor conditions been normal. Those merchants who expect to deliver to their American customers in good season have closed deals.

Three of four American houses placed their orders early in June at 19 francs for the 13-centimeter and up Paper White Grandiflora and 25 francs for the larger size; 90 francs for the 12 to 15-centimeter Romans and 115 francs for the 13 to 15-centimeter size.

Leon Bremond was made a prisoner August 22, a year ago, and is said to be in Bavaria. Drevon, of Drevon-Tegelaar & Co., is also a prisoner in Bavaria and has been twice wounded. A. Bernard is in military service.

It is expected that the grading of the French bulbs will be according to the usual measurements. This, as is well known, is quite irregular, some growers using a very large proportion of the small size in their 12 to 15-centimeter grade.

The heavy rains have caused narcissus bulbs to split to some extent. While the quality will be good, the average will probably be smaller, from the fact that so many bulbs have burst.

White Roman hyacinths are showing some disease. This is easily detected at the top of the bulbs, but growers do not particularly favor using the knife for this purpose too freely.

French growers are disappointed in the Italian laborers expected to assist in lifting and handling the bulb crop, who have been taken away to the war. Colored French Romans and white Italians are becoming quite scarce.

Convention Echoes.

T. A. Scott of Chisholm, Scott & Co., Cadiz, O., with his wife and daughter, Miss Nellie, were at the convention. Mr. Scott, as is well known, was formerly president of the Canners' Machinery & Supplies Association for two terms and his advice as to selection of convention locations is always given heed to because of his long experience in convention work. When he left his home a month ago, the crop of green peas looked excellent, although the acreage was materially cut down from what it has been for the past three or four years on account of an over-stocked market. Active efforts are now being made to introduce canned peas in Europe, with fair prospects of success.

E. L. Page, of the Page Seed Co., Greene, N. Y., accompanied by Mrs. Page and Miss Russell, also of that city, were entertained by Judge Abbott at his ranch in New Mexico, and had the unique experience of visiting the homes of the cave dwellers in Frijoles Canyon, among other pleasant diversions on their way to San Francisco. Their trip was most enjoyable.

Clover.

OCTOBER CLOVER, JUNE 1 TO AUGUST 31.

We have already pointed out that October clover tends to advance moderately during April and May. The same tendency can be noted for the remaining summer months. June expiration was higher than May expiration in eight of the past ten years, and July expiration also shows a further gain over June expiration in eight of ten years. The advance for the month of June last year was 25 cents. In 1913 it was 30 cents. The largest advance was 77 cents in 1911. In 1908 prices lost 5 cents by the end of the month.

In spite of the general advance during June, the low for the entire June-July-August period is usually made in the bridal month, in fact, six of the past ten years show a "June low." Three years the low spot came in July. One year it was in August. By a curious coincidence the high also came in August that year, which can be readily understood when we recall that it was in 1908, when the enormous crop promise began to be fully realized during the dog days. Prices slumped

A STARTLING NOVELTY
New Early Flowering Giant Pansies

This new strain produces its giant flowers about six weeks earlier than other known types. In the early part of March this year, when the old type Pansies hardly showed any buds, the plants of this new strain bore from three to five of their giant flowers. By special arrangement with the originators we are in position to offer seeds of this splendid novelty in bulk.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

22—KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, and many others. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

26—KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long.

28—MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance.

30—GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous.

32—GIANT PARISIAN—The flowers are of enormous size, and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground. An unusually showy mixture.

NEW SEED NOW READY

All sorts and mixtures, except the new Pansy Princess, are $5.00 per oz.; $1.25 per ¼-oz.; 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c; any 5 pkts, $1.00. Please order by number.

PRINCESS. 20—The New Upright Pansy

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 Seeds 20c; 1000 Seeds 35c; ⅛ oz. $1.00; ¼ oz. $2.00; 1 oz. $7.50.

from $8.95 to $6.00 in August that year.

Without exception the high price for the three-months period is reached in August. This is the critical time of the crop-making season, with just enough actual damage, or enough fear of damage, to put prices up to the highest point.

Last year August expired $1.00 over July expiration, and $2.65 over May expiration. The "high" was made in August in 1913, but good crop prospects later in the month sent quotations down to almost the lowest of the period. In 1912 August was a high-price month throughout.

October has been following a narrow groove the past two months. Nothing unusual for April and May. Will prices follow the course of history and hit the upward trail during the summer months? Prices are not high compared with former years. The crop outlook is generally favorable. Following are details of former years:

Trees and the Public.

The necessity of replanting the desolate spaces left by lumbermen and by forest fires with trees from public nurseries was emphasized by Professor James W. Toumey, director of the Yale School of Forestry, in his lecture at Lake Forest, Ill., July 7, 1915, on "Trees and the Public," before an audience from nearly all of the towns along the North Shore. The economic uselessness of the de-forested spaces which our once extensive forests occupied was shown and also the means of giving them value. He said that no land was absolutely valueless, even though it would grow no crops, for some kind of tree will grow in some kind of land, no matter how poor.

The Black Forest of Germany, and the different state forests of Austria, Thirty states, he declared, already have their own forests, and the movement is rapidly advancing, so that in a few years every state will be ready were cited as examples of what we should do in this country in order to regain some of our woods for the benefit of coming generations. The difference between private and national ownership was brought out by Professor Toumey. He said that it had been conclusively proved, both in this country and abroad, that state forests were infinitely superior to those dependent upon private initiative and capital. Individuals must turn over their capital in a comparatively short time, he said, whereas the government could wait years for their forests to mature and reach the most productive age.

Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

to replant vacant woodlands immediately after they are cut over. Conservation and community ownership, he said, are the only salvation for future generations in this country.

Tree doctors, Professor Toumey claimed, should be avoided, as their operations more often than not, are not only useless, but harmful. Prevention of the bacteria and fungi of decay, he said, is all that can be done to safeguard the life and health of valued trees. The best and easiest way is to clean out the decayed part and then creosote it. Cementing does not strengthen the tree; it only keeps the water out. Some of the tree doctors who are now operating in this country were formerly barbers and bar-keepers, to his personal knowledge, he said. These men scrape, prune and spray trees; cut great unnecessary cavities in the boles, and on top of that, fill them with cement. Their function is not to preserve the trees, of which they have little or no knowledge, but to run up as large bills as possible on their employers.

Street trees, according to Professor Toumey, need special care and attention, for the same treatment given to them as to forest trees would often do them no good. In this connection, he advised the employment of an experienced arboriculturist—a man who knows his business. If people of the North Shore did this, and used the natural trees of the middle west, they might easily possess in time forest and roadside trees that would equal any.

Professor Toumey spoke twice in Lake Forest, once before the Garden Club of Illinois and once before the public. He is on his way to the coast, his stop there being one of many which he will make on his way to the Pacific coast in the interests of forest conservation.

Lilacs.

To most persons the lilac is the shrub with red-purple or with white flowers to which botanists have given the name of Syringa vulgaris. There are, however, many other kinds of lilac, and in addition to Syringa vulgaris and some 150 seedling forms of it there are 20 species and several hybrids in the arboretum collection. The common lilac is said to have reached western Europe from Constantinople; it was cultivated in a garden near London in 1593 and had become known in the United States at least as early as the middle of the eighteenth century. Washington wrote of it in his diary and planted it at Mt. Vernon, where his plants or their descendants still flourish. One of the most popular of garden plants in all cold and temperate countries, the original home of this lilac remained unknown for three centuries after its introduction into England. Some writers believed it to be a native of Persia and others considered central Asia or northern China its home, and it is only a few years ago that it was discovered to be a native of the mountain forests of Bulgaria. Specimens of the wild plant raised at the arboretum from seeds collected in Bulgaria are growing on the left-hand side of the walk going up the hill through the lilac collection and are labeled "Syringa vulgaria, Bulgaria." It is interesting to compare the narrow clusters of small lilac-purple flowers with the large ones of many shades of color which gardeners in the last three centuries have developed from the wild plant. It is evident that no great additional improvement can now be expected from seedlings of the common lilac. The beauty limit appears to have been reached and many of the seedlings raised in recent years and named and sold by nurserymen show no improvement on the older varieties, and all that is best in these plants can really be found in a dozen varieties or less. The arboretum is often asked to furnish a list of the best varieties. This is difficult to do, for what one person may like in the color of a flower another may not care for. The following, however, are good varieties, and a lilac garden confined to these varieties would certainly be more beautiful than one in which the attempt was made to plant together all the varieties that have received names: Charles X (rosy lilac), Philemon, Ludwig Spath and Congo (dark red-purple), Macrostachya and Gloire de Moulins (double white), Marie Legraye (single white), Madame Lemoine and Miss Ellen Willmott (pink), Justi (blue). It must be remembered that the arboretum collection of these plants is intended to show what not to plant as well as to show the most desirable varieties to plant. Next to the common lilac the Persian lilac, Syringa persica, is probably the best known species. It reached England 50 years later and ever since has been a popular garden plant, as it flowers after the common lilac. There are pale rosy purple and white-flowered varieties and one with deeply-divided leaves (var. laciniata). A little more than 100 years ago a hybrid between the common and the Persian lilac appeared in the botanic garden at Rouen. This proved to be one of the handsomest, hardiest and most vigorous of all lilacs, recalling its Persian parent in its small flowers produced, however, in enormous clusters, its slender branches and narrow leaves, while the color of the flowers shows the influence of Syringa vulgaris. Unforunately, under the supposition that this plant had come from China, it was named Syringa chinensis, the name under which it must be known; it is also sometimes called Syringa rothomagensis. There is a variety with pale nearly white flowers (var. alba). A lilac from northern China, S. pubescens, is still too little known in gardens; it is a tall shrub with erect stems, small leaves and broad clusters of pale lilac-colored flowers remarkable for the long tube of the corolla and for their delicate fragrance. For this fragrance, if for no other reason, this lilac should find a place in every northern garden. Another lilac from northern China, S. villosa, is a large vigorous shrub, with pale rose-colored or nearly white flowers which have a distinctly disagreeable odor. The flowers, however, are handsome and abundant, and this plant should be cultivated, for it is the last to bloom of the true lilacs. The crossing of this plant in Paris, a few years ago with the small-flowered Hungarian lilac, S. Josikaea, produced a race of hybrids of extraordinary beauty. The general name for these hybrids is Syringa Henryi, so named in honor of the gardener who produced them. One of this hybrid race, called Lutece, is one of the most beautiful of all garden lilacs, although its Hungarian parent is perhaps the least beautiful of the whole genus and the last species most breeders would have chosen for the production of a new race of garden plants. The beauty of Lutece shows that it is impossible to foretell what hybrids may produce and makes it reasonable to hope that by the use in this way of some of the new species discovered by Wilson in western China new hybrid races may be obtained of distinct value as garden plants. All the new species from western China are growing well and promise to be perfectly hardy. The flowers of none of them, however, are as handsome as some of those of the better known species, although Syringa reflexa is interesting as the only lilac which bears its flowers in drooping clusters. These new Chinese lilacs are planted along the southern end of the grass path which follows the top of the bank occupied by the lilac collection. Lilacs have been flowering in the arboretum now for the last two weeks and will continue to flower until the first of July. Most of the varieties of the common lilac will be in flower when this bulletin reaches its readers living near Boston.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 19. 1915.

Trimming and Shearing Evergreens.

In a talk before the North Shore Horticultural Society at Lake Forest, Ill., January 15, 1915, A. H. Hill, Dundee, Ill., said that the entire system of pruning an evergreen depends very much upon the same principles that govern the trees of other classes, and that many evergreens are spoiled through a mistaken idea of beauty, by having their lower branches cut off, and thus forming a long naked stem, considered very distasteful to the intelligent evergreen planter. An excellent plan to preserve a perfect shape is to extract the centre bud from any shoot that projects beyond the proper limit.

Most of the upright junipers, hemlocks, arbor vitaes and cedars are benefited by an annual pruning, either in early spring or late summer, of the over luxuriant branchlets, thereby causing them to thicken and otherwise vastly improve in appearance. When the leader or main stem of an evergreen becomes destroyed by accident or otherwise, a new one may be readily formed by tying up a side branch in as nearly an upright position as possible. Two leaders should never be allowed to remain. The stronger should be selected and the other cut away as soon as noticed. As a general thing—don't be afraid to trim or prune evergreens—keep the knife on them constantly—proper trimming will keep them to any height desired for years.

Summer Treatment of Greenhouse Soil.

For an interval of six to ten weeks during mid-summer vegetable greenhouses usually stand idle. Indoor tomatoes and cucumbers by the first week in July are usually past their prime and outside vegetables are so abundant that prices received for even the finest greenhouse products are relatively low. The houses are generally cleared at once of all growth, as it is no longer profitable to care for the crop, and at this stage disease and insects are at their worst, necessitating expensive operations if they are to be kept in check.

Unlike most florists, the vegetable greenhouse man does not consider it necessary to renew his soil annually. In large commercial ranges the cost of changing the soil amounts to a considerable sum, and if it can be avoided it means a large saving.

Generally, when the vines have been removed no further attention is given, the common opinion being that the intense heat under glass during July and August, together with the dryness of the soil, will destroy all insect life as well as fungi and bacteria.

This view is open to serious doubt. If vegetation is not completely removed from the house, a few tufts of grass or weeds will support through the summer enough insects to restock in the fall. If the insects are driven or carried outside, with cooler weather and favorable conditions inside, they will some way find their way back. The various organisms of the soil do not seem, in general, to be adversely affected by the summer drying, according to Circular No. 69, issued by the Ohio agricultural experiment station, Wooster. These, when such conditions prevail, quickly go into a resting stage, and in such a state are practically immune to any degree of heat and dryness that can be attained under ordinary greenhouse conditions. Not only this, but on resuming activity, they show a degree of vigor greatly exceeding for a time, that before desiccation.

We too commonly think of the soil as a mass of dead, inert material. The real condition, so far as the top layer is concerned, and it is the upper six inches with which we are mainly interested, is that it is teeming with life, having a fauna and flora of its own, miscrospocic to be sure, but exceeding in activity and numbers the higher forms of life with which we are more familiar.

Greenhouse soil, in particular, because of artificial climatic conditions, which are almost tropical, and because of their origin and treatment, present very complex conditions. That some greenhouse soils are richer in available plant food than the average barn yard manure suggests some of the problems with which we have to deal.

In considering these problems we must keep clearly in mind two points, first the natural requirements of cultivated plants, and second, the soil conditions.

Considering briefly the various angles of the soil problems, we may, for convenience, divide the organisms of the soil into two classes. First the beneficial bacteria and second, the various higher forms which are injurious to the first, together with the various parasitic fungi. The beneficial bacteria are those which increase the fertility of the soil by the production of ammonia, fixation of nitrogen, etc. The injurious organisms are the protozoa, etc., which interfere with the beneficial bacteria and thus are factors in limiting the fertility of the soil. Between these two classes, under normal conditions, there is an equilibrium. Under greenhouse conditions this balance is often disturbed and the cultivated crop seriously affected.

The chemical contents of the soil present conditions of extreme complexity. In greenhouse soils are found conditions in many ways wholly unlike those of outdoor soils, and our knowledge of the latter can hardly be applied, except in a general way. One of the problems, at least, in many greenhouses is to keep the soil in a balanced condition as to fertilizing ingredients, rather than to increase any at the expense of the health of the plants. Greenhouse soils are usually made before placing in the benches and the question of their improvement afterwards is of minor importance.

Plants are sensitive to the physical condition of the soil in the greenhouse as well as out of doors. It is difficult to separate these various problems as they are so closely interlocked. Greenhouse soils are generally made from the soil upon which the houses stand or from that of the immediate neighborhood, so that the type of soil from which they are made must be taken into consideration.

New Rochelle, N. Y.

New Rochelle has an interesting history, which it is not our purpose to here recite. It is enough to state that it was settled by people who had suffered for conscience sake and who not only brought from their native land a love of liberty, but likewise industry and thrift. New Rochelle is now a thriving city, but there yet remains some of the landmarks of its founders. At this season a noteworthy feature is its noble trees and well kept lawns and gardens. Few cities can boast of such a lavish cultivation of pink rambler roses as are here seen. The streets in places are literally bordered with them, and with a background of trees and shrubs they form a beautiful and inspiring picture.

Commercial florists are well represented. The Rose Hill Nurseries, Inc., better known as Siebrecht & Son, have not only a good nursery, but a large glass area. The cultivation of gardenias is now a feature of this range, five houses being planted with about 20,000 plants. Considerable space is devoted to roses, a house of the new rose, Ophelia, being noteworthy. There is also a variety of other stock.

Alexander McConnell's Woodside Nurseries are noteworthy at this season, not only for a magnificent display of rambler and other roses, but for a large variety of other fine nursery stock.

S. J. Mariano & Son call their store "The Orchids." They started in business about a year ago and seem to be prospering.

There are several retail stores. W. S. Hitchcock, Inc., has a good store with a good cut flower and seed business.

The business carried on by Miss Patterson was founded by her father many years ago. A. F. F.

DETROIT, MICH.—Following a dissolution of partnership, the florist business formerly conducted under the firm name of Schroeter-Stahelin Co., will in future be conducted in the name of Hugo Schroeter.

WHAT THE USERS SAY

Cast Iron Boilers Crack

Our large cast iron sectional boiler cracked one section and the header last Sunday. It seemed to turn cold about the same time that the break occured. By Monday night it was 14° below zero. However, by putting up coal stoves, oil stoves, lamps and pushing up the small furnace, we have managed to keep most of our stock in pretty good shape, and our total loss, furnace and all, will be between $500 and $600. Just luck that it was not all gone.

New Kroeschell boiler ordered by telegraph on Sunday, shipped Monday, reached here on Friday, hauled to greenhouse on Saturday and started a fire Sunday; just seven days and ten hours after the accident. When dealing with people who will deliver a boiler as quick as that you cannot give up.

Yours very truly,
MICHLER BROS. CO.,
Lexington, Ky.

Flowers have been quite plentiful. Gladioli are becoming quite abundant and carnations are still keeping up. Sweet peas are in good demand and the out-of-door varieties are very prolific, while dahlias are very fine and larkspur is of splendid quality. The local greenhouses have about finished the planting of their chrysanthemum and rose stock for the winter season. There are some fine Russell roses in the market at present of the long-stemmed variety. The shorter lengths are more abundant, and meet with a good demand and there is a fair demand for American Beauties; also lily of the valley and cattleyas. Some excellent out-of-door hydrangeas are in the market and serve well for decorating purposes.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. are planting their chrysanthemum and young rose stock. A number of houses are being devoted to Shawyer roses this year. Sunburst roses will form the bulk of the yellow roses to be grown for the season of 1915-16.

A large wedding of last week was the Arkenbruck-Nussbaum wedding, which took place at St. Mary's church. Herbert Zurmuhlin had charge of the decorations. The bouquets were shower arrangements of lily of the valleys and Russell roses.

On Tuesday, July 6, when the Liberty bell went through this city, thousands of flowers formed garlands over the streets through which the Liberty bell passed en route to the Panama-Pacific exposition. H. K.

BUSINESS GOOD FOR SEASON.

Warm summer weather has at last arrived and we are enjoying 90 degree temperatures every day. The biggest thing florally this week was a roof garden decoration placed by The Stiles Co. on the roof of the Elks' building. The Elks were giving a house warming with a banquet and dance and, as usual with this organization, no expense was spared. The principal features of the decorations were the screens of asparagus which went entirely around the roof garden, and the immense quantities of Gladioli America, which were used; the local crop, fortunately, was in just right for the occasion. Business in general is quite satisfactory. Outdoor flowers are plentiful and are of better quality than is usual, due no doubt to the ample rainfall we have been having this summer.

TRADE UNUSUALLY GOOD.

The weather during the past week has been exceptionally warm, and in consequence very hard on stock, which has been plentiful with orders unusually good. There are some very fine roses on the market, but they are selling at very low prices. Sweet peas are plentiful and the quality is good. Gladioli are about as fine as have ever been seen on the market, there being more flowers and larger ones. The supply, however, is a trifle heavier than the demand.

NOTES.

At The Rosery, the poinsettias were found in excellent shape and preparations were being made for the shipping of orders. Bedding and window box planting are still going on, and a very good run of funeral work is reported.

The florist club picnic will be held at Holsinger's grove, July 28. Some exceptionally fine prizes are offered and the committee in charge are doing everything in their power to make it a most enjoyable event in every way.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports a first class week's business, considering the time of the year. They have had a heavy run on funeral work, and are well supplied with stock.

Henry Kusick & Co. report business good. They have plenty of good, clean stock, and are receiving some very good carnations and Russell roses. Their gladioli are also very good.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. had an extra heavy supply of stock, but funeral work was good and it moved off nicely.

W. J. Barnes is still kept busy with porch boxes. Funeral work has also been very heavy at this establishment.

T. J. Noll & Co. are receiving some excellent gladioli, one lot of 1,200 arriving during the week.

Arthur Newell has had a very good run on funeral work, and reports business very satisfactory. E. J. B.

Kansas City Florists' Club.

The above organization, composed of florists, nurserymen, seedsmen and gardeners of Kansas City and vicinity will hold its second annual picnic at Holsinger Bros. nursery, Rosedale, Kan., July 28. The first picnic of the club last year was a great success, nearly 200 being in attendance, and this year a larger number are expected. All florist stores will close for the day so that employers and employes alike can attend. A program of contests for the afternoon is being prepared and a liberal prize list will be offered. A number of firms in the trade have given liberally and have asked that they be notified of the date in order that their representative might attend, if in the vicinity of this city at the time.
